When the word of the murder was received at the State Department Secretary Bryan hurried to the White House. After a brief consultation with the President, he admitted that the administration regarded the situation in the Mexican capital as decidedly grave.

Official announcement of the evacuation of Mexico City by General Obregon and his Constitutionalist troops was contained in another despatch to the State Department from the Brazilian minister. The withdrawal of Obregon's force was the signal for rioting, but some semblance of order has been restored, the advices say. The City Council remains at its post, the report declares, and has taken over command of the city.

Mexico City, March 12.—According to advices that have been received here, there appears to exist in the United States considerable mystery and misunderstanding as to the reasons for the return of the Carranza forces under General Obregon to Mexico City about January 20. The facts are that Villa went north after having been in Mexico City, to secure control of the Ebano oil fields and coal fields in Coahuila and Sonora. Zapata was left here and was not strong enough alone to hold the city against the Carranzistas under Obregon, who were stationed nearby. Accordingly when the latter signified their intention of entering the city Zapata and his troops withdrew without any opposition.

MRS. J. D. ROCKEFELLER DIED THIS MORNING

Husband and Son Were on a Pleasure Trip to Florida—Was 75 Years Old.

New York, March 12.—Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, wife of the oil magnate, died unexpectedly this morning at the Rockefeller estate in the Pocantico Hills. She was seventy-five years old. Although she had been ill for several months, her condition has been such of late that Mr. Rockefeller and his son went to Florida a short time ago. They started for home this morning on a special train from Jacksonville, and it is expected that they will reach the Pennsylvania station in New York city within thirty hours.

Mrs. Rockefeller's maiden name was Laura Celestia Spelman, her home having been in Cleveland. The couple were married on September 8, 1864, and have two children, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, wife of Harold F. McCormick, a son of the inventor of the reaping machine and one of the officers of the International Harvester Company.

WOULD BOYCOTT WARRING NATIONS

Miss Janet Richards Believes This Would Quickly Result in Peace.

TIME TO CALL A HALT

Sinking of American Ship William P. Frye is Recalled—Speaker Thinks Germany Will Pay for the Cargo—Recent Happenings in Congress.

"Will our government hold Germany to a strict accountability for the sinking of the American ship, the William P. Frye," asked Miss Janet Richards in her ninth talk on Current Events in the Hartridge School, yesterday afternoon. "Undoubtedly Germany will pay for the cargo, as no lives were lost," declared Miss Richards, "but upon what ground did she feel justified in sinking goods that were non-contraband. Germany will probably say that she sank the William Frye because of England's declaration to seize all cargos as contraband which were en route for the warring nations. Although there is much protest against naming foodstuffs as contrabands, still, each nation has an arbitrary list of its own.

"There is a serious question now that arises. The Prinz Eitel Friedrich left the Shantung Peninsula, China, before the Japanese began bombarding the coast. Since then she has traversed the Pacific, using supplies of captured ships, but now having run out of foodstuffs, and being in need of repairs, she internes in Newport News with 350 passengers. Will she remain interned until end of the war or go out and destroy other vessels again? The United States could compel her to remain there un-

DELINQUENT TAXES AMOUNT TO $3,119.84

Two-thirds More Than North Plainfield Township Apportionment.

At the monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Township Committee, yesterday afternoon, action was taken regarding the enforcement of the ordinance requiring the removal of trees and small growth from alongside the highways. H. O. Hance, the township counsel, was instructed to obtain the exact wording of the State law on the subject.

The wood road running back of the farms of Rev. Dr. C. A. Eaton and J. W. Gavett was officially named "Woodside road." An official name will be chosen at the next meeting for the road leading from the Warrenville road up the mountain. The traffic light at the Watchung road junction is to be replaced with an electric lamp.

Evening session of the committee will begin with the session on May 13 so that taxpayers may attend. There was a long discussion relative to Dr. C. E. Moldenke's proposition to make the township financial report clearer and more intelligible. On January 1, 1915, the amount of the delinquent tax for 1914 was $3,119.84, or more than two-thirds of the township apportionment. Health Officer Theodore Luerssen reported the health conditions of the township to be perfect. The committee will meet again on April 8 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Mobus will find out the present cost to install a new system along the main street of the borough.

ACCUSED MINISTER RELEASED ON BAIL

Rev. Walter G. Jones Declares He is Innocent of Charges Preferred.

Stoutly maintaining that he is innocent and the victim of a "frame-up," the Rev. Walter G. Jones, of the North Baptist church, Jersey City, was released from the custody of the police of that place at 2 o'clock yesterday morning when the $2,500 bail bond was signed by Charles Pape, superintendent of the auditing department of the Adams Express Company. The clergyman is charged with a serious offense by Miss Laura Shrope, the seventeen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Shrope, of Railroad avenue, South Plainfield, who was formerly employed in his household as a companion for his wife and six-year-old child.

Rev. J. J. Allen, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church, who, according to Mr. Shrope, recommended his daughter to the Jones household, told a Daily Press reporter yesterday that his family had known Jones for a number of years. He said that Mr. Jones was always respected by his parishioners. Mr. Jones served on the committee of ministers which succeeded in getting the baseball evangelist, "Billy" Sunday, to try and save Jersey City from going to the bow-wows. He is thirty-two years old and both he and his wife are members of prominent Philadelphia families. They were married eight years ago. The accused minister has declined to discuss the case other than to say that it is a "trumped-up" charge. He declared that he and his wife are on the most cordial of terms.

$5,000 DONATION FOR NETHERWOOD CHURCH

Mrs. Ralph Voorhees Gives Building Fund Substantial Boost.

The Netherwood Reformed church has just received another generous donation to its building fund, Mrs. Ralph Voorhees, of Clinton, contributing $5,000 toward the erection of the new edifice. This makes the total fund at present $10,000. It is estimated that the new building will cost about $12,000.

It is proposed to provide bowling alleys, billiard room and a large hall for coal purposes in the new building. The plans have been made and passed upon by the officers of the church, and it is expected that work will be started early this spring.

Rev. Edward S. Ralston, the pastor, is much pleased with the success of efforts made to secure the required amount of money for the new edifice, and believes that when it is completed it will be the means of carrying on the religious work in the East End on a more extensive scale and with better results.

BURGLARS VISITED LOCAL HOUSE AND AUTO GARAGE

Two petty robberies were reported to the police last night, one being committed in a garage owned by Dr. Yood, at West Fourth street and Grant avenue, and the other in the flat of Edward Baker, at 304 West Front street.

According to Dr. Yood thieves enterede the garage and took three auto tires. Mr. Baker reports that while his family was away from home between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon someone entered his flat by means of a key, and, after ransacking the place, got away with $4.

REPORT SINKING OF SUBMARINE

British Trawler Adds Another to List of Destroyed German Vessels.

GERMANS CLAIM GAINS

Say That They Have Overcome Russians at Many Points and Taken Thousands of Prisoners—Residents Advised to Leave Smyrna.

London, March 12.—The sinking of another German submarine was reported to the Admiralty today by the owners of the Trawler Alex. Chastise. They telegraphed from North Shields that the submarine was fouled by the ropes of the trawler in the North Sea and foundered in twenty minutes, with all on board.

Paris, March 12.—At least 5,000 men were lost by the Germans when they were defeated at Neuve Chappelle by the British Wednesday, according to a despatch received today from St. Moer.

Berlin, March 12, (By wireless.—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Western Theatre—Two of the enemy's warships, accompanied by several torpedo boats, fired more than 70 shots at the West End Baths yesterday, without doing any damage. When the German batteries began to reply the squadron retreated.

"The English troops who occupied Neuve Cappelle last night advanced several times toward the East but were repulsed. Minor attacks by the English yesterday north of Neuve Cappelle were also repulsed. Fighting in this district still continues.

"In Champagne the situation is generally quiet. In the Vosges there is a heavy snowstorm and only minor operations are going on.

"Eastern Theatre—North of Augustowo Forest, the beaten Russians avoided complete defeat by hastily retreating in the direction of Grodno. More than 4,000 Russians were taken prisoners. Among these were the commanders of two regiments. Three guns and ten machine guns were also taken.

"In the district of Augustowo when the Russians began their retreat toward Grodno. Northwest of Catholeka attacking Germans captured three officers and 220 men. North and northwest of Przasnyz the German attacks have made progress. More than 3,200 Russians were taken prisoners yesterday."

The following comment from the German general staff upon the general Russian, announcement was made public together with the report on military operations:

"A Russian official bulletin announced two great victories, one at Grodno and one at Przasnyz. In each battle the Russians pretended to have beaten or annihilated two German army corps. If the chief commander of the Russian army really believed this, the events of the last few days will have rectified his opinion about the fighting power of the German army. The Russian attacking movement before Grodno and throughout Augustowo Forest soon failed. At Przaskyz the German troops, after giving way for a short time, are again four kilometres north of the town. Since giving up Przaskyz the Germans have taken 11,460 Russian prisoners on the battlefield between the Vistuala and the Urzyc."

The French war statement issued this afternoon says:

New York, March 12.—The Old Dominion Steamship Princess Anne, which left Norfolk last night, has on board 120 French refugees and 20 Russians who were on the German cruiser Eitel Friederich. The Princess Anne will arrive here at 3:30 this afternoon.

DUNELLEN FIREMEN SLIGHTLY "RATTLED"

Smoke-eaters Returned to Headquarters Leaving Fire Still Raging.

"It takes the Dunellen Fire Department longer to go four blocks than it takes the Plainfield department to go four miles," said G. Sumner Smith, of Dunellen, after the last spark of a grass fire had been put out in a field adjoining his home yesterday afternoon. The next time I am so unfortunate as to have a fire I will telephone to the Plainfield department and then write the local department a letter."

A patch of dried grass in the rear of Christopher Russ' home, on Grove street, caught fire and threatened Mr. Smith's barn. Realizing the dangerous situation of the flames, Mr. Smith notified fire headquarters, and, pending the arrival of the department, a corps of volunteers busied themselves extinguishing the blaze.

After what seemed an unusual long time for a fire apparatus to be drawn four blocks, the volunteers began to get worried, and anxious eyes were turned in the direction of the thoroughfare up which the engine would have to come. Spying it in the dim distance, Mr. Smith sent his wife to the road to signal the fire laddies to stop. She waved her arms and apron in a frantic fashion, but the apparently much wrought-up smoke-eaters heeded her not. Passing Mrs. Smith at a runaway clip, they proceeded to a house several doors from the Smith residence. A small cloud of smoke issuing from the chimney caught the nostrils of Driver Snyder, and, needless to say, he brought his steeds to a stop.

It was learned that a piece of harness had broken en route to the scene of the fire, and the delay necessitated in patching it up had caused the firemen a little anxiety. When they remounted their engine they were determined to get to the place as quickly as possible, and went so fast that they didn't notice Mrs. Smith in the road.

After finding that the smoke came only from a chimney, the firemen retraced their steps to fire headquarters, little knowing that a grass fire was lurking in the immediate vicinity. When Mr. Smith learned of this he became indignant and declared:

"Thirty-six feet of my fence burned after those fellows returned to headquarters, and I have a good mind to start suit against the borough."

A total of 100 feet of fence was destroyed before the volunteers put out the flames.

Mrs. Mary K. Baird and Mrs. Charles K. Tucker, of Lee, Mass., are spending a few weeks in the borough, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Frederick, of Dunellen avenue.

Goldson Smalley, Constable C. Wesley Blaine, S. R. Strickland enjoyed an automobile trip yesterday with Gustav Winter, in his Packard touring car, to Amboy, where they visited friends.

GENTLENESS FROM A BUSINESS STANDPOINT.

The New York Telephone Review publishes this month an extremely interesting account of the reception by the public of an advertisement of the New York Telephone Company, entitled "Gentleness—An Opportunity", which appeared recently in the Metropolitan papers. The character of George Washington is taken as an illustration of the truth that gentleness is not incompatible with strength, and a number of anecdotes are cited vividly proving this truth.

A leader of men in battle and in government, a stern judge and a strong friend, a successful planter and a courtly gentleman, was George Washington. He combined the extremes of a dominating personality and the gentleness of a child.

Gentleness, therefore, is becoming in the great as well as in the meek and lowly. There is nothing effeminate about it, but it graces its possessor in every walk of life.

Into the warp and woof of Americanism is woven gentleness, and though the generations which have succeeded Washington may have paid more attention to the making of the greatest nation in the world than to emphasizing the outward signs of thoughtfulness and consideration, there has nevertheless been applied to business the principles of good deportment which characterize the home life of the people and of which gentleness is one of the cardinal laws. It was but natural, therefore, that there should have been a spontaneous response to the Company's advertisement on "Gentleness." It struck a tender chord.

Editorial comment and private letters have been received from many newspapers in regard to the advertisement, and interesting extracts of these are given in the article.

A letter was received from Margaret Deland, one of the foremost American authors of to-day, in which she says: "For a great corporation to strike, in the midst of our sordid, hurried life, a note of courtesy and kindness and consideration, is something for which we owe you our thanks. I know that I am only one of thousands of persons who are grateful to you for showing us that business is capable of idealism." And from another letter: "When a large corporation inserts such an advertisement in a newspaper as I lately read in the newspapers, headed 'Gentleness, An Opportunity,' and begs us to be a little kinder in our daily round, it gives us hope that greater justice and mercy are at hand."

That an advertisement can be used as the theme of a sermon speaks louder than words for its influence, not in the business world alone, but in the whole realm of human relationships. Dr. W. P. Merrill, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church, New York, preached his sermon of January 14 on this advertisement of the New York Telephone Company. Dr. Merrill said in part:

"I have sometimes wished I could get the telephone girls to give me their impressions of the families in this congregation. Facts might be revealed which never would come to light in the ordinary relations between people and their minister.

"How many of us, I wonder, would be willing to have our Christian character judged by so simple and frequent a test as our use of the telephone? * * *

"It is a little thing; but suppose tomorrow every Christian in this city should play the Christian thoroughly and gladly every time he speaks into a transmitter, revealing in voice and manner the Christ-qualities of kindness, courtesy, gentleness, and good cheer; would not the life of this city be brightened considerably? It is the Christian's business to make the life about him run smoothly through a plentiful supply of the oil of joy and gentleness."

HEARD AT THE PUBLIC TELEPHONE.

In the current issue of The New York Telephone Review, an amusing incident is recounted by a young messenger boy connected with a public telephone in Brooklyn. Occurring so near Manhattan, the incident can hardly be regarded as a commentary upon the use of the public telephone, but its humor is none the less diverting.

"A gentleman, seemingly very intelligent, was trying to connect with a friend in New York. After depositing the five-cent piece and giving the operator his number, the gentleman was told to deposit ten cents, and the nickel was returned. He heard the money fall and thought it was on the floor. Not finding it, he called out to the messenger boy, 'Hey, son, you had better tell your boss that his slot machine is leaking.'"

EXHIBIT AND SALE GIVEN BY Y. W. C. A.

More Than Two Hundred People Patronize Affair at Association Rooms.

A successful sale was held in connection with the wardrobe exhibit, in the Y. W. C. A. parlors all day yesterday. More than two hundred people visited the association during the day to inspect the work of the girls. The wardrobe is a model one for a business girl and was made to fill their needs during a summer and winter. The cost of the outfit was put at $75.

Twenty-one articles of the wardrobe were made by the girls in the association while the other articles such as shoes, stockings, etc., were purchased. The receipts from the sale amounted to $26.50 which more than covered the output of the girls, their total expense being $10. The wardrobe will shortly be sent to the National Board headquarters in New York to compete with the other wardrobes which will be sent to Panama.

During the afternoon and evening the cake and fancy tables were generously patronized. Mrs. William C. O'Donnell poured tea and she was assisted by an able corps of girls in serving. Miss Ethel Colton, with her committee, had charge of the fancy articles. Miss Katherine Aller and Miss Myrtle Fedderman, acted as hostesses.

Tomorrow night the association basketball girls will go by automobile to Newark, where they will lineup against the Newark Normal School maidens. The trip will start at 6:00 o'clock from the association. Miss Isabelle Scarborough will chaperone the party.

PAID $28 FOR BICYCLE, LOST IT IN TEN MINUTES

After paying $28 for a new bicycle, W. L. Perrine, an insurance agent, took it on a "maiden voyage" from Thorn's bicycle shop in Park avenue to the telephone building at Depot Park yesterday, where he deposited it in the doorway while making a call.

When Perrine returned he found his wheel missing and he became considerably agitated. Patrolman Jack Fritts was called and he found the bicycle in a nook at one side. The supposition of the police is that it was the work of a practical joker.

ANCIENT WRITING.

The History of Man Began When an Alphabet Was Devised.

Perhaps the most valuable invention after the making of languages was that of writing, says a writer in "Student's Investigations." Picture writing was the first used by primitive men, such as was and still is used by the Indian tribes of the new world. The characters in this system of writing were pictures of objects very crude in art, as for instance the picture of the eye, to indicate the organ of sight, and then again symbols for ideas were drawn, such as a picture of an arc representing the sky and wavy lines beneath, thus indicating rain. This system of representing ideas and objects, which is the most natural to man, is known as ideographic, and the signs are called ideograms.

When the picture writer used symbols to represent the sounds of the human voice—that is, words and not objects or ideas—he took a great step in perfecting the system of writing. When symbols are used to represent words the ideogram becomes a phonogram, and the writing is called phonetic or sound writing. The Babylonians and Assyrians used characters to represent syllables instead of words, thus reducing the number of signs used in their writing to a few hundred. When characters or symbols are used to represent syllables they are called syllabic phonograms, and a collection of such signs is called a syllabary.

But still this system was clumsy, and a final step was taken in the making of an alphabet, the symbols being used to represent elementary sounds of the human voice instead of syllables. The symbols then became true letters, a collection of which is called the alphabet, the writing alphabet. When and where the first alphabet was made is not known, but several Semitic tribes were in possession of an alphabet as early as the ninth century B. C. It may truthfully be said that the history of man begins here, for without an alphabet records, dates, names and events could not have been recorded and preserved for us.

MINIATURE TREES.

Simple Plan by Which Plants May Be Dwarfed in the Growing.

For many centuries the Japanese have closely guarded the secret of growing miniature trees. Indeed, until recently they did not allow the trees to be taken out of the country; wealthy people keep them as art treasures. Now, in America, dwarf trees bring a good price and are used as house plants and table decorations. By following the plan here described almost any one can raise diminutive trees with little trouble.

Get a few large, thick skinned oranges and halve them. Remove the pulp and cover the outside of the skins with thick shellac. That will keep the skins from shriveling. Fill the skins with fine, rich soil, and plant therein a seed of whatever tree you wish to raise—or rather two or three seeds, to insure at least one good specimen.

Make a stand of some kind so that the growing tree can be kept in an upright position and set the plants where they will get plenty of sun, but do not keep them in a room that is likely to become overheated. Water them regularly, but not too profusely. After a time the roots will begin to come through the orange peel. When that happens cut the roots off flush with the outer surface of the orange peel, but be careful not to injure the film of shellac.

It is the cutting of the roots that stunts the plants. When the tree has reached maturity you can transfer it to a more attractive holder. Conifers such as cedars, pines and cryptomerias can be readily stunted; so also can other evergreens, as ilex and Citrus trifoliata. Some dwarf cedars have been known to live more than 500 years. Fruit trees, such as the orange and plum, blossom and bear perfect fruit.—Youth's Companion.

Granite and Water.

A coat made of granite, while perhaps not the most comfortable article of wearing apparel—although granite in thin sheets is flexible—might be thought to be storm proof, yet granite will absorb a considerable amount of moisture. If a cubic yard of granite that had been completely dried out were immersed in pure water it would, according to the United States geological survey after a short time take up four gallons of water.

MAN REFUSED ALMS, BREAKS CHURCH WINDOWS

An unknown man, who had been refused alms when he applied to a family living near St. Joseph's church, in Manning avenue, yesterday afternoon, became angered, and to get revenge broke two windows in the edifice.

It was noticed that the man's ire was aroused when he left the premises of the party who refused to lend him financial aid, and he was seen to go immediately in the direction of the Catholic church. When he was within striking distance of the church he picked up several stones and hurled them at the window. He escaped before his identity could be learned.

AN OLD JERSEY EDITOR.

(From Camden Post Telegram.)

Albert L. Force was one of the many old fashioned editors who started as a printer's boy. His apprenticeship in his native town was supplemented by work in New York, but he returned to Plainfield and made himself well known throughout the State. A complimentary letter from Grover Cleveland attests the influence he exerts in his party, and his active support benefitted many a local charity.

Force believed in his town and in his State. He worked for local interests in the by-gone period when New York and Philadelphia journals rarely mentioned New Jersey except to point some threadbare joke about mosquitoes; when only too many Jersey communities dozen along unmindful of their capacities. Within his newspaper life the growth of the seashore towns, the improved freight and passenger service, the coming of the country and the free rural deliveries brought about a new state of affairs. The Camden of his first business days was content to be a way station on the road to the sea, he may have visited our great shipyard he must have heard our talking machines.

So passes another veteran scribe and with him in all likelihood a store of facts about the printing offices, the stores, the workshops, the advertising methods, the railroads, the banks and the farms of Lincoln's time. Much that was familiar to him would be to a first voter of today almost as remote as if it were in a collection of colonial letters.

PROPHET AND PROFIT.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the Fire Department, has a reputation of other things aside from being a good fireman. The current issue of the Fire Engineer tells the following about him:

"T. O. Doane, of Plainfield, has always figured as a big asset to his country and his community, but as a prophet he has yet to win honor abroad or in his own country. He has, however, cast the die. He is on record now and must abide the result. Hear him prophesy:—'My boy whenever you see the snow stick to the bark of the trees as this first snow of the season does, you may know beyond a doubt that big crops of fruits will ripen for you under next summer's suns.'

He's committed now in a role most dangerous. Next summer we'll all either poke unlimited fun at him or we'll lay away his wisdom in our memories and robbing him of his mantle, become prophets ourselves.

Plainfield friends of the Chief will await with interest to see whether he is as good a prognosticator as he is a fireman.

Bayonne voted in favor of Commission Government on Tuesday, after two attempts which resulted in failure. It is the twenty-fifth community in New Jersey to adopt the new form, a large number of them being good-sized places, with Jersey City taking the lead. It will only be a matter of a decade before every municipality in the State of more than five thousand population will be ruled by a commission.

Company K wants an armory and should have it, but with the State's finances in their present condition, and a State tax staring us in the face, it doesn't look as if the money for a building will be forthcoming this year. 'Twas ever thus. The best separate company in the State is deprived of a needed home because the politicians want armories in little towns where it will help them politically.

Have you sent your dollar to keep two Belgian babies alive for a month, and go half way toward providing for a third? If you haven't, it is your duty to humanity to send along a contribution. If you can't send a dollar send a half or a quarter, or even a nickel. The latter will nearly pay for a can of milk.

The Audubon Society wants a law passed providing that cats must be licensed in New Jersey. The society thinks that it will keep them from killing birds if they are licensed. Probably the bill would get more enthusiastic support if it was one that would keep them from howling at night.

"Billy" Sunday has tackled some pretty hopeless cases and succeeded in reforming them, but we fear that he will meet his Waterloo when he gets after the New Jersey Legislature next Monday. Reform does not seem popular there.

Dr. Fred Aungst, supervising principal of the North Plainfield public schools, will be the contributing editor for tomorrow.

The ground hog appears to have known his business this year. The backbone of winter seems to be broken.

RESUME OF RELIEF WORK

by Miss Skillman. He, too, emphasized the difficulty of handling the man who is unwilling to do his duty even when the opportunity is provided.

Mayor Calkins then spoke on the relation of the commission's work to the city. He said in part, that in talking with representatives of other suburban communities, he had come to believe that under the leadership of Mr. Wherry, the unusual situation had been much better handled in Plainfield than elsewhere.

Many places have simply raised large sums of money and given it indiscriminately as charity. This method will almost surely result in similar demands in winters to come when no such great emergency exists.

Plainfield has profited as a city because a great deal of work has been done by the commission, which would have been put off or not done if the city had had to provide for it in the poor department, laborers paid for by the commission, cleaned two acres of land on the City Poor Farm and made it ready for cultivation, thus increasing very considerably the permanent earning capacity of the poor farm.

On the streets the city has received 720 days' labor without any cost to it. This labor has been distributed in various ways and most of the work done would not have been attempted by the city at its own expense. In the police department, relief employment has reduced loafing and drinking and misdemeanor by keeping these men off the streets. The number of arrests has been unusually low.

The police station has been providing sleeping accommodations for 325 men a month as compared with 30 a month in normal times. All of these men, however, were transients, simply traveling through the city, and care was taken that they were kept on the move. Mr. Calkins closed by congratulating the commission on its work and Mr. Wherry on his efficient leadership.

Mr. Loizeaux reported that the work on the Woodbrook Farm had been practically completed and spoke with much appreciation of the generosity of the Messrs. Tyler, in offering this tract for development. He had made considerable effort to find other similar opportunities for work without success. This Woodbrook development has practically supported itself, so that the commission has provided about 500 days' work without expending any of its contributed funds.

A. J. Gavett said that the various sewer projects were soon to start, weather permitting, and that each would employ from 30 to 50 men.

Mr. Wherry, reporting for the survey committee, estimated the requirements for March at $1,000. He also said that probably most of the capable men would have permanent positions by the latter part of this month on various public works about to be started.

A. M. Harris, for the finance committee, reported total receipts of about $4,300, of which $3,200 was from contributions and the balance from labor and the sale of wood and other products. The balance on hand for March is $1,014.33, provided all available funds are collected. Mr. Harris called attention to the fact that the original estimate of the survey committee last fall set $4,000 as the amount needed for this work and the actual expenditures had come surprisingly close to their estimate. All money raised from individuals had been secured by general appeal. There had been no personal solicitation whatever, so that every dollar was the voluntary gift of the subscriber.

It was moved and carried that the commission entirely cease its activities as of March 31.

It was also moved and carried that a committee be appointed to arrange for a final public meeting to be held about the middle of April, at which some well known public speaker will discuss the problem of unemployment in this country, and the final reports of the commission's various committees will be rendered, so that the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield may be thoroughly informed as to what has been done. This committee consists of Mr. Wherry, A. B. Jones and Mr. Haws.

BOYCOTT WARRING NATIONS

til the war was ended but complications would probably arise. Our Government can, however, send her out with no reinforcements. That is no cargo or arms.

"The time has come for the neutral nations to declare themselves and force the belligerents to stop. Let the thirty-four neutral nations assemble in a conference and tell the ten warring countries, 'You must stop, let us settle your differences we will treat you all fairly. If you will not do so we will boycott you close all your ports, your wireless exchanges, will not allow letters to reach you and close all cables.' Such a boycott could not be withstood a week and peace would soon result. Persia and Finland received their constitutions and rights by boycotting their rulers and it can be done on a larger scale successfully also."

Miss Richards expressed the above sentiments on this subject at a Women's Peace Meeting in Philadelphia last week, at which two of the nation's foremost people were present, Jane Addams and Rabbi Wise, of New York. The latter said we could not feel neutral toward a warring nation but Miss Addams warmly advocated the idea and promised to see President Wilson on March 17 to bring about national peace.

Miss Richards gave a review of the 63rd Congress which had its death knell last Thursday and the legislative measures passed during the session which was an unusually long one. The Clayton bill, one of the measures passed, specifies that men who break the law will be sent to jail, whereas before the corporation would pay the fine and the disregard of the law would go on just the same. The best legislation passed, however, was the appropriation of $35,000,000 to build government railways in Alaska. Miss Richards told of the beauties of that northern country and the untold wealth that lies in the country we bought from Russia in 1877 for $7,200,000. During the warm summer months, the grain raised there amounts to three times the purchase price of the country. The Seaman's bill is another measure which passed the 63rd Congress and through this measure the efforts to improve the conditions, accommodation and treatment of seamen were accomplished. The forbidding of the sale of morphine, cocaine and kindred drugs, is the result of eight years of propaganda to do something for morality and since March 1, no person can buy a drug without a prescription.

Turkey and Mexico were also briefly touched on in Miss Richards' talk. She said, "the days of the Turk are numbered and if we live ten years hence and go to Constantinople we will see that city a Christian one."

"THE FORTUNE HUNTER" TO BE FEATURE AT ASTOR OPENING

The U. S. Astor Theatre, on West Front street, will be reopened tomorrow under the management of the U. S. Theatre Company, of New Jersey, owners of one of the largest circuits of motion picture theatres in this State, which makes it possible for them to present the best and most elaborate pictures now produced.

The feature film for the opening tomorrow will be William Elliott in "The Fortune Hunter," which is considered a masterpiece of photography and acting. It is in six parts. There will be other attractive pictures.

DEAN M'CLENAHAN TO TELL OF WORK DONE FOR BELGIUM

Dean McClenahan, who has just returned from Belgium, having been sent by Princeton University to investigate conditions there, will deliver an address in Alexander Hall at the college town tomorrow night, in which he will describe his experiences abroad. Another speaker at the same meeting will be Captain J. F. Lucey, who had charge of the American Relief Commission's work in Belgium.

George Megrew, of this city, and Charles A. Munger have been named as the members of the New Jersey State Committee of the Commission for Relief in Belgium, and Mr. Megrew is devoting much time to the work and its organization. The following have agreed to act as members of the advisory committee of the New Jersey Committee: President John Grier Hibben, of Princeton University, former Senator Everett Colby, Frederick Frelinghuysen, former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, Hamilton Wright Mabie, President of Senate Walter E. Edge, F. W. Ayer, former Senator Oliver H. Brown, Henry C. Moore, Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, Mrs. Garret A. Hobart and Mrs. H. DELEGATES CHOSEN TO NATIONAL BODY

Congregationalists Conclude An Interesting All-Day Session.

Four delegates from the New Jersey Congregational Association were elected to the National Council, which will be held in New Haven, Conn., on October 20, 1914, at the afternoon meeting of the semi-annual meeting of the Northern New Jersey Congregational Association's meeting held in the Congregational church of this city yesterday. Rev. Charles Goodrich, of this city, was one of the delegates selected, and the other three were: Rev. T. Aird Moffatt, of Newark; R. S. Mattox, of Montclair, and M. L. Stimpson, of Westfield.

The afternoon session was equally as interesting as the morning session, and was opened by devotional services, led by Rev. William Doige. After a short business meeting Rev. Dr. H. F. Jackson, of Upper Montclair, spoke on the topic of "New Chivalry." Rev. S. L. Loomis, Dr. D., of Westfield, read the church building societies' protest against the plan of consolidation of the seven benevolent organizations of the denomination. The meeting was one of the most successful ever held. The local delegates were A. C. LaBoyteaux, L. B. Morgan and Mrs. J. P. Dunning.

SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED FOR DUTCH ARMS BANQUET

The sixth annual banquet of the Dutch Arms, men's organization of Trinity Reformed church, to be held Thursday evening, March 18, will be the most pretentious affair yet given by the men. The committee in charge today announced that the speakers would be former State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, who is also president of the New Jersey Board of Agriculture, and Rev. George P. Dougherty, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, Newark. Edgar F. Sheppard will be the toastmaster. Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, chaplain of the State Senate, will give the invocation.

Two hundred tickets were issued for the affair and these have all been disposed of. A feature of the dinner will be music furnished by the Dutch Arms Band of the church.

The Daily Press will be glad to have its attention called to any misleading or untrue statement if such should appear at any time in an advertisement in its columns.

Readers are requested to assist in protecting themselves and legitimate advertisers.

The Way to Solve a Public Problem

To check waste and inefficiency and at the same time preserve, indeed to extend to even greater degree, the public control of railroads—such is the purpose of a bill now before your legislature.

By petition, action of boards of trade and in countless letters you people of New Jersey are emphatically demanding that the huge waste of money forced upon the railroads by the Full Crew Law be instantly stopped. You want that money spent for better and safer service.

But you do not want to relinquish your supervision of railroads, nor do the railroads ask it. The object of this new bill is to so amend existing statutes as to put proper supervision in proper hands.

The Public Utility Commissioners are the appointed guardians of the rights and welfare of the public, the trainmen and the railroads. This bill gives the Commissioners power to require any railroad to employ the number of men necessary to operate passenger and freight trains with safety.

For those who are weary of the needless burdens put upon the public by the Full Crew Law and who are yet anxious that no power of just supervision slips from the people's hands, here is the effective solution.

Write to your Representatives at Trenton urging passage of the bill which will give the Public Utilities Commissioners fullest control of those public servants, the railroads of your State.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

—A day wasted in your classified advertising campaign for work is a real loss.

WE do not take this space to tell you how cheaply we print. We do not want that kind of printing.

The kind of printing we do, however, cannot be bought for less, anywhere.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

ROSY OUTLOOK FOR P. H. S. BASEBALLERS

Plenty of Material on Deck to Fill in Vacancies in the Squad.

The prospects for a winning baseball team this year at Plainfield High School are very bright. Coach Patch has had the pitchers and catchers practising in the gymnasium for the past week. So far Arthur Brick and Anthony Denny have shown the most class as pitchers. Brick was a regular last year and will probably be the mainstay of the team this season. Denny performed very well on the junior class team last year. Victorson has also reported for the pitching staff. Although Victorson did no pitching for the school team, he showed up very creditably in several class games. Captain "Benny" Rosenson can also be relied on to do a little hurling if the other pitchers should get in bad straits. Three catchers have reported to the first call and these are Kyle, Apgar and Peacock.

Apgar was the regular catcher for the school team last year. Peacock caught for the school team two years ago, but owing to the fact that he managed the minstrel show during the first part of last baseball season he was unable to report for practice at the first part of the season and played most of the year in the field.

All of last year's infield will be on hand this year with the exception of Hetfield at third base. Victorson will probably be shifted to third base from the initial sack, as this is his regular position, and there are two other very promising first basemen in sight, Herbert Peacock and Aaron Hirsch.

Second base will probably be covered by Arthur O'Leary, who held down this bag last year. Captain Rosenson will be on deck to stop the fast ones at shortstop. Victorson will be given a hard rub for the position at third base by Sheldon Coudray, who substituted at this position last year. If Coudray fails to secure a berth on the infield he will be shifted to the outfield as he is handy with the bat. Two new infielders are needed this year as Van Deventer and Butler are both out of school.

Kyle played in the outfield last year. The rest will probably be made up of Canter, Cottrell, Dunham and those who fail to secure positions in the infield. Manager Stelle has arranged a schedule of about twenty-five games with the best high schools around here.

THERE'LL BE A HOT TIME.

The bowling match between the Elizabeth and Newark teams of the Senior Elks' League which is to be rolled in this city next Friday night, is bound to be a close and exciting one and supporters of both teams are going to invade the Watchung avenue alleys and cheer to the last breath for their pinners to win. The winning team will be awarded fourth place in the Elks' League standing. Newark rooters have already chartered a special car to make the trip in and Elizabeth will be well represented.

Swimming News and Notes

Written for the Daily Press by LOUIS P. HANSEN.

The new swimming pool at Rutgers College, given by Mrs. R. M. Ballentyne, was dedicated Wednesday with a series of races, including one metropolitan junior championship contest.

The new pool is 75 feet in length and 26 feet in width, and the interior decorations of the building are handsome. The crowd that attended the opening was so big that standing room was hard to find when the contests started.

The team of the New York A. C. won the 300-yard relay race, the time for the full distance being 2:37 1-5, a new record, the former figures being 2:42.

The team was composed of Walter Ramme, Hal Vollmer, Nick Nerich, Harry O'Sullivan, Dick Bennett and Jim Reilly. Ramme swam his 50-yard relay in the fastest time, 25 1-5 seconds.

Arthur McAleenan, Jr., the Yale star, won the handicap diving competition from the low springboard, with 107.5 points, from scratch; Albert E. Downes, N. Y. A. C. (3 points), was second, with 100.3 points, and S. Spongberg, N. Y. A. C., was third, with 90.9 points.

H. C. O'Sullivan, of the N. Y. A. C., won the 100-yard metropolitan championship race, his time for the distance being 1 minute 2 2-5 seconds. O'Sullivan just managed to beat out T. H. Cann, a club mate, who splashed across the line two-fifths of a second later. J. J. Curran, also of the N. Y. A. C., was third.

J. C. Wheatley swam an exhibition race against the 500-metre record, held by himself, but failed to better his old figures, his time for the distance being 7 minutes 5 2-5 seconds, five seconds behind the record.

Charles R. Munn, of the Prudential Insurance A. A., won the 50-yard handicap race, in 30 seconds, from the five second mark, with Walter Ramme second, from the one second mark, and J. H. Reilly third. The first four men finished only a yard apart in this race.

Pennsylvania defeated Princeton in the dual swimming meet held in the Brokaw tank at Princeton on Wednesday night by a score of 33 to 20. The Princeton water polo team, however, clinched its claim for the title in defeating the Quakers by a score of 40 to 15.

Captain Shryock scored twelve of the visitors' points on a clean first in the 100-yard dash, a tie for first with Delacy, of Princeton, in the 50-yard dash and a second place in the 220-yard swim.

The 50-yard dash was a thriller, for Delacy held his own with the Quaker captain from start to finish and slapped the end of the tank at exactly the same instant.

C. G. Lehmann smashed the tank record in the plunge by covering 74 feet before being called up. A close water polo game was expected, but the Red and Blue men were unable to even slow up Nourse, the Tiger centre, who scored seven goals himself.

The University of California swimming team will probably make a trip to Los Angeles and San Diego next month to participate in two dual meets. The Los Angeles Athletic Club and the San Diego Rowing and Swimming teams both want to meet the varsity team.

Owing to the unsatisfactory result of the 50-yard race last Saturday between Miss Dorothy Becker, of San Francisco, and Miss Ruth Stacker, of Honolulu, which was swam in Honolulu and which was awarded to the former, owing to the unintentional fouling of Miss Stacker, it was decided to re-swim the race at a date to be chosen later. The time for the race was 35 1-5 seconds.

The Delphi Social and Athletic Club will hold the first of a series of swimming parties in the Pittsburg natatorium Tuesday evening, March 16. Added features will be high and fancy diving. Some novelties have been arranged but they are being kept a secret as the committee in charge intends to surprise the merrymakers. The swimming will start at 9 o'clock and continue for two hours.

The American Life Saving Society, New York branch, has joined the Metropolitan A. A. U., appointed a committee on water sports, and hereafter will hold many swimming meets and distance events. The first affair to be run off is a set of events for the championships of the association. Most of the star swimmers of New York are members of the organization.

The City of New York recently advertised for men to serve as instructors of swimming in the municipal baths and nearly 400 applications have since been received. It looks from this as if knowledge of natation has spread quite rapidly in the past few years. Certainly, in the recent past, men and women qualified to teach swimming were as scarce as white crows.

The Brookline G. A. A., of Boston, has been granted the 220-yard National A. A. U. swimming championship, provided the date set by the authorities is satisfactory, and there is reason to believe the Easterners will so make it. This means that Leo Handy, the schoolboy wonder, will have a chance to meet at his best distance the very pick of America's furlong swimmers. It will be interesting to watch the outcome. Handy's friends feel confident that he has the needed speed to shatter the national record, but that lack of rivalry has prevented his showing it. With a few opponents like Hebner, McGillivray, Wheatley and Vollmer, his ability will be thoroughly tested.

HERE'S A SCHOOL AFTER N. P. H. S. TEAM'S SCALP

The following communication was received this morning:

Sporting Editor:

It has been brought to my attention that in your issue of March 10, 1915, you published a review of the basketball season of North Plainfield High School.

Among the N. P. H. S. victories recorded is one against the Morristown H. S., score of which was 40 to 23 in favor of Plainfield. In regards to this I, as manager of the Morristown High School basketball team, wish to inform you that a mistake has been made somewhere, as the North Plainfield H. S. and Morristown H. S. have never met in any athletic activities. This victory was probably over Morristown Prep School, if a Morristown institution, but not the Morristown High School. A correction of same would be appreciated. As to opening negotiations with N. P. H. S., if that school will offere us a date to meet on the baseball field the coming season, the representatives of M. H. S. will gladly try conclusions with them.

Respectfully,
H. R. LEGGETT,
Manager, Morristown H. S. baseball team.

JOE SHUGRUE, CLEVER BOXER, WILL SOON BE TOTALLY BLIND

That recent reports relative to the improved condition of Joe Shugrue's eyesight have been greatly exaggerated is made evident in the latest development in the case of the Jersey City boxer, who is threatened with total blindness. Pete Fitzgerald, manager of the boxer, gave out a statement yesterday after a visit to Shugrue in a sanitarium, in which he practically substantiated the first reports of the seriousness of the impairment of Shugrue's eyes.

The Jersey City lightweight is confined in a semi-darkened room, and is totally blind in the right eye, while the cataract forming over the left eye is increasing every day. However, Shugrue is still able to discern things with his left eye.

An operation has been decided upon as the only means of saving Shugrue's sight. Manager Fitzgerald yesterday said:

"Specialists treating Joe Shugrue have not detected any improvement in his eyesight and an operation will in all probability be performed very shortly. Joe has taken treatment willingly and he hopes that an operation will take place. Final consultation will be held by the specialists tomorrow to determine the next move. Joe is in fine humor, which shows that his courage is standing by him in his affliction."

ST. JOSEPH'S BEAT COLUMBUS CLUB; LOCAL GIRLS PLAYED NEWARK--SAME OLD STORY

In a double basketball bill staged on the Columbus Club court last night, the St. Josephs' Boys' Club laid claim to the first game for the Catholic championship of the city by trouncing the Columbus Five by a score of 32 to 19, while the Plainfield Girls' Five continued its winning streak by running away from the Newark Public Service girls, the score being 39 to 6, in favor of the home team.

The largest crowd of rooters that has ever visited Columbus Club was in attendance last night and the spectators kept up a din of applause for the respective favorites. The game between the St. Joseph and Columbus Five was a nip and tuck affair in the first half and each play was fought in a stubborn manner. St. Josephs took the floor with every indication for winning, having many "stars" of the basketball limelight in their line-ups. At the blow of the whistle St. Josephs started in with a rush caging the first basket but Columbus Club soon followed with a brace of fouls and a goal, placing the score at 4 to 2 in favor of the locals. St. Josephs followed with several long distance shots by Moulton and McDonough, which placed the score at the end of the first period 14 to 10 in favor of the boroughites.

Coming back on the floor for the second half each quintet was greeted with a din of shouting and at the signal of the whistle the fray began again, each player fighting tooth and nail for the mastery. Each sensational shot was greeted with a roar from the gallery and sidelines. During this session "Al" Brynairski got his eye on the basket and shot 11 fouls beside caging a double decker while Moulton and McDonough each were credited with one beautiful field goal. MacAfee scored the only two field goals during this period for the Columbus Club, while Linke threw four fouls. At the end of the second half the score stood 32 to 19 in favor of the visitors.

In between the boys' game the Plainfield Five and the Public Service girls, of Newark, gave a demonstration of feminine basketball. As usual the undefeated Plainfield Five laid claim to the honors of the evening. The Newarkers revealed their unfamiliarity of the indoor pastime, having played only three games this season. They put up an interesting exhibition, however, and gave the local forwards much trouble by playing boys' rules which the home quintet never plays. The first half was played with lines and the local girls ran completely away from their opponents, the score at the conclusion of the initial period being 23 to 2. The visitors were held to two fouls during this period which were made by Miss Julia MacDevitt. Helen and Ida Hummel did the only scoring for Plainfield, the former caging five field goals and seven from the fifteen foot line while the latter tallied three goals. The second half, which was played with out lines, gave the visitors a wider scope to accomplish something and they were credited with two goals during this period while the Plainfielders numbered six goals and four fouls. The home girls exhibited their usual fine passing, guarding and shooting, although the two forwards had a hard time to "find" the goal at first.

The line-ups for the two games are as follows:

LAST CHANCE FOR Y. M. C. A. QUINTET

Association Players Must Win Tomorrow or Relinquish City Title.

The Y. M. C. A.-P. H. S. championship basketball match heads the list of athletic attractions for tomorrow afternoon and a large crowd of fans is expected to wend its way to the Y. M. C. A. building at 3:45 o'clock when the first whistle will be blown. The game is the second of the city title series for the Ritz cup and both teams are on edge to grab the most number of tallies that spell victory.

Plainfield wants the contest to get the series over with while the association players are not in the least discouraged over the trimming they received in the first game played in the High School gym Washington's Birthday. The teams will line-up in the following order:

P. H. S.	Y. M. C. A.
McNamee	Ricketts
forward
Rosenson	Dunning
forward
Chamberlain	Gavett center
Peacock	Glover, Newkirk
guard
Wheelan	Burner

ANOTHER TITLE AT STAKE.

The second game of the series for the Catholic championship of the city will be played in the T. A. B. Hall on West Fourth street, Monday night. The St. Joseph's boys won the first game by defeating the Columbus Club last night, and the boroughites seem to be the favorites in the running. A cup and seven medals will be given the winners of the series.

HARD ONE FOR P. H. S.

Plainfield High School basketball warriors are due for a hard fight Monday afternoon when they meet the South Side High School five in the local gym. The Newarkers are considered fast and the game will undoubtedly prove interesting.

WILLIE RITCHIE TRIMMED THE ENGLISH CHAMPION

Willie Ritchie, of San Francisco, former world's champion lightweight, outfought and outpointed Freddie Welsh, of England, the present title-holder, in every round of a fast ten-round boxing bout at Madison Square Garden, New York, last night.

Welsh, wearing the championship crown, fought like a man eager to avoid taking any chances of losing his high honors by running into a knockout punch. Ritchie, with nothing to lose and everything to gain, did his nittiest to win back from the man who took away his world's title over in England the championship that used to belong to the American.

Willie declared before the bout that he would try his utmost to win by a knockout and thus take away from Welsh his honors. The American made good in that he did do his best to get over a decisive wallop. Welsh fought carefully and was never in any danger.

The result of the exhibition did not give any line on the respective merits of the boys. Under the conditions of the bout, with only ten rounds to go, it was a foregone conclusion that the champion would play it safe and that the challenger would attempt to go all the way "on the high."

The crowd was plainly not well pleased with Welsh's exhibition. The champion did display some clever footwork and he indicated at times that he possesses a rare amount of boxing skill.

P. H. S. LEADS LIST.

Plainfield High School appears at the top of the list of baseball games of the Central High School team, of Newark. The game will be played in Newark on Friday, April 23. Last year the local nine took the measure of the Newarkers, and the latter are looking for revenge.

P. H. S. PRACTICE.

The Plainfield High School basketball squad practiced in the Y. M. C. A. gym yesterday afternoon, and are now laying low until tomorrow afternoon, when the "big event" will take place.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Because of conflicting dates the management of the two teams due to appear on the Y. M. C. A. court in the second city title combat has decided to pull the engagement ahead from tomorrow night to tomorrow afternoon. Present indications point to a big crowd of basketball lovers and it goes without saying that a juicy morsel of the court pastime will be served up. We have a faint suspicion that the Y. M. C. A. boys are going to make a rubber match necessary for the championship. Plainfield won the initial encounter by a comfortable margin, but it is doubtful if the schoolboys can come back on the Association court.

Hostilities pending in the feminine basketball league will keep the interscholastic basketbal rolling for a week more at the least. Tentative arrangements have been made for the rubber tilt next week and as the time draws nearer for the settlement of the title interest increases. Enthusiasm over the girls' sport appears to be at a fever heat just at this time and it might be well to run off this encounter as soon as possible.

Those who delight in witnessing basketball of the good old slambang walk in and get kicked out variety should take a trip over to the Columbus Club during one of the busy nights at that rendezvous. The style of basketball put on at that place is as thrilling as it is real and the pugilistic tactics brought into play add zest to the struggles. Yea Bo! It's a regular war.

With one set of medals and a silver mug added to their collection the Plainfield High School boys might be expected to have a little mercy on that city title opponent tomorrow. But it is a well known fact that the red and blue warriors are staunch believers in the old maxim "Charity begins at home" and you've got to expect that they will do their best to five up to it. Charity seldom gets very far from the home of a basketball squad.

No one can ever accuse the North Plainfield girls of being professional athletes. After they had put $11.05 into circulation in New York city by dealing that amount out to a metropolitan official the girls had just forty-five cents left out of their share of the proceeds.

PHYSICAL ADVANTAGE WITH KILBANE IN COMING BOUT WITH KID WILLIAMS

Every physical advantage will be with Johnny Kilbane in his coming bout with Kid Williams of Baltimore, the bantam champ. Kilbane is just five inches taller than his rival, has a much longer reach and weighs a pound more. The bout will be a six rounds' affair and will be pulled off in Philadelphia, March 17.

MIKE GIBBONS IS AMBITIOUS

Middleweight Champion Would Mingle With Heavies.

IS HOTFOOT AFTER SMITH.

St. Paul "Ghost" Believes He Can Defeat the "Gunner"—He Wants to Be Called the White Champion From 145 Pounds Up.

Mike Gibbons has become ambitious for championships. Not content with showing James Clabby a few gloves in their recent Milwaukee battle, Michael now sighs for a chance at Gunboat Smith, who is a claimant of the American heavyweight championship. Mike recently received an offer from Jim Johnson, the Madison Square, New York matchmaker, for a bout with the heavyweight slugger in New York. To the amazement of his followers, Mike has decided to accept the nomination if Johnson will give him better terms than those offered recently—25 per cent.

MIKE GIBBONS, MIDDLEWEIGHT CHAMPION

Gibbons believes that if he gets in the ring with Gunboat he will have no difficulty in outpointing the big fellow and, though there would be little chance to put the K. O. on Smith, the St. Paul slugger says he could show him the back of a few gloves. They are about thirty pounds different in weight.

Then, too, there is Packey McFarland. The Chicagoan has been quoted several times of late as saying he is willing to meet Gibbons at 145 at 3 o'clock. This, Mike says, is hard for him to believe because Packey refused those terms several times in the past. However, if McFarland will get into the ring at that weight Gibbons says he will oblige him and willingly. Should Mike clean up both these battles he might be caled the white champion from 145 pounds up.

The best previous mark was 1,381, set by Huntington R. (Tack) Hardwick, the football star.

MURRAY MANAGED SOME BALL CLUB.

Bill Murray, who has managed baseball teams here, there and everywhere in his long connection with the diamond, asserts that a nine which he led in Portsmouth, N. H., was the worst professional club ever assembled.

"We were playing a game one afternoon," said Murray, "and our right fielder and center fielder both dropped the first two chances which came their way. The fifth ball hit in their direction fell safely when they collided and fell down.

"When the men came in to the bench I started to call the captain down. 'Why didn't you shout what man you wanted to take that ball?' I asked.

"'Well,' he said, 'I didn't think you'd care which one muffed it.'"

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mrs. Clara Auchmoody, who conducts a farm near Los Angeles, wears male clothing when at work.

Miss Edith Havemeyer, heiress to over $7,000,000, has set up her own bachelor girl establishment in London.

Although she is 101 years old, Mrs. Abigail F. Miller of Philadelphia says her one ambition is to ride in an aeroplane.

Mrs. Anna Moore of Chicago has just discovered that she is an adopted daughter after fifty-two years' belief that she was the daughter of a Minnesota farmer.

Mlle. Renaudiere has been awarded the Order of Leopold by King Albert of Belgium as a reward for her bravery under fire while serving with the Red Cross ambulance.

Romona Flores is the only female colonel in the Mexican army. The "Joan of Arc," as she is called, has fought forty-seven battles and has been wounded twice. Carranza gave her permission to join his ranks, and she was made colonel and put in command of a battalion of 500 cavalrymen.

Fashion Frills.

No, fashion doth not make fools of all of us—but it makes some of us look like 'em!—Baltimore American.

And the fashion edict that skirts must be eight inches above the ground is given out in Chicago, of all places in the world!—Boston Globe.

The crinoline skirt is coming. Fine news for the manufacturer of dress goods, but sad intelligence to the rest of us.—Portland Oregonian.

The fashion folk say that the "debutante slouch" style is passing, and it may be that the reason for this is that the no slouch type was always more popular among the really bright young men.—Indianapolis News.

LONG HAIR AND LONGEVITY.

A Theory That There May Be Some Relation Between Them.

Did it ever occur to you that there was any relation between a fine, bushy head of white hair and the long life of the owner?

I believe that I can claim without fear of successful refutation that a very large majority of men who have passed the age of eighty years have or had a goodly show of hair on the crown or top of their heads. I by no means claim that this is universal, for it is easy to recall men who lived to even greater age than eighty who were quite bald.

Without any attempt at a chronological list, I jot down a few names that come to mind as I write: John I. Blair, known at his time as New Jersey's richest man, ninety-four; Daniel Drew, New York capitalist and college founder, ninety-one; Hon. William E. Gladstone, English statesman, eighty-nine; Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, New York, founder of the New York Central railroad, eighty-three; Rev. Edward Beecher (brother of Henry Ward), ninety-two; Hon. Peter Cooper, New York philanthropist, ninety-three.

It would be easy also to name quite a number of men who possessed fine heads of hair who reached only middle age, but my purpose is not to be statistical, but rather to possibly start interest in an unusual subject and see what can be deduced therefrom.—Pittsburgh Press.

FIERCE BATTLES OF POLISH BORDERLAND

Region of Masurian Lakes Scene of Gigantic Conflicts.

Ruin and desolation everywhere mark the terrific battlefields of the Polish and East Prussian borderland. The illustration shows a wrecked bridge over the Warte or Warta river on the road from Kalisch to Warsaw. Kalisch is the westernmost city of Russia in Poland and is 130 miles from Warsaw. The bridge was destroyed by the Russians to cover a retreat and was hastily repaired by German pioneers. All about has been the scene of terrific engagements in which the Germans have won some notable victories under the leadership of the redoubtable Von Hindenburg.

This is the region of the Masurian lakes, where the Russian general, Rennenkampff, received a terrific setback during the latter part of last August, when his army by superior strategy on the part of the Germans was driven into the lakes and swamps with a reported loss of 125,000 killed and wounded, while 70,000 prisoners were taken. This was known as the battle of Tannenberg.

In this region, too, the Russians just recently received a second disastrous defeat at the hands of the Germans. This latter fighting has been described as the February campaign in East Prussia and north Poland, and it is regarded as a second Tannenberg. The Russians, composing the Tenth army, were under the command of General Sievers. It is true that this commander, by a skillful use of the railroads at his disposal and by the sacrifice at times of entire battalions in order to bring off a few guns, succeeded in saving a greater part of his artillery, but no fewer than 60,000 of his 150,000 men were counted among the German prisoners, while his killed and wounded in the four days' battle with which these operations were inaugurated and the subsequent running fights are estimated at not fewer than 30,000 men.

The Russians, however, aver that the last German victory at the frontier has been exaggerated and that the Germans failed to force the extreme flanks of the Russian position.

EASY TO WIN TRIP TO CALIFORNIA

Contestants All Have Equal Chance in Press' Tour Contest.

INTEREST INCREASING

One Who Leads Can Take Chaperone and All Her Expenses Paid by the Press—Two Trips Within Reach of All.

Well, candidates, have you secured the manager for your campaign to win a tour to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. If so, you are to be congratulated. If not, be sure to do it today. The trip given is a real "live one," as you will realize later if you neglect to be guided by it.

The contest staff has been doing a lot of thinking and planning and working to make the road to success as smooth as possible for you, and that is the best thing yet figured out—the value—which amounts almost to an absolute necessity—of having some man friend who will assist in your campaign. There are so many persons he will come in contact with daily whom it might prove difficult for you to see. He can mention it to his men friends that he is interested in seeing you win, and just as sure as shot they are going to say, "Sure, Bill," or "Harry,' or "Jim," as his name happens to be, "we will help you."

Now cast another speculative glance at the splendid trip the Press is offering. Remember that no one's chances for winning are a whit better than yours. The contest representatives are primed with answers to all questions, bubbling over with suggestions as to the easiest way to secure the trip, and bursting with information which will be of material assistance to you. Ask all the questions you like; 'phone or write the contest manager. Fire away. Do not be bashful or timid. Ask what you want to know. Under no circumstances should you neglect enrolling your name, for you cannot tell with how much sucucess you will meet until you have tried.

The candidates who are leading are the ones who have organized a regular force to assist them in their campaign, both for the collecting of ballots and the securing of subscriptions.

It is not necessary to write the name and district number on each and every ballot clipped from the Press, where several are to be sent in at one time. Simply tie them in neat packages of a hundred or less, put your name on the top one, with your district number and a slip of paper stating how many there are in a package so that we may verify your count. Do not forget the name and district number. We have received some in the last few days, and there was nothing written on them to indicate for whom they were intended.

The date is plainly printed on each ballot in the paper, and no ballots received at the Press office after the date mentioned on the coupon will be credited. They will be thrown out at once.

The balloting closes again tonight at 8 o'clock for the revised vote standing, which will appear in Monday's Press. Candidates should get all possible votes in the ballot box before the closing hour tonight and make the best showing they can on Monday. Your friends are watching your vote—show them.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday until further notice.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

CHAPTER II.

AT parting Gilbert Blye held June's hand between both his and patted it gently, his black eyes glowing down at her, and he was smiling upon her with that suave smile which she had come to trust.

"Tomorrow night at dinner," he said, lowering his voice the slightest particle as if the remark were addressed in confidence to her, though the others were crowded eagerly round.

There was an instant of hesitation.

"Then aboard the yacht!" exclaimed Tommy Thomas. She was looking at June, her deep red lips parting in a smile. June's cheeks paled. After all,

"Then aboard the yacht!" exclaimed Tommy Thomas.

as Mrs. Villard's companion it was her duty to go on this trip.

"Shall we take Bouncer?" suggested the pleasantly modulated voice of Blye.

"Of course Bouncer shall go!" June declared, and this time the handsome collie, on his feet in an instant, wagged his tail so vigorously that his hind feet slid.

There was instant gratification in the faces surrounding June.

Far away in the night Henri was speeding northward. Every now and then he turned to look back and laugh, where Jens Janssen sat stolidly puffing his pipe, one immense hand constantly on the arm or the knee of Ned Warner.

"Voila!" cried Henri in high glee as the sharp night wind cut past his face.

"Well," grunted Jens in huge content.

June put herself into the hands of the agitated Marie very thoughtfully after the visitors had gone.

"What is the matter, Marie?" June's tone was quite solicitous. She became suddenly aware that Marie had been in such a state of nervous excitement as she had never exhibited before.

"Nothing, Miss Junie; nothing at all! I'm afraid of burglars!"

"Why, Marie, come here!" Marie came slowly over, nervously kneading some knotted pink thing in her hands. "Your eyes are feverish. You must go to bed, Marie. Wait. Bring me my medicine case and a glass of water."

Meekly Marie took what June gave her, but later she dashed down the stairs and streaked across to the garage. Empty!

At that moment Ned Warner, his hands and feet still bound and his mouth still gagged, was being gleefully deposited in a deserted woodcutter's shed in the middle of a vast, bleak grove. Through the trees the moonlight glinted on distant water, and the shadows of the trees lay in fantastic twisted patterns on the hillside.

"What is the matter, Marie?"

* * * * * * *

Dawn. The red glow of the sunrise, filtering through the mist of the morning, stole in at the open door of the Villard garage and found Marie, with her fists folded under her arms and the tip of her frosty nose in her elbow, lonely snoring.

She limped over to the house, plodded up to her room, dressed herself with numb fingers and after half an hour of dull eyed thought scrawled this note, which she laid on June's bed:

"Dear Miss Junie—I am feeling better, thank you. I hope you will excuse me if I take a few hours off. I will be back for lunch. Hoping you are the same, I remain yours affectionately. MARIE."

She tiptoed out and hurried down the hill to the station, where she caught the first commuters' train. Arriving at the city, she sought Officer Dawd and prevailed on him to phone Ned's friends and June's parents that Ned had been kidnaped.

June in a pretty little morning robe was busy among the flowers in Mrs. Villard's boudoir window conservatory and singing softly when she heard a footstep behind her. Turning, she saw Villard towering above her, his hands in the pockets of his lounging robe, and he was grinning.

"Oh!" exclaimed June, startled. "Good morning."

"So this is friend wife's pretty new companion," observed Villard. "Well, friend wife has excellent taste."

June moved away.

"Don't be in a hurry," he chuckled. "We must get acquainted," and, suddenly reaching forward, he put his hand under her chin and turned up her face.

She jerked away, but he closed the door toward which she darted and, gathering her in his long arms, crushed her to him. June's struggles were futile and her shrieks muffled, but one pair of ears heard. There was a crash of glass, the flash of a long, lithe, white and brown body through the room, and then Villard released his hold. Bouncer! He had sunk his teeth into Villard's arms, and now he was a whirlwind of canine fury.

The man turned pale with fear, kicking and striking at the enraged animal.

"Bouncer!"

That cry from June saved Villard's life, for the dog, with a yelp of joy, was springing for his throat as he fell. The man lay back. The dog stood still, motionless. The man's hand moved nervously. The collie moved precisely that same amount. Villard did not twitch a muscle from that time on, except to speak.

"Call off the dog!" he ordered.

"Watch him, Bouncer," said June quietly.

June rose from the chair into which she had limply sunk, but a cold anger had come to replace her weakness. She walked from the room and, going to the house phone in the hall, called to the kitchen.

"Has Mrs. Villard returned?" she inquired of the maid who answered.

"Not yet."

"Do you know where to reach her?"

"Any one down at the cottages will hunt her up and give her your message."

"Ask her to come home immediately, please. Tell her it is quite important."

She walked back to the boudoir and glanced in at the door. The two statues were as she had left them. At the sound of her footstep Bouncer wagged the tip of his tail, but not for one fleeting instant did he remove his fiery eyes from the pale gray eyes of Bert Villard.

Mrs. Villard, hurrying up the stairs within a few moments, found June in the landing alcove, white, shivering as if with cold.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Villard, but I am going at once," she said before the older woman had even a chance to speak.

"Why, child"—Mrs. Villard's face was full of concern, but as she stared at June her brows knotted and a flush crept into her cheeks—"what—what is the matter?" she faltered.

June was already halfway on the stairs. She turned. Mrs. Villard, without a word, followed her. Side by side the two women stood looking at the man and the dog. Mrs. Villard needed no explanation to tell her what had happened. For the first time in her married life she gave way to anger.

"You beast!" she cried, her cheeks scarlet and her eyes flashing. "This is the last! I warned you to leave this girl alone! I hate you! I could see you torn to shreds! Go on, Bouncer!"

The collie crouched at June's feet.

The man rose cautiously.

"You forget!" husked the man. "We have a bargain!"

Mrs. Villard lowered her eyes for a moment.

"It is broken!" she suddenly flared. "You have paid me well, and I have served you well. But we were not to interfere with each other's life. You have interfered with mine. I am through!"

She stripped her hands of her rings and threw them at him. She swept from the room, followed by June and Bouncer. They heard the man telephoning for his racer at a nearby garage, and while Mrs. Villard was still packing her clothing her husband came along the hall. He stopped at the door.

"I don't think you will find that your new line of work will pay you as well as being my wife," the man snarled.

Mrs. Villard sprang to the door and closed it in his face, and Villard laughed mockingly.

"He is a beast!" said Mrs. Villard and sat down as if she wished to say something more. There was the sound of wheels at the door. Mrs. Villard suddenly buried her face in her hands and cried.

THE NEW FRILL-COLLAR, SOFT AND BECOMING.

Very feminine and dainty is this spring costume—a silk frock of dark green, with bodice of green chiffon veiling shadow lace and a shadow lace frilled collar in the new style. With the elbow sleeves are worn very long gloves of embroidered white silk, well wrinkled on the arm. The hat of Panama is in a new shape and is trimmed with green Ottoman ribbon, which matches the underbrim of green straw.

NEW SPORTS CLOTHES.

What the Smart Set Dons For Outdoor Recreation.

With devotees of riding enjoying themselves in the country, clothes for day wear at the smart estates become of the riding type.

This brings into consideration a most attractive display of smart neckwear, sports hats, trim shirts and blouses, the most swagger article in boot styles and a corresponding array of good looking sports suits.

Both corduroys and tweeds have their admirers. It is about six of one and a half dozen of the other in point of preference, so honors are even.

For walking suits corduroys are in high favor.

The costume shown by a leading shop forces this point home rather decidedly, for it is one of the new models designed for spring wear by a most exclusive patron of conservative but sports loving taste.

It is of green cotton corduroy. The coat is made with a smart yoke with the skirt part showing inverted pleats, which are belted in such fashion at the waist line that but a small portion of the belt need hang when the coat is worn unbuttoned.

The skirt is of circular cut, buttoned in front and with pockets set on just below the hips.

Renewing a Rose.

To renew the charms of a shabby artificial rose, trim all the edges of the petals with sharp scissors, and if there are green leaves, trim those as well.

Then straighten bent wires, press the fresh heart of the rose open so that it has a full blown look and place the flower at the left bust of a low evening bodice in some thin material.

New, the corsage rose costs from $2.50 up to anything, but with careful pruning a twenty-five cent bargain may burst upon the eye like nature's own.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. E. A. LEONARD

When Dick came home the next evening the house was so still that he thought Nell must have gone downtown. He was surprised, for, as there were no cars in the village, she would have to walk, and she was so worn out with the settling.

"Dick, Dick," came in a weak voice from the bedroom. He hurried in and found Nell on the bed with a wet cloth over her eyes. "I am sorry, dear, I have such a sick headache you will have to go out to get your dinner. I could not hold my head up any longer."

"You poor little girl! Isn't there anything I can do for you? You have been working too hard. It's a shame!"

"The woman is coming tomorrow, and with her help I shall get things so they will be livable. Now you go out and get a good hot meal," urged Nell.

"Isn't there anything I can do for you before I go? You don't look comfortable." He kissed the bit of cheek visible below the cloth.

"You might help me into bed. It made me so sick to move I didn't even take off my shoes." With Dick's help she was soon lying on the [illegible] pillow with a fresh cloth on her [illegible]. "Now I can go to sleep. I am [illegible] I should have telephoned and told you to stop on the way home if I could have held my head up." She gave a relieved sigh.

"I don't want to leave you alone. I believe I will get myself somethi[illegible] to eat here. I can poach an egg, make some toast and a cup of tea. Can't you drink a cup with me?" suggested Dick cheerfully.

"Oh, you ought to have a [illegible] warm meal. Are you too tired to g[illegible] downtown?" The worried tone [illegible] come again, and the atmosphere [illegible] tension.

"I'll get something here. You [illegible] tell me how and I will bring it [illegible] here to eat with you. I'll put th[illegible] kettle on right away."

"What shall I cook the egg in?" he presently called from the kitche[illegible] "Take one of those shallow stew pans," answered Nell with effort.

"Let me make a slice of toast for you," said Dick, putting his head through the door.

"No, thank you, dear. I couldn't eat a thing. Have the water hot before you drop the egg in, then [illegible] the boiling water over it," she i[illegible]structed.

"How shall I get it in?" he called.

"Break it in a saucer."

"What saucer?"

"Don't take one of the china ones. What?"

"Take any one." Nell was getting sick with the exertion of calling.

"What shall I take it out with?"

"A spoon."

"Where is one?"

"In the [illegible] drawer."

"The egg has all gone to pieces. What shall I do with it?"

No answer. Nell was too weak to cope with the situation.

Dick came to the room. "There's no egg left," he said cheerfully, displaying a new frog [illegible] on the [illegible]

EVE'S PUDDING

If you want a good pudding, mind what you're taught;
Take eggs, six in number, when bought for a groat;
The fruit with which Eve her husband did cozen,
Well pared and well chopped, at least half a dozen;
Six ounces of bread—let Moll eat the crust,
And crumble the rest as fine as the dust;
Six ounces of currants from the stem you must sort,
Lest you break out your teeth and spoil all the sport;
Six ounces of sugar won't make it too sweet;
Some salt and some nutmeg will make it complete.
Three hours let it boil, without any flutter—
But Adam won't like it without wine and butter.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Frickadellas—Use any leftover cold roast beef or roast lamb, four or five good-sized boiled potatoes, one goodsized onion; all put through meat chopper; mix well with one egg, add one-half teaspoon pepper; make into cakes and fry in deep lard or drippings; makes about ten frickadellas.

Creamed Cauliflower—One head cauliflower; break off sprigs about two inches long from top, carefully wash, put in boiling salted water and cook about twenty minutes until tender, the time depending on size of sprigs. Pour over a white sauce of milk thickened with a little flour.

Delicious Baked Caabbage—Boil a firm white cabbage fifteen minutes; change water for more boiling water; when tender drain, set aside until cool; chop fine, add two beaten eggs, tablespoon butter, pepper, salt, three tablespoons rich cream. Stirized sugar; 'tis beautiful.

well together and bake until brown.

Frozen Ambrosia—Whip half pint cream stiff. Add two tablespoons powdered sugar. Whip white of one very fresh egg very stiff, then add yolk to white and whip both stiff. Add whipped egg to whipped cream. Stir thoroughly. Stir in six maraschino cherries cut up in little pieces. Stir in six crushed macaroons. Freeze in five individual portions or one whole bulk. Before serving, whip stiff another half pint of cream. Sweeten with two tablespoons powdered sugar and flavor with vanilla. Ornament each portion of the ambrosia with the whipped cream and a maraschino cherry. This dessert, as the name implies, is "food fit for the gods." It is best when frozen, but is very delicious when not frozen. It is surely a "particular company" dessert.

Chocolate Cookies—One cup sugar, two eggs, one-half cup melted butter, one-half cup milk, one teaspoon soda, two cups flour, one cup raisins and walnuts chopped, three squares melted chocolate. Drop from spoon. Bake in quick oven.

Cucumber Salad—Twelve cucumbers sliced as for table use, six onions, let each vegetable stand in weak salt water over night, then drain. Take one pint cider vinegar, one cup sugar, one teaspoon ground pepper, one teaspoon turmeric; one teaspoon cinnamon and one teaspoon celery seed; mix all together, let come thoroughly to a boil and can. This is neither real sweet nor real sour.

Delicious Cake—Two cups sugar, two tablespoons butter, one cup sweet milk, one teaspoon flavoring, two teaspoons baking powder, three cups flour, beaten whites of three eggs. Divide in three parts; one part white, to second part add two tablespoons cocoa; third part, one-half teaspoon red sugar. Ice with pulver[illegible]

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CROW GALL

The Illness of Clarissa Chicken.

Clarissa Chicken came from school one day and said, "Oh, dear!
I know I must be going to die, I feel so very queer.
My feathers hurt, my throat is sore, I'm really very sick."
Her mother said, "Go right to bed, I'll call the doctor, quick."

She telephoned to Doctor Duck (a quack who lived nearby);
Said she, "Clarissa is so sick, I think she's going to die."
Old Doctor Duck allowed that he would be there right away,
Which comforted good Mrs. Hen a great deal, I must say.

Quite soon he waddled in and sat beside Clarissa's bed;
He felt her pulse, looked at her tongue, and wisely shook his head,
And then he took some pinkish pills from out a whitish box;
Said he, "I find she's suffering from a case of chicken-pox.

"Keep her in bed, and twice a day give her a pinkish pill,
And then tomorrow I will come again and bring my bill."
(Now that was disconcerting, quite, for you can plainly see
A bill of Doctor Duck's is not as small as it might be.)

However, Mrs. Hen replied, "I'll do as you suggest;
Clarissa shall remain in bed; I'm sure that you know best."
But when the doctor went away, Clarissa Chicken said,
"I will not take his nasty pills! I will not stay in bed!

"This very minute I'll get up; I know what I'm about;
How can I stay in when I have already broken out?"
And so in spite of anything that Mrs. Hen could say,
Clarissa Chicken got right up, and went outdoors to play.

What happened next was just as sad as it could well have been;
The truth is this, when she went out, the chicken-pox went in.
I need not tell you more, I know, for you can guess the rest;
She met the fate of children who are sure that they know best.

NET DANCE DRESS.

Frills are of various sizes, but those of moderate width seem most popular.

A dance frock of black satin is illustrated here. The skirt is draped with a series of black net flounces edged with velvet. The long waisted bodice of black velvet is softly wrinkled, with low placed velvet flowers and shoulder straps of large jet beads.

Substitute For Butter.

Olive oil as a substitute for butter is responsible for the delicious flavor of many French and Italian dishes. The American housewife who experiments with oil as a butter substitute in cooking finds that it has many advantages. It does not burn as quickly as butter and therefore does not require so careful watching. It also lends a rich flavor which cannot be secured in any other way.

A day wasted in your classified advertising campaign for work is a real loss.

You'll know what the old adage-makers meant by urging that "time is money" if you delay advertising for a tenant.

Library Notes.

Furnished by the Directors of Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room.

Books on Business.

General books on business are increasing in number and are increasingly used. The business man of one hundred years ago just opened his store or office and waited for trade. A business conducted in such a way would last about a week in an American city of today. Nowadays the business man or woman must study his community, his goods, his employes, his business and general conditions in order to make his business a success and keep his head above water. The easiest and best way to study these things is by means of books. The library has recently added a set of ten volumes of books called "The Business Man's Library," and containing volumes upon the following subjects:

1. Credits and Collections.
2. Correspondence.
3. Cost of Production.
4. Selling.
5. Buying.
6. Organizing a Factory.
7. Advertising.
8. Employer and Employe.
9. Personality in Business
10. Accounting and Office Methods.

Another good book in the library is "Advertising and Selling," by Hollingsworth. To the young man about to choose a vocation and in doubt as to what he has or has not in his character in the way of business assets, O. S. Marden's "Young Man Entering Business" may be of value.

There are many other books in the library on business topics. Look at the card index and choose the one in which you are interested, or ask the attendant at the desk in regard to them.

A valuable asset of the library to a business man or for that matter to any one, is the set of four or five hundred telephone books containing the names of subscribers in as many cities. The man who is in doubt as to the street address of his business acquaintance in Buffalo, can find it here in a few minutes, if his friend has a telephone. These books are on the west side of the reading room near the section devoted to periodicals. They are arranged alphabetically by States.

Of course, the library also has the official railroad guide, containing the time tables of all standard railroads and steamship lines.

Three new books on Central and South America in addition to those mentioned last week, are Shepherd's "Latin America" and two books by A. H. Verrill entitled "Cuba, Past and Present," and "Porto Rico, Past and Present."

Apropos of the interest in the extension of trade with Central and South America, it has been suggested that a coin be made which will pass current in all the republics of North and South America. It has been suggested that the design consist of two heads, typifying the North and South American continents, an inca head representing the earliest government of the hemisphere, and the head of Columbus, as the symbol of the most modern and powerful republic.

America Most Interesting

The stream of American Travelers to the European Continent and the Mediterranean countries, on account of the widespread war now raging, has been diverted toward other points of the World and now our people will direct more of their attention to travel and tours in our own Country and the American Continent, and learn of its glories and splendors.

The great reaches of our Continent extending from Alaska and the Northwest territory clear down to Central America and the Panama Canal are on great wonderland which far surpass anything to be seen in Europe or Asia. Yet we Americans who live so near these great works of nature know nothing of them. The recreation, enjoyment, and invaluable experience that can be gained from them are unknown and unappreciated by us.

Few Americans realize that there is far more to be seen in the Great West than there is in all of Europe. Very few of us know that the Grand Canyon in Arizona far surpasses anything of its kind on earth; that Southern California is without doubt more attractive than the Riviera; that Colorado's Garden of the Gods contains scenery more fascinating and charming than is to be found anywhere else; that the Big Trees of California are the most marvelous and most splendid forests in the world.

THE PLAINFIELD PRESS WILL PAY THE BILLS

THE PLAN

The City of Plainfield and vicinity have been divided into three districts—two in the city and one outside. The selection of the party will be put squarely up to the readers of The Plainfield Daily Press, and their votes will decide the winners. The candidate in each district securing the greatest number of votes will be entitled to this splendid twenty-three days' trip through the most picturesque part of America, and attend the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, and the Exposition at San Diego. Every cent of expense from the time the winners leave the City of Elizabeth until they return will be paid by the Plainfield Daily Press.

First-class travel by special Pullman train, first-class hotel accommodations, automobile, porters' fees, tips, amusements en route—we pay all the bills. A competent tour conductor, representing Thos. Cook & Son, the well known Tourists' Agency, will accompany the party, which will be an exclusive one, and no trouble or expense will be spared to add to the comfort and pleasure of our tourists while enroute.

A CONTEST WITHOUT A LOSER

The management of the Plainfield Daily Press has decided to be most liberal to all candidates who may enroll. In addition to the four splendid trips to be given the district winners, to all the candidates who do not win trips and remain active until the end of the campaign, a commission of 10 per cent. will be paid on new subscriptions and 5 per cent. commission will be paid on old subscriptions, so that everyon ewho may participate will be rewarded according to her merits and the efforts she may put forth.

$25 in Gold will be given the person who is first to nominate the highest vote-getter of the Contest

Five Hundred and Seventy-Six Golden Hours of Luxurious Travel by Special Train. BE ONE OF THE PARTY.

SOMERSET COUNCIL WILL PRESENT A COMEDY SKIT

Members of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., held a rehearsal Wednesday night of their comedy skit to be presented in the council rooms tonight. The members of the cast all took their parts in excellent style and the presentation promises to be an excellent one. It will be followed by a lunch box social. The committee in charge includes W. S. Inglin, Joseph Martin and Bert Snowden.

Following the rehearsal Wednesday members of the cast and other friends called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Inglin, where a surprise party was given for Miss Hazel Stewart. A thoroughly enjoyable evening of music and games was spent.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

When Hal Caine's story of "The Christian" was first produced on the legitimate stage more than a decade ago, it created one of the greatest dramatic sensations of the day. It ran for an entire season in New York, Chicago and othere large cities, and when put on tour for one night stands, packed the theatres from Maine to California. The story of "The Christian" is just as vigorous today as it was when it first thrilled two continenets, and the picture version, as prepared for present theatre-goers, is even more startling than when acted in the flesh and blood. This great film in eight parts is to be presented at the Plainfield Theatre today and tomorrow for a return engagement. When it was shown at this playhouse some months since hundreds were turned away, and the advance sale of seats indicates a repetition of the capacity crowd. Make it a point to visit the Plainfield Theatre on either of the two dates mentioned and verify for yourself the statement of the producers that "The Christian" has no superior in moving picture realism. Popular prices will prevail during this engagement. Plainfield moving picture "fans" are reminded that the Plainfieeld Theatre has the exclusive contract for the first "run" of all Paramount pictures, and the Second street playhouse is the only place where they can be seen while they are popular with the people.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

The theatre-going public of Plainfield and vicinity may look forward with pleasure to the opening tomorrow afternoon of the Astor Theatre on West Front street, under the direction of Frank G. Hall, the well known motion picture magnate, who has added this theatre through lease, to his chain of New Jersey houses. Mr. Hall is president of the United States Theatres Company of New Jersey, and his theatres are not only in this State and in Greater New York, but throughout the entire country as well, for their up-to-date policy and generous management.

The palatial picture theatre, the U. S. Bergen Square, in Jersey City, is about to be erected under his personal direction, and other houses in which his policy is spelling success with all capital letters, are the U. S. Garden Theatre, of Elizabeth, the U. S. Theatre, of Hoboken, and the U. S. Palace Theatre, of Orange.

Mr. Hall will prefix the magic letters "U. S." to the Plainfield house also, opening it tomorrow under the name of the U. S. Astor Theatre. Workmen are rushing now to complete the extensive alterations and to install the modern equipment which is a feature of Mr. Hall's houses, in time for the opening, and when the house is thrown open to the public, it will present an appearance that will go far toward supporting the claim that it will be one of the leading theatres in this section. A new screen is being installed and in addition there will be an electric generator which will provide a direct current for the projecting of the pictures on the screen, a devise which insures a picture of perfect clearness and without any of the objectionable flicker which spoils the film production in the average theatre.

Only the best film plays will be presented at the U. S. Astor, all of the leading Broadway attractions, and the finest productions of the leading companies being promised on their first release regardless of expense. It is this feature, coupled with the low prices charged, that distinguishes the Hall management, many of the most sensational features being presented at his houses while they are still playing at the big New York theatres.

The best of music will make a pleasing addition to the film plays presented, the music being suited always to the mood of the picture. Two performances will be given daily, a matinee and evening performance, and the low prices of ten cents for the former and ten and fifteen cents for the latter, will prevail.

There is no doubt that the Plainfield public will show a prompt and generous appreciation of the managership of the theatre, and it is expected that the box office receipts will be of gratifying proportions from the very start.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminating tissues clog and the result is kidney troubles, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back burts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid. —Adv.

SPORTSMEN AND SOLDIERS HAVE HAD TO REVISE IDEAS ABOUT SPEED OF BULLETS

Both sportsmen and soldiers have had to revise their ideas of the effects of bullets since "high speed" was made possible in the modern rifle.

The sportsman sits puzzled before the animal he has just killed, unable to find a particle of the bullet, and yet finding no wound of exit through which it could have gone and continued its course down the country. Also he is confronted with the astonishing fact that a tiny 22-calibre bullet, if driven fast enough, makes a wound into which he can put his whole hand—and this, too, a deep wound far into the animal's body.

The soldier, on seeing his dead and wounded, charges that the other fellows are using dumdums loaded with dynamite. The old blunt-nose bullets made no such wounds, and here is a bullet still sharper pointed that wrecks the bodies of its victims. It seems impossible that an ordinary sharp-point bullet did it.

And all the mystery arises from the fact that we have tried to reason from a known fact and make it cover something unknown. Analogy and parallel reasoning are apt to be deceptive.

We started after the Civil War with black-powder infantry and sporting rifles, giving their big bullets a velocity exceeding 1,200 feet a second. Such rifles killed off most of the game in North America, including all the buffaloes. Such rifles were used in the Franco-Prussian War. Such rifles made good Indians out of many Sioux, but failed to roll back the hordes that swept over Custer.

In 1893 came the Krag-Jorgensen, a radical departure from anything that the last century had seen. It used metal-jacketed bullets to hold the rifling in the barrel and to prevent their being melted by the heat of the smokeless powder, now used for the first time. The velocity jumped to 2,000 foot seconds—that is, 2,000 feet in one second. A marvel had come in gunnery.

Then up in 1908, or for fifteen years, smokeless powder rifles were our standard. Sportsmen and military men became well acquainted with the effects of the bullets of this class of arm. It was known just what such rifles could do.

Then came the rediscovery of the effects of putting a sharp point like the writing end of a lead pencil on a bullet, and the possibility of making the bullets much lighter without having them fall off in speed like feathers. In turn came high velocity for the first time—and the upset of a lot of ideas.

Logically the little spitzer, or sharp-point bullet, should be even more merciful than the old blunt-nose, small-bore bullet of earlier days. The point was sharper, the hole should be made with less shock to the thing hit.

Then, with such a good strat toward earning a good reputation for itself, that little sharp-pointed mass of lead began to display a devilish disposition. Roosevelt, Stewart Edward White and other noted hunters tried it out on game—and found that it was far more deadly than even the especially designed "dum-dums" or soft-nosed bulets intended for game. That the spitzer was more deadly than the full jacket military blunt-nose bullet of the old type goes without saying, after the reports of the sportsmen. White, for example, hit one hundred and eighty-five head with spitzer bullets on his first trip. Only six animals escaped after being hit—a testimony most striking as to the work of the high-speed bullet.

The bullet seems to be easily deflected in tissue, where the longer, blunt-nose, small-bore bullet slipped straight through, with a small, clean hole, the lighter, poorly balanced spitzer, with the weight in the base, and the point very light, goes to spinning widely on its tail end, like a slowing top, when it gets into tissue. Or else it actually plunges sideways, and always it slashes like a knife. To this is added a mysterious explosive effect—not that it explodes—it does not lose its shape or break up or expand—but it ruptures blood vessels for a considerable distance around its wound, and it delivers a tremendous shock. Animals—and men—go down when hit as if struck by lightning. Hits in part containing fluid, water being incompressible, result explosively, the fluid being violently displaceed, and rupturing in its way.

The tiny .22, using only a seventy-grain bullet, gives us an idea of what happens to fluid within a body, if we try it on cans of water. A five-gallon oil can, filled to the top through the regular spout, and then hit with the bullet, disappears in a cloud of spray. Then it reappears, empty of every drop of water, and with the four tin sides opened out flat like a book. And all this is done by a tiny .22 bullet, traveling at a very high speed.

Another striking proof of the way the spitzer 150-grain Government bullet, issued to troops, tears flesh instead of going through with a small hole, is the fact of the small number of these bullets that went through the game killed by Mr. White. While the old type, blunt-nose long .30 calibre bullet would have gone through in nearly every case—speaking now of the full jacket bullet—yet this still sharper bullet of precisely the same calibre, with higher speed, failed to go through in half the animals hit, and when it did it always emerged with a horrible, slashing wound. This list, now before me from Mr. White's game book, includes 190 heads of the game slain in Africa.

The reason for failing to go through is, of course, that the bullet is diving or tumbling inside, and expending its energy tearing up tissue and breaking bones instead of slipping straight through as the older bullets did unless they were made especially to mushroom, and so lost their penetrative power.

Jack London comments especially on the way the Mexicans, shot at Vera Cruz, were torn up by our service bullets. The case against the high-speed spitzer bullet is clear.

So when we come to European battlefields, with spitzer used for the first time, it is small wonder we hear frantic charges of the use of the dum-dum—bullets made to expand or explode—bandied back and forth when the wounds are seen.

The Germans use a bullet nearly the duplicate of our Springfield, and at still higher velocity—2,900 feet per second. The French use another spitzer, at lower speed. The English use the spitzer. The Austrians use the spitzer. Only the Russians use the old-style round-nose bullet. So wounds that quite apparently come from dum-dum expanding bullets have after all been made by the little savage diving, tumbling, slashing, high-speed, sharp-point bullet.

When deliberately made to expand, the terrific explosive effect, caused by the bullet going to pieces, and each piecee lacerating and tearing like a charge of shot at speed no shot ever attains, made possible the use of tiny bullets that a hunter of ten years ago never would have dreamed of using.

So in either case is the modern bullet most vicious—if of break-up design then because it flies to pieces and acts like a shotgun fired close to an animal—if not of break-up point, then because it refuses to go straight, but slashes and tears its way through the flesh and vitals of whatever object it happens to hit.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

On Monday and Tuesday of next week the World Film Corporation presents the five-part photoplay, "A Daughter of the People," at Proctor's Theatre. In the cast of the photoplay are Laura Sawyer, Robert Broderick and Frederick de Belleville. There are scenes illustrating the eternal conflict between Labor and Capital, the burning of a mill, the contrasts of luxury and poverty, pathos, tragedy, drama, poetry and sentiment sweep through the offering, the main interest of which lies in the story and the manner in which it is worked out.

Arthur Stillman, the rich mill owner, offers one of his girls an affront and is repulsed. But she's worth having. So, when his working people are starving on account of the closure of his mills, and the girl comes to plead for their reopening, Stillman offers to set the people working on condition that Dell Hamilton marries him that night. Dell agrees.

But it is an illegal marriagee, and months afterwards, when she is living a luxurious life, and Arthur Stillman has really learned to love her sincerely, she is made aware of the bitter truth. But when she tries to go back to her own people and her former sweetheart, she is repulsed by all as a bad woman. She is no longer of their kind.

Revulsion has set in. She hates the people she has saved from starvation, and goes back to Stillman, really loving him. A legal marriage rounds off the story.

The girl as presented is refined and beautiful; not a common working girl; and her conduct is perfectly feasible. From squalor, poverty, ugliness, discontent, social loathesomeness she finds herself in a wholly superior environment, and she gradually learns to love the man who is willing to make her an honest woman in such circumstances. Why shouldn't she?

ALUMNI WILL ELECT ITS OFFICERS FOR THE YEAR

Following the public speaking contest in the Plainfield High School Auditorium Saturday night members of the school's Alumni Association will adjourn to the library, where their annual business meeting and election of officers will be held. This business was postponed from the annual reception held last month.

A number of High School students have been enrolled in the eligible list to appear as participants in the public speaking contest, and this event will be started at 8:30 o'clock. The contestants will compete for the awards offered by the Alumni Association.

At the annual meeting the reports for the year will be read and other accumulated business disposed of. The present officers include: President, F. K. Anderson; vice-president, Dr. Sidney R. Titsworth; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. A. I. Codington. William D. Murray is chairman of the executive committee.

Flemington.

Samuel S. Swackhamer, of Plainfield, will make an address at the March meeting of the Baptist Brotherhood next Thursday night.

Deputy County Clerk John M. Hyde is recovering from an illness.

The Board of Freeholders has purchased a plot on the north side of New York avenue, here, as a site for a storage building for road machinery.

Daniel P. Case will soon move from Reaville to this place, having just completed a new dwelling in Maple avenue.

Not a home in this city but has its quota of discarded furniture, rugs, stoves perhaps, a wheelbarrow maybe.

A few cents for a Press want ad and some one who needs the very article that lies rotting in your garret will call and pay you for it.

You are better off—new owner is pleased—and the article itself is contributing to the reduction of the high cost of living.

A Plainfield vs. A New York Account

The advantages to residents of Plainfield and vicinity of maintaining a bank account in The State Trust Company are so numerous that no argument should be necessary to convince those who are now keeping their accounts in New York. Liberal interest rates (3% and 4%), the free collection of out of town checks and New York checking privileges are but a few of the many advantages that such an account affords. On the other hand a New York account means inconvenience in making deposits, charges on out of town checks and in many instances no interest on balances.

We offer our splendid facilities to any one who is willing to overcome habit and profit thereby.

SUCCESS ATTENDS PYTHIAN BANQUET

Notable Gathering at First Annual Affair of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P.

RUNYON TOASTMASTER

Assemblyman Makes Characteristic Address—Supreme Representative P. Frank Shanley the Principal Speaker.

One of the most notable affairs ever held in this city under Pythian auspices took place at The Ritz last night when Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., conducted its first annual banquet. One hundred and twenty-five members of the order occupied seats at the individual tables and the gathering included Grand Lodge officers from various parts of the State and other guests. The banquet was a distinct success from every point of view, reflecting credit on the energy and fraternalism of the Perseverance organization.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon who is a past chancellor in the local lodge, presided as toastmaster, a statement which fully conveys the manner in which the duties of the office were discharged. In addition to an excellent speech which he gave himself, the following speakers were introduced with his inimitable preambles: Supreme Representative P. Frank Shanley, of Jersey City; Grand Vice-Chancellor Charles A. Covert, of Bridgeton; Grand Prelate Charles F. Vogelius, of Irvington; Grand Outer Guard Carl L. Walters of Newark, and Grand Keeper of Records and Seals Elmer E. Margerum, of Trenton. Rev. Dr. Charles E Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, offered an invocation at the beginning of the program. Music throughout the evening was provided by the Dutch Arms orchestra of fifteen pieces.

At the outset of his remarks, Assemblyman Runyon spoke in a reminiscent mood of the many affairs that Perseverance Lodge had given in the past but expressed the belief that none of them drew a more representative body of men together than the one before him. Many of the brothers who have been active in the past have gone to their last resting place but the fraternalism that was exercised in their day is still being continued by the younger element now carrying out the cardinal principles of the order, friendship, charity and benevolence. Fraternalism is desirable at all times, he said and especially at the present when this country is one of the especially favored in being at peace with itself and its neighbors. He paid a special compliment to Chancellor Commander William J. Trembath through whose instrumentality the banquet was brought to a successful issue.

Supreme Representative P. Frank Shanley spoke on "The Dignity of the Order" and reminded the Pythians that they had a duty to perform in commanding the respect of everyone for the great organization of which they are a part. They owe it as a duty to their children, he said, and to do it properly they must place themselves in the proper channels for Pythian uplift. Grand Prelate Charles F. Vogelius told of the Knights of Pythias field day to be held in Asbury Park during the week of July 12 next and urged every member to be present if possible.

The banquet was arranged and conducted by a committee composed of George Kean, chairman, Clarence Rittenhouse, S. Monroe Staats, Frasee Putnam and William J. Trembath. The menu provided by The Ritz was faultless in every respect and both the preparation and service received unstinted approbation.

SECOND COURSE IN NEW TESTAMENT

Rev. Stuart L. Tyson to Give Two Lectures at Grace Church.

The second course in a series of lectures on the Bible will be given at Grace church next week, and as the course is a New Testament study, even larger attendance may be expected than at the lecture on Amos and Hosea. It is the opinion that in these days people seem to be drawing closer in sympathetic feeling to conditions and modes of thought in the Lord's day, so that men understand the New Testament setting much better than they did a generation ago. It will be the purpose of the Rev. Stuart L. Tyson to develop that sympathy with the environment of the Gospel story in two lectures on Monday and Thursday evenings of next week.

The general subject as announced is "The Synoptic Gospels." On Monday evening the lecturer will deal with sources of the Gospel story treating the oral teaching of Jesus, a lost original behind the Gospel story treating the oral teaching of Jesus, a lost original behind the Gospel of St. Mark, the writing and character of St. Mark's Gospel, the purpose of St. Luke's Gospel, and the Palestinian Gospel of St. Matthew. In the second lecture, there follows the Rabbinic background of the New Testament; the rise of the Pharasaic teaching, and the portrature of Christ as presented in the threefold picture of the first Gospels.

Bible students of all denominations are urged to grasp the opportunity of hearing these trained and experienced specialists.

BUDGET IS NOW ABOUT FINISHED

Finance Committee and Board of Education Representative in Conference.

PUBLIC HEARING NEXT

Budget Ordinance Will Not Be Introduced, However, Until School Board Decides on its Appropriations.—Joint Sessions a Success.

Co-operation between the Common Council and the Board of Education, in accordance with a suggestion made by Mayor Leighton Calkins in his inauguration message, has been a conspicuous feature of the drawing of the city budget this year and further discussion between the representatives of the two departments was evident at the councilmanic finance committee's session last night. Councilman Richard Claybrook and Committeemen Juan Babcock, Francis J. Blatz and John H. Cose attended the meeting on behalf of the Council and A. A. Tilney represented the Board of Education.

The meeting was the fourth for the consideration of the budget. All of the various items have been tentatively decided upon and it will take only a short time to complete the few remaining details. The budget will then be advertised and a public hearing will be held.

The budget ordinance, however, will not be introduced to the Council, nor will the appropriations be finally determined until the Board of Estimate decides, at least formally, how much shall be set aside for the maintenance of the schools. The Mayor and Council are awaiting an opportunity to attend meetings of the Board of Education when the expense of that department are to be considered.

Pending the survey, the finance committee has held all of the appropriations down to a minimum this year, but will not finally fix the city budget until assured that the school appropriation is also to be kept down, new departures in the educational line to await the survey recommendations and go over for a year as in the other city departments.

Chairman Claybrook expressed himself as being especially pleased with the support given him this year by the Council committees, in deferring new plans and in estimating appropriatings on a minimum basis.

TWO PERFECT MARKS IN SPELLING CONTEST

Only two perfect marks were recorded in the second test of the five hundred-word spelling contest being held in the North Plainfield High School under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association. Both of these were made by classical pupils, all of the contestants of the commercial department failing at least once. The two perfect marks were credited to Miss Marian Wooley, junior, and Augustus VanDeventer, senior.

Both Miss Wooley and VanDeventer also had all words spelled correctly in the first test given in January and they are now tied for first prize.

THAW ACQUITTED OF CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY

Jury Brought in Verdict at 12:20 Today, After Being Out Eighteen Hours.

New York, Mar. 13.—Harry K. Thaw was today acquitted by a jury of the charge of conspiracy to escape from Matawan Asylum. The verdict was given at 12:20 this noon after the jury had deliberated for eighteen hours. Beside acquitting Thaw, the jury declared that in their opinion he was not insane.

The other defendants in the case were released and walked out of court free men, wearing radiant smiles. There was a vociferous exchange of congratulations between the quartet and their counsel. Michael O'Keefe, one of the five men originally indicated as a conspirator with Thaw was given his liberty several days ago on a motion made by the District Attorney. It was not established that he had any part in the escape.

The jury went out late yesterday afternoon, and were locked up for the night shortly before midnight. Nothing was heard from them until this morning, when they filed into court at 11:35 and asked that the testimony of Thaw be read to them. Orders were given by the Court that the testimony of Thaw be read to them. Orders were given by the court that the testimony be turned over to the men, and then returned for further consultation, as a result of which they gave the verdict within an hour.

CITY GOVERNMENT UP FOR DISCUSSION

West End Civic Association Held Meeting in Washington School Last Night.

Commission government was discussed at a meeting of the West End Civic Association held in the Washington School Auditorium last night, members of the organization commenting on the plausibility of endorsing this form of city government in Plainfield. Addresses favoring such legislation were delivered by Howard H. Williams, G. W. V. Moy and J. J. Carroll.

A communication from Mayor Leighton Calkins, however, caused the organization to postpone the adoption of any stand on the subject. The city executive advocated withholding the decision until after the proposed city survey had been completed.

In short addresses the speakers commented on the good that would be gained by experimenting with the commission plan which has recently been voted favorably upon by citizens in other New Jersey cities and declared that it would prove expedient in Plainfield.

"HALL OF FAME" SCORED BIG HIT

Pupils of North Plainfield High School Appear in An Unique Production.

IT WILL BE REPEATED

Prize Awarded for Best Poster—Committees in Charge—Parts All Well Taken—Another Performance to Be Given Tonight.

The "Hall of Fame," given in Saengerbund Hall last night, by members of the North Plainfield public schools under the direction of the entertainment committee of the Parent-Teacher Association, was one of the best amateur productions ever presented by the schools. Pupils of all ages, from the kindergarten to the seniors in High School, had parts in the play and the cast was composed of 137 persons.

All of the teachers of the various grades deserve much credit for the training, especially of the little tots who danced the minuet and quadrille.

Miss Anne Hull, as to "Goddess of Fame," who called all great characters to the Hall of Fame, took her part to perfection and after her opening speech witnessed the contest for the crown of glory from her throne. Harold Allen, head herald, announced the characters as they entered. The final scene, with every character on the stage with "Uncle Sam," alias Hoyt Tomkinson, in the center of the stage with an American flag, was the grand sight and the Goddess of Liberty in the rear of the stage with a lighed torch added greatly to the scenic effect. Miss Ethel Hall took the part of the Goddess.

Mrs. M. H. Ewart, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, made a short address to the audience, explaining the purpose of the affair. The funds that were raised will go for the prizes offered by the association in the spelling contests being held in the grade classes and High School. The $3 prize offered for the best poster advertising the play was awarded to Miss Viola Hauser, of the senior class.

The members of the entertainment committee were Mrs. E. D. Hutchinosn, chairman; Mrs. L. B. VanCamp, Mrs. E. S. Boyer, Mrs. A. E. LaPorte, Miss Ethel Barnard and Miss Edna French. The ushers were the Misses Emma U. Tantum, head; Rose Nash, Irene Dueschene, Ethel Beers, Nellie Rapalje, Henrietta Englehardt, Essie Hendrickson and Margaret Speidel.

ALFRED NOYES, ENGLISH POET, TO LECTURE HERE

Alfred Noyes, the young English poet, will lecture before the Monday Afternoon Club and its friends, at the High School Auditorium, on Thursday, March 18. One who is familiar with the work of the poet says:

"That it will be an important event in the literary life of our city is easy to imagine. To hear the opinions and ideas of any real poet is a treat and not to be lightly regarded; if in addition the poet is one of the chosen few whom the world has acknowleged great, to hear him becomes an ambition. The poetry of Alfred Noyes comes like a breath of spring to a world that has been over-busy with materialism.

"He is the singer of great moments, never the narrator of sordid happenings that might be taken from the records of a police court. And herein lies his strongest hold on his own age and the future because men treasure what inspires them, and will willingly forget the pessimist, no matter how true his evidence may be."

Bombardment of Dardanelles Again Resumed Yesterday — Turkish Officials Issue Statement Regarding Movement of Allied Fleets

London, March 13 (Central News Cable)—Sir John French reports that further substantial progress was made today in the direction of Aubers by the seventh division of the British army. "The fighting was of the severe character," he says, "as the enemy was strongly reinforced this morning opposite my right, by at least two divisions. We captured 612 prisoners and I hear there are more to come in. Our air craft are very active and the railroad junctions at Don and Douai have been destroyed."

Amsterdam, March 13—The Germans are concentrating strong forces in the front between Ypres and La-Bassee to withstand the British offensive there. A despatch from Dunkirk reports violent but isolated skirmishes in the Arras region, farther to the south. The Germans have posted heavy artillery on the heights north of St. Laurent.

Berlin, March 13 (by wireless)—The following statement was issued at German headquarters today:

"South of Ypres isolated English attacks were easily repulsed. A German attack with the intention of retaking the village of Neuve Chappelle encountered superior forces after making a successful beginning, and therefore was not continued. The English are showing great activity in the district with aviators, one of these was brought down by us. The day before yesterday, and two were brought down yesterday.

"In Champagne there were isolated renewals of fighting. All the partial attacks by the French troops were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. Two hundred French prisoners were taken.

"Fog and snow hampered operations in the Vosges.

"Russians have retreated from the district of Augustowo and northeast of there until they are behind the Bobr River, under the guns of Grodno."

Athens, March 13 (via Paris)—The bombardment of the Dardanelles forts was resumed with vigor yesterday by the Allied fleet. The fort at Dardanus has been entirely destroyed.

Constantinople, March 13—The official Turkish statement reviewing the operations of the Anglo-French and Russian fleet on March 7, 9 and 10 follows:

"On March 7, the Russian fleet bombarded the harbor of Kilimit, Sanguidak, Koslu and Eregli. The Turkish fire in reply was well directed and struck a torpedo boat. The enemy withdrew after their shells had fired 50 old wooden houses. At Eregli, the Russians sank several ships. Seven persons were injured by the bombardment.

"On March 9, three of the enemy's armored cruisers unsuccessfully bombarded our infantry and the fortifications of Fort Sedel Bahr. Mine sweepers of the enemy which attempted to approach the line of mine sunder cover of a mist were driven off by our batteries.

"On the night of March 10 the enemy tried under cover of cruisers and destroyers to clear the outer mine field after larger ships had unsuccessfully bombarded the searchlights installed by us. The fortress sank three mine sweepers. The enemy was forced to withdraw.

"On the night of the tenth a transport of the enemy was sunk off Mitylene."

Paris, March 13—President Raymond Poincare yesterday visited the French front in the Aisne region. He returned to Paris in the evening on a special train.

Norfolk, Va., March 13—Five warships, supposed to be British, are hovering off the Verginia Capes, according to incoming vessels.

While Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees discovered the robbery upon their return from the supper about 9:30 o'clock. Both floors had been thoroughly ransacked.

Among the things the thieves did not trouble themselves to take were articles of cut glass and plated silver.

EDWARD DIX'S CONDITION.

Edward Dix, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dix, of Prospect avenue, is still suffering from the effects of an accident in which he was knocked off of a bicycle into a ditch. TURKEY SUPPER A SUCCESS.

The turkey supper served in the Presbyterian chapel last evening under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the church was a success. One hundred and thirty suppers were served and the candy booth with St. Patrick Day decorations, in charge of Miss Helen Swackhamer and Miss Gertrude Day, was well patronized. This morning it was said that between $60 and $70 had been cleared. Following the supper an attractive musical program was rendered. Those taking part were Miss Helen Swackhamer, Mrs. W. S. Frederick, Charles A. Coriell, Jr., Peter Benson, Neal Newman, C. G. Hunt and Professor Charles A. Kregar, of Plainfield.

John Richards, son of former Mayor and Mrs. C. E. Richards, is ill with pneumonia.

SIXTH ANNUAL BANQUET.

The sixth annual banquet of the young men's Bible class of the Seventh-day Baptist church was held recently in the parlors of the church. About thirty sat down to the table which was attractively decorated. On the menu, among many other good things, were oysters, which were served in all styles. Rev. H. L. Polan, the pastor of the church, spoke during the banquet. The committee in charge was: A. E. Whitford, M. L. Randolph and C. M. Ryno.

After drilling for a number of weeks the Boy Scouts are prepared to give an exhibition of first aid, signalling, tower building and archery when the benefit for the Scouts is held in the lecture room of the Baptist church, on Monday and Tuesday nights. Dr. H. K. Carroll will have charge of the morning and evening services in the Methodist church tomorrow. The Epworth League and Sunday-school will meet as usual.

"Nibs" Hand has recovered from a light attack of pneumonia and is rapidly getting in shape for the start of the baseball season. It is probable that he will be the only local representative in league baseball this year, as Eugene Lidgate, another backstop in the game, has decided not to play steady ball this year, and possibly not even week-end ball. The same talk that was floated around town this time last year, about having a semi-pro team in Scotch Plains to play Saturday games, is going the rounds, but it is not likely, owing to the lack of a field and the same opposition that ended the pastime locally several years ago would probably be encountered again.

William Sisserson will have charge of the meetings of the Adult Bible class and Sunday-school in the Willow Grove chapel tomorrow.

Watchung.

Mebame Ramsey, of Princeton, will have charge of the morning and evening services of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church tomorrow. Sunday-school will be held at 2:45.

The annual meeting for the election of four new trustees will take place in the Watchung School Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

AN ADVENTURE BY TELEPHONE.

A night operator in the telephone exchange in Jersey City recently had all the thrills of a real adventure over the wire, according to a vivid story recounted by the operator herself in The New York Telephone Review. A signal lamp lighted and the operator responded at once, but could get no answer. Suddenly there was a terrible noise on the line as if someone were struggling. The sound of heavy breathing came over the wire, but no response to the insistent ringing of the bell. Then came the distinct sound of someone moving about the room.

Undoubtedly robbery and murder at the very least, had been committed in that house and the operator had been an ear-witness to the struggle. The operator notified the Police Department who promised to send a reserve to the house at once.

But alas for adventure! Half an hour later the subscriber called up to let the operator know that the dog had knocked over the telephone. He had become tied up in the cord and had been unable to extricate himself.

WITH $80,000,000 SISTERS LIVE AMONG THEM LIKE HERMITS

They Are Absolute Mistresses of Second Largest Estate In New York.

No Change Since 1856 In Fifth Avenue House. Only Outings In Yard.

SISTERS WITH MILLIONS LACK LUXURIES OF POOR.

Here are some details about the four Wendel sisters, the mistresses of one of New York's greatest fortunes:

They have never ridden in an auto.

They have never been on a yacht.

They have never attended a theater.

They have not been in a church in twenty years.

They never wear jewelry.

They have never used a telephone.

They have never used an elevator.

They never receive callers nor have they, so far as known, any really close personal friends.

So far as known they have never given money to charity.

IN the heart of Manhattan Island, on Fifth avenue itself, and within three blocks of Forty-second street, live three women who, with their one sister who lives on Central Park West, are absolute mistresses of a fortune variously estimated at from $60,000,000 to $80,000,000. And all are as remote from and alien to the life of the great city around them as they would be on a desert island in the south seas.

These four women are the sisters and the heiresses of John Gottlieb Wendel, who died Dec. 11, 1914, at Santa Monica, Cal., and whose fortune, consisting almost entirely of real estate holdings in New York city, is second only to the Astor estate among landed properties in the United States. The Wendel estate, incidentally, antedates that of the Astors, as the first John Gottlieb Wendel turned from the fur trade to the acquisition of New York real estate several years before the first John Jacob Astor made a similar transition.

John G. Wendel died more than two months ago, but the personalities of the inheritors of this colossal fortune have hitherto remained practically unknown.

One of Four Is Married.

Of the seven members of the last generation in the direct line of the Wendel family but four remain. Of the seven only one, the eldest living daughter, married. She has no children. She is Mrs. Luther A. (Rebecca A. G. Wendel) Swope of 249 Central Park West, where she lives alone with her husband. The exact ages of the four sisters are unknown even to their few intimate friends, but Mrs. Swope is certainly past seventy.

She is the only one of the family who ever ventures abroad among her kind. Accompanied by her husband, who is past eighty, twice a week she leaves their home to make the terrifying "L" journey to the little old fashioned office at 175 Broadway, where all the complicated business affairs of the Wendel estate are transacted.

To the other three sisters, shrinking from the responsibilities of the wealth and position thrust upon them by their brother's death, Mrs. Swope has always seemed the acme of daring and self reliance, and all affairs of business are left by them in her hands.

Mrs. Swope is a slender but square shouldered woman, whose features bear a striking resemblance to those of her brother. She is of medium height and is always dressed in deep black and in the style of thirty odd years ago. Her clothes usually are worn almost to the point of shabbiness. Yet, while she would seem to a modern New Yorker a figure out of a past generation, she is modernity itself compared with her sisters.

House Never Changed.

The other sisters—Mary E. A., Ella E. von E. and Georgiana G. K. Wendel—still cling to the old house on the northwest corner of Thirty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, directly opposite the Union League club. John Wendel incidentally, though a member of this club, did not, so far as known, cross its threshold in twenty years before his death.

The Wendel house is a three story brownstone front, red brick structure. It was built in 1856 and looks every year of its age. Its original cost was about $5,000, and, though it stands on a lot now assessed at a value of $1,897,000, it has never been altered or renovated in the slightest degree.

The library is the only room revealed to visitors, but it is probably typical of all. The floor, like that of the hall, is of colored tiles, with one small rug under the massive mahogany table, of colonial style, in the center of the big room. The bareness of the tiled floor is accentuated by the scantiness and simplicity of the furniture. Four old fashioned and massive high backed chairs surround the table, and a high old secretary with glass doors stands in the corner.

On the paneled walls hang pictures, but every one, like every other picture in the house, is carefully covered with white muslin.

There is neither elevator, dumb waiter, telephone, electric light nor any other modern improvement. And in this house of many rooms live just five women—the three Wendel sisters, the youngest past fifty, and two maids whose age is probably little less.

Each of three younger sisters is almost a replica, on an even quieter and more unobtrusive pattern, of Mrs. Swope. There is in each case the same gray hair, drawn tightly down over the ears; the same dead black clothing, cut in the style of two generations back, and the same family cast of features. But the self reliance of Mrs. Swope's manner is entirely missing.

Unknown to Passing Throng.

In all the years during which the tide of New York life has been flowing tumultuously up and down the avenue beneath the blank windows of the old Wendel house not one of all the millions has got a glimpse of one of the dwellers within. On two sides the old house is encompassed with a little grass grown yard, surrounded in its turn with a high brick wall.

In this yard the three sisters take their only outdoor exercise. At irregular intervals of several days when the weather is fine the three venture forth into this yard, but they never do so until after nightfall, when the big new office building that towers beside their home is empty and its windows are dark and still.

What do they do in all those long days? Nobody really knows. Save for the trusted business associates and employees of John Wendel, not one soul in New York now possesses the privilege of entering his house. Many years ago the Wendel family preserved relations of friendship with a few of the other old Knickerbocker families, such as the Goelets and the Kingslands.

With $60,000,000 to draw upon, the three sisters make their own clothes. These clothes, like Mrs. Swope's, are always black, always severely plain, cut on patterns of thirty or forty years ago, and always worn until shabby. Not one of the four sisters, so far as known, has ever possessed an article of jewelry. The running expenses of this house of millions probably do not exceed $100 a month.

Go to Irvington For Summer.

Up at Irvington is the Wendel country estate. For a score of years the annual migration to and from Irvington has formed the sole occasion of the public appearance of the four sisters. Every spring they, Mr. Swope and the two old servants leave the house at Thirty-ninth street and walk the three blocks up to Forty-second street and two blocks to the Grand Central terminal to take the train for Irvington. Even this brief excursion is matter for anxious preparation and is undertaken in fear and trembling.

The Irvington estate, where the entire family invariably spends the whole summer, is even less known to the public than the town house. The extensive grounds are inclosed by a high wall, with a massive gate.

The permanent staff of the country house consists of one venerable gardener, who, like the other servants, has been in the family for years uncounted, and a man of all work. Though the estate is in the fashionable section of Irvington, not one of the neighbors has ever knowingly seen the sisters' faces.

Sometimes Seen by Strangers.

None the less the life of the sisters at Irvington has in recent years been more open than that in their New York house. The grounds afford opportunity for outdoor exercise without fear of exposure to curious eyes. On one or two occasions neighbors passing the big gates have caught fleeting glimpses of one of the little old women peering forth into the strange world outside.

On still rarer occasions the little family party has been known to venture forth in the little old family carryall, a two seated vehicle of the type popular in the seventies, drawn by a horse which looks almost as ancient.

An Irvington man who for ten years has delivered milk and groceries at the house and has carried vegetables from the kitchen garden to the railway station says he has never seen any of the sisters.

William Diaz has been manager of the Wendel estate nearly all his adult life, yet he has not seen one of the three younger sisters in more than twenty years.

One Family Trouble Revealed.

Just once the internal affairs of this strange family have been brought forth in unhappy form into the light of day. In 1899 Miss Georgiana left the Irvington home and appeared at the Park Avenue hotel. She was removed a few days later to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue hospital. She was taken back to Irvington by her brother, and in October of the following year the family asked that she be adjudged insane. She was declared incompetent by a sheriff's jury, but Justice Mareau released her on the ground that the commitment had been unconstitutional.

Miss Georgiana then sued her brother for $50,000 damages, but a reconciliation was effected.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS WERE ATTACKED BY FOREIGNERS

Putting an entirely different light on the story of trouble which arose between three young men and two Italians on Somerset street on Wednesday afternoon, W. L. Taylor, in a letter to the Press, which is printed herewith fully exonerates the young men from any blame in the affair. None of the facts brought out in Mr. Taylor's letter were made public at the time of the hearing on the case, which was held before Recorder Hand on Thursday morning, but under the circumstances the young men in question undoubtedly did exactly what any other young man would have done under the circumstances. Mr. Taylor's letter is as follows:

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

During a residence of nearly fourteen years in the borough of North Plainfield, a subscriber of The Press for all of this period, I have never sought its columns for an expression of my views or a redress for grievances, real or imaginary.

There are times in the lives of parents, when filial love prompts, and parental duty demands that we go to the assistance of our own when their honor or their interests are assailed. Not to sustain them in wrong-doing, not to palliate offense against society, but to see that they get "a square deal" and if unjustly accused are exonerated from censure; or, if guilty, to be given the consideration that youth entitles them to, and the disciplinary advice that guards against repetition.

A recent event furnishes the occasion to pay the testimonial due, and I hail the opportunity to record a full measure of gratitude to my boys for not having given their parents one moment's uneasiness or worriment about their moral conduct. Whatever their errors or indiscretions have been, dishonesty has not been one of them, and I have known them sufficiently long to accept their version as truth, until broken down by irrefutable evidence, which has never yet been presented.

Wednesday afternoon, March 10, after the basketball game between the girls' teams of Plainfield and North Plainfield a party of six young ladies and three young men from the borough, while passing up Somerset street, met two men and in attempting to pass, one of the High School boys unintentionally jostled one of the strangers and promptly made apologies for it but was immediately assaulted by the larger of the two men, and his companion joined him in the assault upon the boys. It was very evident that the first boy assaulted needed assistance and the other two promptly rendered it and as soon as possible to escape personal injury got away from their antagonists.

Whatever judgment may have been passed on this affair, had the evidence of all the witnesses been taken it is possible that the individual responsibility would not have included the young men whose past conduct has not been indicative of such reckless disregard for the rights of others as your published version, "High School Youths Took Advantage of Foreigners," amplies.

With the high regard for the justice which you have always shown in your columns to the people in the communities which you serve.

W. L. TAYLOR.

A Sunday-school service will be held at the Temple Baptist church at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, when Rev. Evarts C. Conover will preach an appropriate sermon. There will be baptism in the evening.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendation:

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D. No. 1, Plainfield, says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventive of any serious trouble."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wahl had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

America Most Interesting

The stream of American Travelers to the European Continent and the Mediterranean countries, on account of the widespread war now raging, has been diverted toward other points of the World and now our people will direct more of their attention to travel and tours in our own Country and the American Continent, and learn of its glories and splendors.

The great reaches of our Continent extending from Alaska and the Northwest territory clear down to Central America and the Panama Canal are on great wonderland which far surpass anything to be seen in Europe or Asia. Yet we Americans who live so near these great works of nature know nothing of them. The recreation, enjoyment, and invaluable experience that can be gained from them are unknown and unappreciated by us.

Few Americans realize that there is far more to be seen in the Great West than there is in all of Europe. Very few of us know that the Grand Canyon in Arizona far surpasses anything of its kind on earth; that Southern California is without doubt more attractive than the Riviera; that Colorado's Garden of the Gods contains scenery more fascinating and charming than is to be found anywhere else; that the Big Trees of California are the most marvelous and most splendid forests in the world.

You Are Invited

Americans are certain to turn more of their attention from now on to our own magnificent possessions; and in traveling our own Continent we will learn and come to realize that we do not have to go outside of our own country to see the greatest natural wonders of the world.

Come with our our party on a long trip to the coast of the wide blue Pacific and see America's most charming scenery on the way. Everybody will want to see the two Expositions in California this year, and this will be the good fortune of the guests of the Plainfield Press.

RECREATION.

A boy in one of the social settlements of Chicago, when reproved for wrong-doing, remarked, "How can a fellow be good when he ain't got a back-yard." There is wholesome philosophy in the boy's homely phrase. The back-yard idea plays an important part in family life and social progress. The business man seeks rest and recreation in his summer home; the professional man seeks his recreation in hunting, fishing or playing golf. Workers in all walks of life have their back-yards for play and recreation. In fact, life is a succession of intermittent pulsations of activity and rest. This swing of life's pendulum between toil and pleasure, work and relaxation, keeps labor from becoming drudgery and glorifies the purity and sweetness of life. The swing from the golf-club to affairs of state preserves the splendid balance of our Chief Magistrate in dealing with the different problems springing out of international strife. The swing from the axe-handle to state-craft and philosophy made Gladstone a dominant factor in British national life. Briefly, history teems with great workers who had their back-yards of play and recreation.

Plainfield seems to understand the necessity of recreation for old and young. The business men's Y. M. C. A. class, the club houses with their bowling alleys, pool tables, etc., the public swimming pools, the work shops in wood and metal in private homes, the farms owned by business and professional men, are tangible evidence of the same idea. The recent opening of the Plainfield High School for wider recreational and social activities is in the same direction. Limited municipal finances of the borough hinder an extensive working out of a similar plan, but the spirit and intention are not lacking. All these factors count in a healthy, happy and efficient community life.

The one caution-board that must be set up is the danger of spending one's life in the back-yard. The cook, the porter the stable-boy live in our back-yards. Their doors open into the alley and not into the street; yet they too have caught the recreation idea. But the young man who enters High School or College for the purpose of having a good time, or whose highest ambition is to excel in athletics, to the neglect of his studies, lives in his back-yard. The doors of his soul open not upon the alleys of life. The woman whose purpose in life is to be a society belle and win favor by the external graces of dress and artificial acquirement, most certainly stamps herself as a resident by choice of the back-yards of human life. Life, to be worth while, must be on a higher plane than that of pleasure and amusement, which are mere accessories. The back-yard is a better index to one's real condition than the front yard. The pleasures and recreations, cleansed of dross and selfishness, serve as an accessory and aid to a life of thought and achievement, and thus materialize what Longfellow speaks of when he says:

"Make the house where Gods may dwell, Beautiful, entire and clean."

In this way the harmony and equilibrium of all life's forces are preserved, the business and pleasure, the residence on the avenue and the purified and beautified back-yard, are consecrated to the service of God and humanity.

THOUGHTS OF FAIR SPUR CANDIDATES

Four Who Win Free Trips Will Be Those Who Hustle.

THE STANDING MONDAY

Do Not Lose Any Time in Sending Application to Contest Manager Which Will Put You in Line for 23-Day Trip to California.

Think of the sights of a lifetime that the fortunate party of four women will be enabled to witness. One continuous round of pleasure from the very moment of the start of this grand tour until our happy guests return to their homes. Not a dull moment, not a second without pleasure of some kind. Not the smallest amusement will be missed. It will be a case of on the go all the time; and such arrangements have been made in transporting the contest winners from one place of interest to another, that they will suffer no fatigue and will enjoy the panorama constantly being unfolded with all the comfort of travel that money can possibly procure.

When the contest closes and the winners of the four free tours have been announced by the judges, it is the desire of the Press that the candidates, their loyal supporters and the public in general, will feel satisfied that the contest from start to finish has been conducted in a fair and impartial manner.

The contest department and the circulation department are working together to protect the interests of all candidates alike and that one candidate will not have any advantage over another as regards subscription votes on old and new readers is assured everyone.

As fast as subscriptions are received the circulation department verifies each order through newsdealer and subscriber, and in the case where a subscription has been turned in as new and is found old, the candidate is notified and given a chance to prove that the circulation department is in the wrong. If within the time limit allowed a candidate to verify and report on such a subscription she can satisfy the circulation department that the subscriber is a new one, the full number of votes will be allowed, otherwise it will be necessary for the contest department to reduce the vote one-half in order to conduct a contest in fairness to all candidates.

No Bargain Days.

The attention of the public, also candidates, is directed particularly to the contest regulation which specifies that the vote schedule as announced in the prospectus and advertisements, will not be changed during the entire contest. At no time will more or less votes be issued on subscriptions, neither will the coupon appearing daily in the Press be good for more than one vote. The votes as allowed at the start of the contest will be the same at the end and at all time.

In sending in large numbers of vote coupons which are cut from the Press it will not be necessary to write your name and district number on each ballot. Simple tie the coupons in bundles of not more than one hundred and write name and district on the top coupon in each bundle stating the number contained therein. This will save a great deal of time for both the candidate and the contest department. Be sure always to trim the ballots along the border line. Some ballots are coming in in such poor condition that they have to be thrown out. Quite a number of coupons continue to come in to this department with no name or district number on them. It is a shame for all these to be thrown away. Someone is losing votes and cannot understand the reason.

The date is plainly printed on each ballot in the paper and no ballots received at the Press office after the date mentioned on the coupon will be credited. They will be thrown out at once.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday until further notice.

$395 What it Costs to OWN one

SAXON

½ cent per Mile What it Costs to RUN one

THE CAR THAT MAKES BOTH ENDS MEET

THE SAXON HAS REMOVED THE LAST OBJECTION ANYONE EVER HAD TO OWN AN AUTOMOBILE--THE PRICE REASON

New improved body, genuine streamline effect—identical in style with high priced two-passenger cars. Wood or wire wheels. Electric lights and starter, $70. Standard or 60-inch tread.

For the first cost of the Saxon places this sturdy car within reach of everyone. Its price is $395.

And the after cost of the Saxon keeps it within the means of everyone. Owners are amazed at the economy records of their Saxons—28 to 36 miles per gallon of gasoline; 75 to 100 miles per pint of oil; 3,500 to 5,000 miles on a set of tires. Saxons average half a cent a mile in operation cost—one-fourth of a cent per mile per passenger.

And the Saxon stands up. It endures the hardest kind of usage without flinching. Many thousands of Saxons now in use all over the United States, in Canada, and in foreign countries have proved the sterling goodness of Saxon construction.

HOW WE CAN DO IT.

Some folks wonder how we can possibly build for $395 a car that will do the things a Saxon will do. Good design is the answer—knowing how—having the right idea of what a light car should be and do, and then figuring out the best way to get these results at the lowest cost consistent with quality.

Our engineers had at their disposal all that has been learned about automobile building. They started from the beginning to design a light car for economical manufacture and upkeep. They adopted nothing freakish; but they found new ways to use many standard features. They also were first to use some brand-new things of proved efficiency.

For instance, they used, perhaps for the first time in this country, a high-speed motor. A few years ago it would have been impossible to build a motor the size of the Saxon and have it deliver adequate power. Today we know how to do it. Saxon engineers have designed a motor that is at once light, powerful, efficient and very durable.

SAVING 45 PARTS AT A STROKE.

Saxon engineers found a method of spring suspension that makes a light car exceedingly comfortable to ride in and at the same time saves 45 parts. Think of it 45 parts saved by one idea of design. By so doing they not only cut down manufacturing expense, but reduced weight and complications, and entirely eliminated noise.

And still more wonderful—the Saxon type vanadium springs provide the fullest riding comfort. No less than 15 higher priced cars have already adopted this type of springs.

In the Saxon Roadster our engineers use one large steel stamping as motor base, subframe, sod pan and dust apron, saving another two score parts, providing a better construction and reducing expense. Right design, again.

And so on all through the car. By taking thought, we are able to offer for $395 a better automobile than could be bought only a few years ago for five times the price. Saxon is the modern car.

The same thing has happened—though less rapidly—in other industries. You can buy today a better watch, a better locomotive, a better typewriter, a better sewing machine, for less money than you would have paid for an inferior article in the earlier days of those industries. Manufacturers have learned how to build better—at less cost.

SAXON "SIX" $785.

For those who want a touring car, this 5-passenger six-cylinder Saxon is truly an unusual value. It is generously roomy—in no sense a small car. It has 112-inch wheelbase, 32x3½ inch tires, 30-35 horsepower, high-speed motor, electric lights and starter as regular equipment, and many other unexpected features. And the price, too, is unexpected—$785 fully equipped.

The Publishers' Book Sale

Is Still Young

The recent additions to the Sale of Publishers' Overstocks has brought the whole offering practically back to its original desirability.

More publishers have come to us with their overstocks, and most of the publishers whose books we already had in the Sale have turned over to us other books which they had held back.

In this offering there are at least

Several Books You Want

and when you bear in mind that they are all offered at 50 to 80 per cent. below publication prices, they are the very books you will purchase—certainly the cost of them will not be a deterrent.

If you made a selection from among the first lot in this Sale, you know what to expect when we say that the additions make the choosing quite as good if not better.

If you have not been to the Sale of Publishers' Overstocks, you can easily draw your own conclusions from the foregoing.

Illustrated and fine editions History and Biography.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

HAVE YOU BEEN "TAGGED" BY ANY OF THOSE Y. W. C. A. BASKETBALL LASSIES?

If a pretty miss, who looks as though she might be capable of assaulting a basketball, attempts highway robbery at your expense between now and the twenty-seventh day of March do not yell, do not fuss, just "dig down" and withhold your cuss. She's one of these exponents of feminine sport who are going to participate in a basketball match with the Trenton Y. W. C. A. to decide the [illegible] on the Columbus Club court a week from next Saturday night. The Y. W. C. A. athletes, of this city, [illegible] ten of their non-[illegible] friends, have been supplied with admittance passports [illegible] acquaintances, male admirers as a rule, falling easy prey.

Arrangements have been completed for the one big game of the season for Y. W. C. A. athletes and they will try conclusions with an old rival, "Dot Hayes, under the guise of the Trenton Y. W. C. A. basketball squad. Despite the fact that the visiting basketeers travel under the caption of a representative Trenton combination, it is a well-known fact that Miss Hayes makes up about five-sixths of the aggregation and the Plainfielders generally experience their troubles in holding her in submission.

Just as Trenton has its anchor star, Plainfield also possesses one of indisputable merit. She is Miss Helen Hummel, and the concensus of opinion, especially in this part of the State, appears to be decidedly in her favor when any New Jersey individual feminine basketball honors are at stake. Miss Hayes is versatile and can cover considerable territory, but when it comes to bagging double deckers the Plainfield girl is possessed of a deadly aim and when in good form can generally be relied upon to run up enough chalkers to salt away a verdict.

The remainder of the team representing the Queen City, will be made up of such brilliant lights as Miss Ida Hummel, who plays the role of an excellent running mate for her sister in the shooting department, Miss Clara Smith, a guard who can generally impress her duties on the one she is assigned to cover; Miss Ellen Doughty, another active guard, and Miss Marion Mair, who has displayed her ability as a center in previous contests. Trenton will have practically the same line-up as appeared here last year.

WESTFIELD TEASED BY P. H. S. "SUBS"

First Squad Rushed to the Front in Second Half and Cleaned Up.

The Plainfield High School basketball team invaded Westfield, last night, and defeated the basketball team of Westfield High School. The final score was 37 to 25. Coach Patch, in order to save the first team for the game with the Y. M. C. A., this afternoon, played the entire second team against Westfield in the first half. The second team boys played a great game, leading most of the way. Dunham caged all of the points, which consisted of three pretty field goals and two foul goals. The score at the end of the first half was 11 to 8 in favor of Westfield.

The first team took the floor for Plainfield at the beginning of the second half and started in to clean things up. Throughout the season Westfield had won ten games and lost ten. This game was their last of the season. They were unable to hold the Plainfield boys in the second half, however. McNamee started the scoring by caging a goal from the side of the court. Rosenson then gave Plainfield the lead by another field goal. The rest of the game was fast and hard with the Plainfield team holding the upper hand all the way. In the second half Plainfield scored twenty-nine points to Westfield's fourteen.

SOME GOOD SCORES IN PARK CLUB EVENT

"Dud" Strong Pulled Down the Three Points for Best Tally.

Several good scores were registered in the weekly handicap ten-pin play at the Park Club last night. Strong's net count was 537 and with a handicap of 5 he was able to take first honors.

Butler was awarded two points and C. D. Boice made one, their gross scores being 552 and 535 respectively. Daniels was placed at scratch and made a score of 532, just missing a point by three pins. Eddie Dugan to Receive Large Sum For Piloting Belmont Horses

AUGUST BELMONT, chairman of the Jockey club, will race a string of eighteen fine thoroughbreds this season. In the lot are eleven two-year-olds, one six-year-old, two five-year-olds, three four-year-olds and one three-year-old. These horses are now at the Sheepshead Bay (New York) track under the care of S. C. Hildreth, their trainer. Eddie Dugan, who rode in Russia last year, will pilot the Belmont racers this season. Dugan is considered to be the best pilot in the country at present. Belmont's thoroughbreds are sure to receive the proper handling. Dugan is to receive the largest retainer paid to any horse pilot in America.

"WOMANLY ART," THEY MUST CALL IT NOW

Miss Gertrude Bauman and Eddie Toye.

"The womanly art"—they may soon be calling boxing. Anyway Miss Gertrude Bauman of New York jabbed and banged the "stuffin's" out of poor Eddie Toye, her boxing professor and former ring artist, in an exhibition in Gotham last week. Eddie fought hard for the good name of his sex, but at the end of the fourth round Referee Jack Adler announced his defeat. Miss Bauman declared after the bout that her costume consisted of just four garments—shoes, stockings, bloomers and a middy skirt. She didn't wear a corset.

"SULLY" WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE CLOVERS' WIN

ABA DABA CLUB ELECTION AT HOME OF MISS FLYNN

The Aba Daba Club elected its officers Thursday evening at the home of Miss Vera A. Flynn, of West Front street. The following were chosen: Thelma D. Cook, president; Vera A. Flynn; secretary, Ida H. Brooks, treasurer.

The honorary members are, Mabel Taylor, Evelyn Meeker, Margaret Adams and Mary Flynn. The house was attractively decorated in orange and blue, which will be the colors of the club.

An enjoyable evening was spent after the business meeting. Dainty refreshments were served at a late hour.

BOYS OF SCOTCH PLAINS BEING TAUGHT TO KNIT

Evidently placing credence in the possibility of men performing the home tasks now assigned to women when the latter some day are enfranchised, Superintendent S. Dana Townsend, of the Scotch Plains public schools, has instituted a course of domestic science into the routine of school work, one of the features being a knitting class for boys. This is conducted as a substitute for the regular manual training course and has met with enthusiastic response on the part of the pupils.

The progress has been marked and at the present time every pupil knows the rudiments of knitting and a number of useful articles of wearing apparel have been made. Baskets are also woven by the pupils out of straw and other materials.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.—Adv.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and further more, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jads Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIELD

BUILDING MARKET MORE IMPROVED

Activity is More Apparent in Both the City and Suburbs.

AN AGGREGATE GAIN

Dealers Are Holding Themselves in Readiness for a General Change in Quotations—Bids Are Now on Sixty Days' Acceptance.

New York, March 13.—General improvement in building construction is reported for the metropolitan district as the middle of March approaches. Building activity is more apparent both in the city and suburbs. Building material prices from dealer to job are not stiffening, indicating prospects of continued ease on the wholesale market.

It is evident, however, that dealers are holding themselves in readiness for a general change in quotations, because they are making their bids to builders subject to not longer than sixty-day acceptance. Leading commodities like brick, Portland cement, fireproofing, lime, plaster and other staples have shown no change.

On the other hand building construction in New York city showed an aggregate gain of $4,000,000, or 50.8 per cent. over February of a year ago. Newark, however, showed a decrease of 22 per cent. A great proportion of the new building construction in New York is of a commercial character in Manhattan. Industrial expansion is especially noticeable in the Bronx, Queens and Newark. In the development sections of Newark speculative building is going ahead fast, indicating that money is more readily available. Most of these operations were projected about nine months ago.

That the improved conditions are not entirely local is shown by the detailed report for February made by Bradstreets, covering 137 cities out of 152 usually reporting. The total number of new buildings projects in the United States for February was 14,733, with an estimated value of $442,993,455 as against 16,123 valued at $48,785,876 in February a year ago. The decrease is only 8.6 per cent. in permits and 11.8 per cent. in estimated value from a year ago. Practically all of this decrease in value is attributed to the present low prices of materials permitting architects to make lowest cost estimates than usual.

Comparative statistics covering the years 1913, 1914 and 1915 are given as follows:

Important conferences were held in this city Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with reference to the Portland Cement situation. Edward M. Hager, former president of the Universal and reported head of the sixteen-company combination now being formed, was in the city and was in close conference with President G. F. Brown, of the Alpha. The rapidly increasing inquiry for cement and the increasing shortage of supply at the mills is forcing to a head this gigantic combination. The Lehigh Cement Company, which last week threw in twenty kilns, is preparing to start up its full complement of forty-eight kilns by putting ten more in operation next week and the Atlas Portland Cement Company is getting ready to put in fourteen more kilns.

Builders will do well to bear in mind that these are real evidences of an impending shortage in cement and should take advantage of the low prices now ruling. A shift from the $1.23-$1.32 level now ruling in the wholesale market is expected any time.

The main front is treated in symmetrical manner with a liberal sized piazza and an open terrace on either side, the piazza is designed to be screened for summer use and glazed for winter use.

The entrance is central with hall and wide columned arch opening into a large living room on the right side and wide sliding doors opening into dining room on the left side, the main staircase with platforms extend up from the rear half of the hall. There is a good closet opening from the rear end of hall. Dining room and kitchen connect together with pantry between. The basement stairs extend down from the kitchen under the main stairs with a grade entrance from the outside. In the rear is a large screened-in porch with a sleeping porch over the same in the second floor, accessible from hall and also from one chamber. The main living room is a very attractive room with wide recess at the side, broad open fireplace and a seat on each side. This first floor is finished in oak in the principal rooms with oak floor, the kitchen and rear portion finished in natural pine.

The second floor has four good chambers, a large bath room, dressing room, rear closet and ample clothes closets for all rooms, the finish is pine in white enamel with birch floor. It is estimated to build the house from $4,500 to $5,400, exclusive of heating and plumbing. There is large space in the attic left unfinished in this estimate, there is ample space for three rooms together with storage space. The roof is shingled and stained and all the outside trimmings painted.

ANOTHER N. M. DEAL.

Quite an extensive real estate deal took place at New Market this week, when the C. E. Kelly Company bought from Morris Eiseman, of New York, the properties known as the "Castle" and the "Kelly House." They also bought from the same party the meadows in the rear of the two houses mentioned leading down to the bank of Bound Brook. The properties have a frontage on William street of about two hundred feet and on the Dunellen Stelton road known as Main street in the village of about seventy-five feet. There has been much speculation in the village, since the facts of the sale became known, as to what purpose the company proposes to put the new holdings.

THE DAILY PRESS IN SOMERVILLE will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon after 4:30 by Jacob Gernert, the Main street newsdealer.

COUNCILMAN PLANS A PERMIT CHARGE

Believes Small Fee Would Cover Building Department's Expense.

Contractors throughout the city are giving much consideration to a proposition advanced by Councilman A. D. Edgar to charge a small fee for the issuance of building permits. At the present time the building inspector's department costs the city about $800 a year and the fee idea, if adopted, would undoubtedly cover the expense. It is said to be in successful operation in many nearby municipalities.

The plan in its present form is to charge $1 for every $1,000 specified in the application made. In this way, contracts frequently specifies a certain amount made lower to avoid high assessment and is "patched up" later.

Most of the contractors spoken to believe the filing charges would be acceptable generally but add that buildings costing less than $750 should be exempt. There are many garage and other structures, they say, that run from $200 to $500, and that an additional expense would be an injustice to the builder. The plan is being considered by the Fire and Buildings Committee and should no concerted operation arise, Mr. Edgar will introduce an ordinance in the near future.

SCHOOL FOR FANWOOD TO BE ERECTED SOON

Final arrangements for the erection of School No. 3, on Jerusalem road, Fanwood township, have been practically completed by the Board of Education of that place, bonds for the new building having been sold to J. S. Rippel, at $104.01, a total of $17,161.65, with accrued interest. The educational institution is to be erected on a site, the title of which is to pass during the course of the next week, is a plot now forming a part of the grounds of the Westfield Golf Club, near what is popularly known as Jerseyland Park. The school has been made necessary by the steady growth and development of this section of the township during the course of the past five years, during which time a large number of dwellings have been erected, many of which are owned by the occupants. The Township Board of Education is to receive bids on the heating and furnishings at a meeting to be held March 25.

The erection of this school is the direct outcome of a special election held some time ago, at which there was considerable feeling shown between the residents of various sections of the township, and an eleventh hour rush for the polls made by the voters to overcome the strength of the Jerseyland Park section.

COUNTY CONTRACTS.

AIDING BOOM AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD

Local Man is Building Tile Plant and Will Develop Property.

OWNS FIFTY-NINE ACRE

Carmine Valicenti Proposes to Erect Ten Bungalows in the Near Future—Head of a Twenty Thousand Dollar Concern.

The prospects for an active spring building season in South Plainfield have been added to considerably through the plans of Carmine Valicenti, of this city, who has been operating in real estat in the village for nine years. Mr. Valicenti purchased twenty-nine and a half acres of ground from the Little Farms Company a short time ago, and during the past week took title to another twenty-nine and a half acres from the Merchants and Trades Realty Company. Both tracts are to be developed, being adapted for bungalow sites and modest homes. It is the owner's intention to begin the erection of at least ten homes during the latter part of April.

Mr. Valicenti is the inventor of a new form of building block known as building tile. It differs from the concrete block in several ways and by experts who have examined it, it is declared to be vastly superior. It is his intention to manufacture the tile at South Plainfield and he is now having a large factory built on the south side of the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks directly opposite the coaling station. The dimensions are 50 by 60 feet and two stories in height. There is also to be a drying house 20 by 20 feet and direct railroad connections by means of siding.

The manufacturing proposition will be conducted by the Plainfield Fire and Water Proof Tile Company, Mr. Valicenti being the president and treasurer. Papers of incorporation were filed yesterday at Elizabeth. As the name of the company implies, Mr. Valicenti's block is both fire and water proof. It can be made with either a granite or limestone finish in the front, but with the back adapted to the driving in of nails or screws. No lath is necessary on the inside of buildings constructed of block as the cement is applied to them. They are especially adapted for garage purposes as they are so strictly moisture proof that no dampness can enter to rust a car left standing for a long time, a fault found with almost every other kind of material. Contractors who have examined Mr. Valicenti's invention say it fills a long felt want and predict a great demand for them as soon as they are placed on the market. The company has already $3,000 worth of orders. As soon as the factory is in running order twelve men will be placed at work and the number will be increased as the business grows.

The Garden Day By Day

by Tarkington Baker

Next Week's Work In Brief

All seeds of flowers and vegetables should be ordered at once. Some are needed immediately for planting indoors.

Sow in flats placed in a warm, sunny window seeds of cabbage, cauliflower, celery, eggplant and tomatoes and of ageratum, snapdragon, cockscomb, salvia, stocks and verbena.

Seeds of some late-blooming herbaceous perennials if planted in flats indoors at once will produce flowering plants this fall.

Outdoors, plant sweet peas, garden peas and spinach as soon as the ground can be worked.

Finish pruning fruit and shade trees, berries, vines and fall-blooming shrubs.

Spraying against scale should be finished this week. It cannot go forward when the foliage appears.

March is a busy and important month for the gardener. It is a month of preparation. On this account, any belated work either indoors or outdoors must be hastened and finished as rapidly as possible. Some operations cannot be deferred another week. If early flowers and vegetables are wanted, for instance, the seed should be sown immediately. Success in starting seeds depends to a great extent on soil, and the best soil for the purpose is made up of loam and leaf mold in equal proportions. To this, sharp, clean sand should be added. Flats should be about three inches deep, with holes in the bottom to afford drainage. To keep these from becoming clogged cover them with broken bits of pots and then cover the bottom to the depth of an inch with coarse soil. On top of this sift the seeding soil. Finish by firming and, when the seeds are sown, firm again.

There should be no delay in sowing seeds of the flowers and vegetables wanted for early bloom and crops. Select varieties of cabbage, cauliflower, celery, eggplant and tomatoes and such other vegetables as may be desired that are earliest to come into bearing. As the seedlings increase in growth, thin out and, later, transplant to other flats, giving them still more room, if the weather does not yet permit of planting outdoors. Seeds of the herbaceous perennials, such as hollyhocks, are treated in the same manner.

Outdoors, as soon as the frost is out of the ground and the soil is in condition to be spaded, plant sweet peas. Success depends on thorough preparation of the seed bed and this is best insured by digging a trench, throwing the soil to one side, and, on the bottom, spreading a liberal layer of well-rotted manure upon which the excavated soil is then returned. At the same time, plant the early varieties of garden peas, setting the seed three inches deep. Sow spinach an inch deep and select such varieties as Long Season, Long Standing or Victoria.

There must be no delay at this time in carrying forward the pruning operations. Grape vines may still be cut back if the sap has not begun to flow, but, in the latter case, pruning must cease. Blackberries, currants, gooseberries and raspberries should be pruned liberally, removing all the old canes. Ornamental trees, with the possible exception of the maple, in which the sap may be rising, the young fruit trees and all fall-blooming shrubs should all be gone over carefully and the weak and undesirable wood among the shrubs to prune now are althea, berberis, hydrangea, privet and the roses. From the climbing roses, remove old canes two or three years old, winter-killed tips from the younger canes, and the ends of the laterals back to two or three eyes. The hybrid roses should be cut back severely if quality of blooms is wanted; leaving only two eyes of the previous season's growth will prove sufficient. With the tea roses, however, pruning is less severe. Weak shoots should be cut out entirely and the vigorous shoots pruned back to good strong wood. Vines may be pruned as the shapes require, but Jasminums, clematis Montana, wisteria and akebia should never be pruned in spring. Among the shrubs, those not to prune in spring are: Spirea (except Anthony Waterer), deutzia, azalea, cercis, forsythia, calycanthus, cytisus, helesia, cornus, lilac, magnolia, lonicera, Philadelphus, prunus, viburnum, pyrus and weigelia. Pruning these now means the loss of the flowering wood.

Spraying to guard against or to kill San Jose scale should be finished at once. It must cease, of course, when the young foliage appears, as the spray kills the growth. The fact that the scale is not present in the orchard, shrubbery or on the branches and limbs of the shade trees is a poor excuse for omitting this important operation. It is much easier to prevent it than to eradicate it and spraying as a precautionary measure should be employed generally, even where only a few shrubs or trees are grown. Any of the soluble oils offered by dealers in this material are good and can be used effectively by following the directions.

TARKINGTON BAKER.

TWO PERMITS DURING THE PRESENT WEEK

Buildings Are to Cost About $4,220—Many Other Plans Out.

Two building permits is the extent of new construction development during the course of the past week, covering the erection of one dwelling and one garage, and calling for the expenditure of $4,220. The aggregate expenditure for buildings for which permits have been issued since January 1 now totals over $100,000, which is considerably ahead of the amount up to this time last year.

While improvements in the local construction field has been noted from time to time, conditions have not as yet reached the normal conditions of two or three years ago, but prospects are bright for a fair spring opening of the building season. A number of structures for which plans have been prepared and for which bids are now being sought, are expected to be started before the end of the present month, thus giving work to a fairly large number of building craftsmen.

The permits as issued during the course of the past week by Inspector T. O. Doane are as noted below:

Second Ward.

E. F. Vail is having erected at 1009 Prospect avenue, a frame garage to measure 12 by 19 feet, which will cost in the vicinity of $220. B. G. Bush is the mason contractor, while Charles L. Force is the architect and carpenter contractor.

Third Ward.

A two story, two family dwelling is to be erected on the northeast side of Division street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, by Herbert B. Smith, at a cost of approximately $4,000. The dimensions of the structure will be 26 by 42 feet, and will be of frame construction. It will be two and half stories high, with concrete base course and foundation, lock frame work, and shingled roof. A modern hot-air heating system is to be installed. F. L. Lancaster is the architect and Charles F. MacDonald the general contractor.

DUNELLEN ACTIVITIES.

Titus and McDonough, of this city, are planning to erect in the immediate future, two dwellings of moderate cost on the S. P. Q. R. tract at Dunellen. Other local people about to erect dwellings on this tract are John S. Dahl, who is to put up two, and the Bloom Construction Co., which has three houses under construction. Daniel C. Gaddis has the contract for the Titus and McDonough dwellings.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

CHAPTER III.

MONEY! June was face to face with another angle of that eternal problem, which, it seemed to her, had complicated the entire relationship of men and women. Mrs. Villard had plainly sold herself, and the price is never great enough for any woman who has done that. Always in June's rapidly widening observation the man gave and the woman received, and her very dependence made the question of matrimony one of essential barter and sale. It was wrong! It destroyed the very source and fount of love. Was there no remedy? June, shaken though she was by her painful experience of the morning, was strengthened in her own resolve. The answer to the problem was independence even though she suffered in the attainment of it, even though Ned suffered. Their love would be all the stronger for it, and it would be pure always.

Could she have seen Ned at that moment all her theories and all her deductions would have taken swift flight, and she would have bathed with her tears the swollen wrist which he had just freed from the rough rope that had bound it.

Slowly and with infinite pain Ned finally freed his hands. They were quivering as, with a mighty effort, he raised them to the back of his head and fumbled with the knot which held his gag in place. It seemed ages before he was able to remove that tight bandage. He removed the tight thongs from around his ankles. He limped awkwardly for half a mile, bent and stooped like an old man, but exercise restored him, and by the time he found a road he was his vigorous self again and full of the dogged determination which had led him so far in the pursuit of his runaway bride.

Down the highway a mile or so he found an obscure roadhouse, and he strode in at the saloon door.

While ordering a "bracer" for his shattered nerves he saw his two captors sitting at a table. He rushed madly at them and knocked them both to the floor. Dashing out of the place, he saw their auto. He jumped in, pressed the starting button and sped away.

The house of Mrs. Villard was closed and locked when Ned arrived there at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

In the meantime June and Mrs. Villard and Bouncer were snugly ensconced in a pleasant hotel downtown, and before her at the writing table Mrs. Villard held open a bank book. Its figures represented the price she had received for the sale of her ten best years, and she had spent an hour in the debate of whether to give up her earnings. June had been taken into that debate, but she had been able to offer no argument on either side. She had realized at last a great and saddening truth—that every woman's problem must be for herself alone.

Marie meantime, with Officer Dowd as interpreter, had telephoned everywhere for news of Ned Warner, but without result; then in despair she telephoned the Villard house to excuse her absence to June. That number did not answer after repeated trials. Marie, more frantic than ever and feeling sure that she was about to lose her mind, hurried straight down to the station and took a train to the Villard place.

It was closed and locked. Even the servants were gone, but at the carriage entrance stood the touring car. The garage—empty too! There were no signs that Jens Janssen or Henri had returned.

Just as Marie was pondering over this remarkable circumstance there came trudging down the drive a natty little figure, its limbs neatly incased in leather leggings, its cap pushed on the back of its head, but its tiny little mustache all fuzzy. It was Henri, and in his eyes was a very great weariness.

"Where is Mr. Ned?" screamed Marie.

"Name of the good Lord!" groaned Henri. "He is watching the day perhaps. Such a headache!" And Henri pressed his thumping brow.

"Where is Jens?"

"Vanished! I wake up. Jens is no more! He has had a fight, they say. He has been licked, they say. The enormous ruffian who is strong enough to box my friend Jens has stolen the machine. Here it is. Voila! Jens must have returned!"

Marie shook Henri by the sleeve.

"Where is Mr. Ned?" she demanded.

"In the woods." Henri waved his arms comprehensively.

"Not tied!"

"As you saw him, Mlle. Marie." And once more Henri was able to laugh. He blew a kiss to the sky. "It was well executed, mademoiselle. It was Henri, myself, who"—

Marie got into the car.

"You take me right out there," she ordered.

"Bravo!" he approved. "It is another good enterprise! I have enthusiasm!"

"Then don't talk about it!" snapped Marie, and lightly as a cat Henri climbed over his spare tires, plumped into the seat beside Marie, and away they sped.

At 7:15 that night Bobbie and Iris Blethering, the latter June Warner's bosomest of bosom friends, strolled into the Cafe New York. Suddenly Iris grabbed Bobbie by the arm, and he turned to her in surprise. Iris for the first time in her life was speechless, and her face was pale, but she could look. She was staring at a table in the corner. There sat the runaway bride, laughing and chatting happily with a vivacious brunette, a pleasant faced lady of mature years, a dark, handsome man with a black Vandyke, a pink faced, white mustached man who bore all the evidences of a bon vivant and a heavy round headed man with thick eyelids!

Her moment of paralysis past, the hearty Iris made a straight dive for June's table, and it was Bobbie's turn to clutch her by the arm.

"Wait a minute," he counseled.

"But there's June!" gasped Iris.

"Look here," he whispered in her ear while he held her, "what can we do? We interfered once and mussed it all up. Now, the right thing to do is to telephone Ned."

Iris Blethering regarded her husband with a dawning approbation. It was the first time he had ever thought faster than she, and she was proud of him for it.

"I'll sit right behind this post and watch that table!" Iris promptly decided. "You telephone, and hurry up. But I do wish I had a good place to cry!"

And, suppressing the tendency of her bosom to heave, she dashed away a ready tear and plumped into a chair behind the post.

Ned was at home when Bobbie called. He was ready to start on any journey in search of June—and Gilbert Blye! When he arrived at the cafe he found Iris and Bobbie Blethering in a state of quivering excitement.

"You're just in time!" gasped Iris.

"They're leaving," said Bobbie.

They hurried into the vast, richly decorated, glittering cafe. About one of the tables in the far corner were the two whom Ned had sought since the day of his wedding.

All the pentup murder which had seethed in Ned Warner's heart for days flamed into his eyes as, with an oath, he started for the table.

"Stop him, Bobbie! Stop him!" suddenly cried Iris Blethering, and, jumping in front of Ned, she threw her arms about his neck and hung her weight upon him, while Bobbie, also frightened by the terrible expression of Ned's countenance, impeded his progress on the other side.

Ned had turned to shake off his clogging friends when June, drawn by some intangible force, wheeled slowly and looked in that direction. She saw only that it was her husband.

"Ned!" she cried.

Both Cunningham and Blye psied as they saw that movement and what had caused it. As by a simultaneous impulse they took her by the arms, one on each side, and turned her toward the corner entrance near which they had sat.

"I won't go!" she declared and tried to hang back, but they forced her out of the door.

Ned Warner saw June's piteous face as she half turned it to look back, saw her being kidnaped from under his very eyes, and, bursting through the group which impeded him, he made a dash among the tables and across the restaurant.

Too late! He reached the corner entrance only in time to see Blye's luxurious limousine whirl away up the street. June was frantically determined that she would not go where they were taking her. Mrs. Villard was pale and panic stricken, but the other three carried out their pretense of laughing coercion. On the front seat with Scatti, Blye's wide featured Italian chauffeur, sat T. J. Edwards, the round headed, heavy man, and his thick lidded eyes peered constantly back through the glass, and there was a firm set to his thick lips.

There was no one at the lonely dock upon which the swiftly speeding limousine stopped abruptly, no one to hear or heed the call for help which June tried to send up above the noisy laughter of five of her companions, for now Edwards and Scatti joined loudly in the hilarity.

There was a cold, stern voice in June's ear.

"We've had quite enough of this hysteria. You're going along!" It was the voice of Gilbert Blye.

It was he who, with Orin Cunningham, forced her from a lonely dock into the motorboat which lay alongside, and in another moment all except Scatti were speeding swiftly away toward the long, low yacht which lay midway of the misty river.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

A stirring campaign has been planned by Mrs. Alexander F. Jamieson, president of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman's Suffrage, and letters of instruction and advice sent by her to the president of each of the twenty-six branches.

Mrs. Grace Duffield Goodwin is under contract with the above-named association as field secretary for the next six months, and is doing vigorous work in the unorganized places in the State, and many dates are already booked in the towns where branches exist.

Requests for speakers are coming in from churches, associations and collegiate schools in many sections of the State, evidencing an increasing interest in, and determination for intelligent understanding of the Anti side of the suffrage question.

Requests for literature from men not yet enrolled in the Men's League, of which Colonel William Libbey, of Princeton, is chairman, and constant increase in its membership prove that the vote next fall will be intelligent, and that the voters recognize the existence of a powerful opposition and desire to understand its platform. The first and fundamental principal of this platform is: That men as a whole are as qualified as women as a whole to use the ballot thoughtfully, conscientiously and honestly.

Further, the members of the association state that they believe it "To be every woman's duty to study and understand industrial conditions, conditions of vice, especially as affecting women and girls, and to work untiringly, through existing channels, for the abatement and abolishing of all evils. We are witnessing more strongly every day woman's power to do her work in this way, and experience teaches that with women to investigate evils and instigate reform and improvement men work and legislate for betterment.

Continuing, it says that "The best efforts of the men always have been and always will be, for the best good of the country, as representing the home and family, which in the final analysis is women and children."

In describing a "voter" the association takes as its criterion "the vast majority of men in varied forms of industrial and professional life whose goals are the highest fulfillment of their duty to others."

In its literature the association states that it relies upon the men of New Jersey to consider the principles and points which it sets forth before committing the women, "good, bad and indifferent, to voter for women."

The association reports there are 12,000 women enrolled as members in this State among its twenty-six branches. Besides, there is a Junior League, consisting of girls between the ages of fourteen and twenty-one.

The following names are found upon the membership rolls of the organization in different sections of the State: Mrs. William S. Stryker, Miss Anna L. Dayton, Mrs. Alexander F. Jamieson, Mrs. Silvano Fisher Andrew, Mrs. Henry Pratt Ferrine, Mrs. Richard Stockton and Miss Anne MacIlvaine, of Trenton, Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., Mrs. Thomas J. Craven, Mrs. Garret A. R. A. LAWRENCE.

Wharton, N. J.,
Jan. 19, 1915.

N. J. Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

Dear Mesdames: The debate for which I requested material some time ago was given in Arcanum Hall, Dover, N. J., on Tuesday evening last. The subject was:

"Resolved, That women should be given the same political rights as men."

Aff., Dr. Guy Brewster, Clarence Hance.

Neg., Walter C. Ellis, Rhomas J. Spargo.

The chairman of the meeting was Mayor Lynd, of Dover.

The judges—Alderman Kelly, ex-Assemblyman Neighbor, and George E. Jenkins.

I am very much pleased to say that the negative side was given the decision by an unanimous vote.

Our plan of debate was practically as follows:

1. That woman was not made to rule politically.

2. That no exigency has arisen to demand an abnormal remedy.

3. That no marked improvement has been made in those States where woman suffrage has been adopted.

4. That woman was not constitutionally constructed for a political career; that her energies are now fully occupied; and that to burden her further would be an economic and eugenic disaster.

We men stated that we were arguing for that vast majority of women who are doing the world's greatest work and that they do not want the ballot thrust upon them.

With continued interest in your cause, which I am convinced is the correct attitude, and again thanking you for your valuable assistance, I am,

Very respectfully yours,

The Theta Phi Fraternity, of Pennington School, held a debate Saturday evening on the subject, "Resolved, that woman suffrage should be granted in this country." The negative won by a unanimous vote of the judges. This was one of the big events of the year in Theta Phi. The judges were Professor Blackburn, head of the mathematics department; E. B. Mathews and Paul Fleming. The brief for the negative follows: (a) Women don't want or need the vote; (b) What suffragists claim they can accomplish they neither can nor will; (c) Woman by nature was not made to govern; (d) It would undermine the basis of our civilization.

QUAINT IN COLOR AND DESIGN.

There is something quaintly old-fashioned about this distinctly modern gown of orchid taffeta. White chiffon and lace have been arranged into a fichu effect with a Medici collar of lace at the back and held by an old-fashioned passementerie ornament at the corsage line. The bodice has been gathered into a deep yoke and chiffon is used for the elbow sleeves. The short wide skirt consists of a series of shaped ruffles attached to one another instead of a common foundation as is the usual mode.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"I think this is from your mother." Nell handed Dick a letter. "Now that we are settled we must ask your people to visit us."

"Mother says she is planning to come up here next week. It's been two years since I've seen her. I hope we can give her a good time," answered Dick.

"Isn't your father coming, too?" inquired Nell.

"No; they have no hired man yet and both cannot leave the farm at once; there would be no one to wait on the animals.

"I hope you'll like my mother," said Dick, again running his eye over the letter.

"Of course I'll like her; she's your mother." Nell was very emphatic. "Don't you like my mother?"

"Certainly I do; she's a wonderfully sweet woman. My mother is not at all like her," he added slowly.

Nell felt a flutter of dread when a tall, uncompromising looking woman stepped off the train and gave Dick and herself a peck in lieu of a kiss.

"So this is your wife, Richard," and she looked Nell up and down as if taking an inventory of her clothes. "You don't look as if you could stand much," was her only comment.

"She's pretty rugged after all," said Dick, determined that Nell should have due credit. "Will you take a bus up to the house, mother? You know we have no street cars."

"No, I'll walk; it isn't far, is it?"

Dick carried his mother's bag up to her room, set it down and turning to her, laid his hand on her shoulder and said:

"My! it has been a long time since I saw you, mother, but you have aged a bit. Isn't Nell a dear little thing?" he asked after a silence.

"Oh! she'll do; I suppose she doesn't know how to do any work," replied Madam Morton, giving the room a critical inspection.

"She did most of the sewing. It's hard to get help here."

"Oh, I suppose she does as much as the rest. Girls really used to do something when I was young. Bring her out to the farm this summer. I'll show her what work is—old as I am."

She looked on all Nell's pretty trifles with grim tolerance, and poor Nell felt that she was under a constant fire of criticism.

"I am afraid she doesn't like me," she said anxiously to Dick that night after the old lady had gone to her room.

"It isn't that, dear. She likes you as well as she does anybody. I did not tell you, I couldn't. Then I thought you might prove an exception and touch her tender spot. She is really good hearted, and she would do any amount of work for you."

Dick kissed the worried little pucker in Nell's forehead. "Now be sensible, dear. Do exactly as you would if she were not here, and whatever she says or does, try to remember that it's nothing personal. She would say the same thing to anybody. Let it slide off without hurting you. If you can keep from being sensitive over things everything will be all right. She is what the Scotch call 'dour' and is ashamed to show affection."

Nell breathed a tremulous little sigh and dropped her head on Dick's shoulder.

"I had looked forward to her visit so eagerly and now——"

"She only brought a bag; she won't stay long." He was trying to comfort her.

"Oh, Dick! how can you?" cried Nell reproachfully.

Household Hints

BIG EATERS AGE EARLY

Dr. Nasher of New York, who is an authority on the subject of senility, gives some indications of premature aging, and conditions that may be mistaken for it that may be summarized briefly as follows:

Big eaters age early. There is too much waste to be disposed of by the intestines, and intestinal decomposition and auto-intoxication occur.

The "little and often" rule for feeding is wrong. Five-hour intervals and sufficient at each meal should be the rule.

If the aged person is drowsy after the meal he should lie down; not sleep sitting.

Wrinkles, if due to age, are fine; if due to habit (worry, mental concentration, etc.), disease or drugs, they are coarse. The former appear late; the latter may begin early.

The hardening of the cartilage at the lower extremity of the breast bone is an indication of the degree of aging. So long as this cartilage remains flexible to pressure with the finger the person is not old in the physiological sense, for his arteries are not hardened. When this flexibility is lost early in life, however, it is a sign of early senile changes.

The senile stoop, due to anatomical changes, comes on slowly and late; the senile slouch, due to mental decay, comes on early and rapid.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

A very small pinch of Epsom salts in buckwheat cakes, that are eaten every morning, will keep one from breaking out, as so many do when eating them right along.

To Prevent Spool Dropping—To hold the spool when crocheting or sewing, take a common hairpin and bend the two ends in toward each other. Insert ends of pin in ends of spool. Slip head of pin over a button in your blouse. The spool will turn as the thread is used. There is no tangling of the thread or slipping of the spool to the floor.

To keep stove black when firing heavily, take one package stove polish, shave and moisten with water. Get five cents' worth gum arabic, dissolve in water, add to blacking. If it becomes too thick from time to time, add a little water.

The pocketless woman often finds it troublesome to carry a key, especially the house key, when she goes out. If an old-fashioned split metal ring can be found, use it to connect the key to be carried to the circular end of a strong, sure-acting safety pin (not too large). If such a ring cannot be found, fasten pin and key together with a bit of fine wire. Then the pin may be fastened to the inside of the coat or slipped inside of the shirtwaist band pinned to the undergarment.

LEFTOVER RICE.

Rice Spanish—Chop or grind one onion and one green pepper; fry in bacon fat and butter till a rich brown; add three well-cut tomatoes, salt, pepper, paprika (to taste) and two cups cold rice. Use more fat if needed. Cook thirty minutes, stirring often.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Illness of Charley Colt.

One morning Charley Colt woke up and said, "Oh, dear! I'm sick.
I ache in every bone I have—send for the doctor, quick!"
The dreadful state that he was in alarmed good Mrs. Horse;
Said she, "I'll telephone at once for Doctor Owl, of course."

She called up Dr. Owl and said, "Come over quickly, do!
My son is very, very sick." Old Doctor Owl said, "Whoo?"
"My son," said frantic Mrs. Horse; "I fear he's going to die."
"Stay, son, I'll be there at once as fast as I can fly."

When he had looked at Charley Colt and felt his pulse, he said,
"I think that for a day or two he'd better stay in bed.
I find he's threatened with the croup, which would be bad, of course.
But for the present have no fear, he's just a little hoarse.

"Feed him entirely on rolled oats, they're easy to digest,
And keep a nice hot poultice of horse-radish on his chest."
But Charley said when Doctor Owl had finally gone away,
"I will not stay in bed and have a poultice on, neigh! neigh!"

He went outdoors, this wilful colt, and waded in the creek,
And in a little while he was so hoarse he couldn't speak.
Thought he, "Perhaps I'd better go back home; I feel so queer."
Just then he met a man who said, "What are you doing here?"

When Charley tried to talk to him he couldn't make a sound.
The man said, "I believe you're lost; I'll take you to the pound."
(The pound, you know, is where they take the animals that stray,
And once an animal is there he seldom gets away.)

Thought Charley Colt, "I do not want to visit in the pound,
Because, to tell the truth, it has a most unpleasant sound;
But I suppose I'll have to go, I really have no choice,
Although there's not a bit of me that's lost, except my voice."

The fate of willful Charley Colt is very much in doubt;
Some think he still is in the pound, some think that he is out
However that may be, I'm sure it's just as plain as day,
That willfulness in children or in colts will never pay.

for catching insects and caterpillars that come from the ground to reach the foliage is preferable to coal tar as it does not make an unsightly black band around the tree. Easier, cheaper and much more effective than spraying for great tall trees. SCHOLARSHIP FOR ONE LOCAL PUPIL

Holy Name Society Will Finance Award to Be Made Each Year in Future.

ENTHUSIASTIC SESSION

Local Body Heard New York Business Man Lecture and Added Twenty Names to its Membership Roster—Will Attend Meeting.

As a means of arousing further interest in higher education among the students in St. Mary's Parochial School, the Holy Name Society, at a meeting yesterday afternoon, passed a resolution that will make it possible for at least one pupil out of each graduating class in the future to attend St. Peter's Catholic College in Jersey City. All of the tuition expenses will be borne by the society, and it is probable that the winner each year will be determined by a competitive examination at the Jersey institution of learning. The scholarship will be limited to those individuals who have completed courses in the local Catholic schools, but will be open to those individuals who graduate from the Plainfield High School after having completed the courses in St. Mary's School. Interest in the proposition is keen among the members of the organization, and it is not unlikely that the contest for the award will be an enthusiastic one, entered into by the student body as a whole.

St. Peter's College offers all of the facilities for higher education and preparation for any profession, and a student who qualifies for the prize will be personally introduced to the routine of college work by the local Holy Name Society. Further details connected with the competition are now in progress of preparation, and will be presented to the society at an early meeting.

One of the features of the meeting yesterday afternoon was an address delivered by Dudley Olcott, of New York city, manager of the Atlantic and Pacific Cable Line. He dwelt at length on the subject of "Catholic Literature," giving an eloquent and interesting discourse on the proposition of which he is thoroughly acquainted. He reviewed the good work that has been accomplished along religious lines by Catholic publications, and scored bigotry. He told of the good that could be wrought from united literary effort, and urged co-operation between the individual and the country's press.

An invitation received from the A. O. H., of St. Mary's church, to attend the latter organization's vesper service in St. Mary's church next Sunday night was accepted, and, by a vote of the society, it was decide to attend the affair in a body.

Several delayed items connected with the charity ball conducted some time ago by the Holy Name Society in Columbus Club Auditorium were reported yesterday, and the final accounting indicated that $453.37 had been realized. This sum has been distributed among the city poor irrespective of creed or nationality.

Twenty new members were admitted to the society yesterday. A committee was appointed to decide on dates and subjects for an intercity Holy Name Society program of debating. A delegation, to include John J. Hines, Joseph McCue and Albert LaRock, was appointed to attend the meeting of the Union County Federation of Holy Name Societies' meeting in Westfield, March 28. Daniel Couraine, who is a member of the local organization, is president of the Union county organization.

MINE DISASTER SURVIVOR ARRAIGNED IN CITY COURT

Claiming to have been one of the survivors of a recent mine disaster in West Virginia, a man giving his name as John McCue, related a pitiful story to Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning which gained for him a suspended sentence following a hearing on a charge of panhandling preferred against him by Sergeant Maurice Higgins. The prisoner exhibited scars all over his body which he said were sustained in feuds among miners in the coal districts.

According to McCue, he was one of a gang of miners who were entombed in a shaft for several days while hundreds of rescuers worked night and day to release the imprisoned workmen. He said he was thrown out of a job soon after the disaster and came east. His failure to obtain employment led him to beg on the streets. Asked where he would go if the court suspended sentence he said:

"I'll beat it for the Lehigh Valley tracks and 'hop' the first coaler heading in the direction of the mining districts."

UNIQUE EXHIBITION OF S. P. C. A. WORK

Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, Special Agent, in Charge of Display.

An exhibition of photographs and relics collected by Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen, of Fanwood, special agent in this district for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, is being exhibited in the window of Kirch's hardware store on Park avenue. The unique display has attracted considerable attention from passersby and many who had no idea of the calibre of work being conducted by the organization, were given their first opportunity to view articles that are used by human beings to inflict torture on dumb beasts.

Included in the confiscated "prizes" are whips and other articles Mrs. Van Hoesen has found in the possession of animal owners. The photographs include pictures of several maltreated horses owned by local individuals and offer extreme comparisons.

A number of the relics were obtained from Colonel Edwards, State superintendent of the S. P. C. A. work, and are representative of conditions in other parts of New Jersey.

FOURTEEN YEAR OLD LOCAL LAD TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

Lieut. Lane, of the New York city police department, reported to the local authorities last night that Edward McInerney, Jr., the fourteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward McInerney, of 422 West Sixth street, had been arrested in New York. He was detained in the Children's Court, at Twenty-second street and Third avenue, pending a hearing this morning.

The parents were communicated with by the local police, but owing to the meager information given out by the New York department nothing is known concerning the nature of charges against the boy.

MISS NOLAN DIES IN ST. ELIZABETH'S HOSPITAL

BEACHEY KILLED AT FRISCO FETE

Stunt He Performed in This City Caused His Death Before Thousands.

DROPPED 3,000 FEET

Dead Aviator Retired Several Weeks After His Flights in Plainfield But Returned to Sport to Better Frenchmen's Work.

Attempting a feat the replica of one he successfully executed at the old Plainfield Driving Park on Park avenue, two years ago, Lincoln Beachey, America's best known and most daring aviator, was killed at the Panama-Pacific Exposition grounds yesterday afternoon. He was completing his second flight of the afternoon when the fatality occurred in full view of thousands of spectators. Having previously electrified the crowds with a series of somersaults, the airman sought to add another thrill by making one of the most sensational perpendicular drops which usually featured his exhibitions.

At a point 2,000 feet in the air the wings crumpled and the aeroplane, turning over and over in its fall, plunged into San Francisco bay.

Launches put out immediately, equipped with grappling hooks, and a boat's crew from the battleship Oregon, which was anchored a short distance away, joined in recovering the body of the aviator, which was strapped to the machine under forty feet of water.

His death-defying stunts performed in this city in the summer of 1913 were witnessed by thousands of persons. Beachey boasted that 20,000,000 had seen him fly. Soon after his appearance here, he announced he had made his last flight, asserting that he felt partially responsible for the deaths of nine other aviators, who had attempted to imitate him. When the deeds of the daring Frenchmen were chronicled, he returned to the sport.

PRIZE SPEAKING SHOWS CAREFUL TRAINING

Harold Tomlinson and Ruth Simons Win Prizes Offered by Alumni Ass'n.

Showing careful training under the direction of H. F. Biddle, one of the faculty of the High School, three of the girl pupils and four of the boys gave an excellent program of public speaking at the High School Auditorium on Saturday night. The affair was prompted by cash prizes of ten dollars each, offered by the Alumni Association to the boy and girl who excelled in the evening's program.

That the seven young people who entered spent much time and thought in careful preparation was clearly proven by the fact that in some respects the judges were much puzzled to determine the winners. Without exception the participants were perfect in their memorizing of the selections, some of them being long and difficult. In almost every case the ease upon the stage, and lack of any nervousness was remarkable. Especially in the case of Harold Tomlinson, who won the boy's prize, and Dorothy Simons who took that offered for the girls, were the contestants self possessed.

In determining the positions the judges counted ten points for memory, fifteen points for ease, thirty-five points for articulation and forty points for interpretation. The judges were William D. Murray, Miss Julia J. Ketchem, of Carmel, N. Y., but a graduate of the High School, and Leslie R. Fort. Francis K. Anderson, president of the Alumni Association, presided at the meeting.

The contestants and subject were as follows:

"Ingersoll's Speech Over His Brother's Grave," Clifford Tildon.

"The Soul of the Violin," by Margaret M. Merrell, Elsie Stevens.

"Washington," by W. Hamilton Spence, Curtis B. Dall.

"Scene from Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice," Portia and Nerissa speaking, Ruth Ralston.

"How Fares Mankind," by George Harvey, Randolph M. Stelle.

"Queen Katherine's Plea, from Shakespeare's Henry VIII," Dorothy Simons (prize winner).

A Play—"The Hatching of the War," by Stephen Phillips, Harold Tomlinson (prize winner).

CITY MANAGER IS FAVORED BY MAYOR

Communication to West End Civic Association Explains His Position.

In response to an invitation requesting him to be present at the monthly meeting of the West End Civic Association in the Washington School Auditorium last Friday night, Mayor Leighton Calkins submitted a communication to the civic body, expressing his opinion on the commission government question which was brought before the meeting. This topic was discussed at length in accordance with the preliminary announcement conveying the purpose of the gathering.

Mayor Calkins says in part: "I am not opposed to commission government, although I personally feel that the manager commission modification is so great and important on commission government, as is shown by the fact that commission governed cities are now reaching out for this modification, that Plainfield can well afford to wait until the New Jersey laws are modified so as to permit municipalities to adopt the precise kind of government which each of them deems best suited to its own needs.

He further advocated in his communication that it would be best to defer concrete recommendations with respect to particular problems, for the time being, in view of the fact that a survey of all city departments is under consideration. In accordance with this suggestion the organization deferred taking any action on the proposition after it had been presented by Howard H. Williams, J. J. Carroll and Former Mayor G. W. V. Moy.

DR. PRINCE CONVERSANT WITH MANY LANGUAGES

He is a former State Senator and last year was president of the Senate. The committee feels that it has been distinctly honored in securing Dr. Prince as one of its speakers.

Among the others who will make addresses will be Assemblyman William N. Runyon, who needs no introduction to local audiences; former Mayor William L. Saunders, head of the Colorado School of Mines and president of the Ingersoll-Rand Drill Company, the largest machine concern in the east; Mayor Leighton Calkins, of this city, and Mayor Robert M. Clark, Jr., of the borough. Dr. C. J. Sullivan, of New Brunswick, the noted tenor soloist, will sing several Irish songs. SUDDEN DEATH OF CHARLES W. DODD Warden of Union County Jail Stricken on a New Jersey Central Train.

APOPLEXY THE CAUSE

Was on His Way to Attend a Sale at Somerville, Expiring Before Reaching This City—Formerly Resided Here.

Charles W. Dodd, for the past twenty-two years warden of the Union county jail, and a former chief of police in Plainfield, died suddenly on a New Jersey Central train shortly before it reached this city at 1:05 this afternoon. An attack of apoplexy, brought on by unusual exertion in running for the train at Elizabeth, is ascribed as the cause of his death. Mr. Dodd sat alone, and it was not until Westfield was passed that several other passengers, one of whom was Robert Wade, of this city, noticed him breathing heavily. He was unable to respond to queries, and what help was possible under the circumstances was procured. A trained nurse was among those responding, and just before the train arrived at Plainfield she pronounced him dead. The body was removed to the North avenue station, and Doctors Albert Pittis and M. L. Clawson responded to a call, only to confirm the nurse's statement after a thorough examination.

Mr. Dodd was a native of the North of Ireland, where he was born about sixty-eight years ago, but had lived in this country from the time he was a young man. He resided in Plainfield for a long time, and for several years was chief of the local police force. Twenty-two years ago he was appointed warden of the county jail, and he had held the position since that time. He removed from Plainfield in order to occupy the warden's quarters at Elizabeth. Under Mr. Dodd's supervision numerous innovations in the care of prisoners were made by the Board of Freeholders, and several of them have been copied throughout the State. He succeeded John L. Blore, of Rahway, as the warden, and served under eight sheriffs, all of whom praised him highly for his efficiency. Beside his widow, who is matron of the county jail, Mr. Dodd is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Ernest T. Hand, of Netherwood avenue, and Mrs. Fanny Plum, of Orange; also a son, William J. Dodd, of East Second street. Another son, Charles Dodd, Jr., died about two years ago. Mr. Dodd was a member of the Plainfield Exempt Firemen's Association and Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., of this city. He was widely known throughout the twin municipalities, and though he had been away from Plainfield for many years he made regular visits in order to hold his acquaintances.

The trip which ended so unexpectedly was commenced for the purpose of attending a sheriff's sale at Somerville this afternoon, at which the Hand brickyard on Mountain avenue was to be disposed of. Mr. Dodd held a mortgage on the premises. The county physician granted a permit for the removal of the body from the North avenue station during the afternoon.

FIREMEN KEPT BUSY BY MANY BAD GRASS FIRES

Numerous grass fires have kept the local fire department on the run since last Saturday afternoon and in one case a serious blaze was averted. This was at Arlington avenue and Rose street, where the flames raced about like a prairie fire enveloping heavy underbrush and trees in great masses of flame. Hydrant streams had to be laid in and the firemen worked from 4.27 Saturday afternoon until 6 o'clock before the danger was over.

Other grass fire calls were as follows: 5 p. m. Saturday afternoon, Parker Field; 11.20 Sunday morning, Martine avenue, and 6:20 last night, Netherwood avenue.

Inventor of Concrete Process Wins in Big Damage Suit at Baltimore.

Codington watched the proceedings in a law suit brought by Edward Thatcher, of New York against the city of Baltimore. Mr. Thatcher is the inventor of a patented process for a reinforced concrete method in building bridges and he claims that his rights have been infringed upon throughout the United States, one of the alleged offenders being Union county. The Baltimore suit was decided in his favor and the verdict carried many thousands of dollars with it.

LIFE ONE "DON'T" AFTER ANOTHER

Husband Makes Strict Rules For Wife's Guidance.

HE BARS ALL ARGUING.

On No Pretext Must She Contend With Him About Anything Under the Sun, He Says—Also Had a List of Things She Doesn't Do, but Ought To—Both Sue For Separation.

A list of "Don'ts" for wives of neurasthenics alleged to have been compiled by Charles E. Leach of Newark, formerly of Montclair, was introduced as evidence in the divorce suit brought by Leach against his wife, which was heard before Vice Chancellor Stevens, in Newark, N. J.

Mrs. Leach, who now lives in New York and is employed as secretary in a New York sanitarium, has brought a counter action against her husband. Both suits allege desertion.

Besides the list of "don'ts" which, according to the testimony, were typewritten and posted in the house, there was another set of directions under the caption of "Jessie Doesn't" introduced as evidence. The list of "Don'ts" follows:

Don't urge me to do anything.

Don't ask me to "let" you do anything.

Don't say, "Can't 'we' turn over a new leaf?"

Don't fail to step lightly.

Don't make it necessary to call you even once. Stick to your husband in his hour of need.

Don't say you "didn't intend." I know it.

Don't remain silent when forced to hear me describe what has evidently been torture to me.

Don't remain silent when I say you injure me.

Don't say, "Well, I understand now, and we will do better tomorrow." It's a horrid dose that you did not understand before. And everybody knows that tomorrow never comes.

Don't argue with me or contend with me in the slightest degree on anything under the sun, no matter what the provocation.

Don't forget that neurasthenia is a real disease, terrible in its effects and extremely apt to cause death unexpectedly.

Don't do thousands of other things that will readily suggest themselves.

Don't forget that mental and nervous diseases are now alleviated and cured exactly this way and no other. Exactly like a cold, neurasthenia must run its course. Be afraid of no apparent cure.

Don't be afraid to pretend for my benefit occasionally. If you cannot agree or accommodate me honestly at least pretend for my sake occasionally.

Don't say, "I thought you wanted me to."

Don't say, "You told me to or not to do it."

Don't be unrestful or unquiet in speech or demeanor.

Don't forget that a man returns battle scarred and weary at night. If in poor health he cannot stand much more.

Don't make me tell you such things as this.

Do you know any other man's wife who cannot construct such rules as these herself?

The "does nots" were prepared by Leach himself, it was stated, and, printed with a lead pencil, called attention to his wife's shortcomings and offered advice as to what she should do. They were:

Go to church. Yet she should by all means, for certain reasons all people know.

Go calling. Not haphazard, not in selfish regard for herself, but to a very carefully selected list in the interest of her family. It is her plain duty to consider expediency. To a wife and a mother, benefiting the interests of her family are paramount. If husband or son are prominent at all she has a very plain duty to study over and religiously perform. A prominent man will owe much to the political sagacity and straight common sense of his wife. His social standing is controlled absolutely by his wife. She makes or mars his future as she wills.

Make Sunday a day of rest. She can, and it is very important that she should not do ordinary work on that day. Read then, exercise then, play then. Sunday is the only day in the week you can give to your husband the best you can produce. He needs peace, comfort, happiness. Give it to him one day, and he works hard to give it to you all seven.

At the trial Mrs. Leach testified that her husband used to excess catarrh powders containing cocaine.

"Votes For Babies."

Cecil Chesterton, editor of the New Witness, London, brother of Gilbert K. Chesterton, wants to give the babies votes, he told an audience in New York. "When a man is married and has eight children he should have a vote for each of them, as well as that of his wife."

Can You Pronounce Przasnysz?

At the Russian embassy in Washington it was said that Przasnysz, the town now so prominent in the war news, is pronounced Prass-nish.

—It's hard to be an optimist on the day your tenant leaves. But prompt recourse to classified advertising will soon set things to rights again.

"Telephone First"

"WHY not telephone first and you may not have to go, after all. That's a pretty good rule to follow whenever you think of taking a trip. Even in those few cases where traveling is necessary, you can save disappointments and long waits by making sure your man will be in."

Telephone First Always.

MAN WHO PROVED ALIBI HERE ARRESTED IN BORO

After being arrested by Sergeant Maurice Higgins, of the local police force two weeks ago on suspicion, and successfully proving an alibi, Stephen Galloway, of 19 Harmony street, North Plainfield, was taken into custody by Marshall Geller, of the borough force, Saturday night. The charge lodged against him was of a serious nature and was similar to the one he was alleged to have committed on this side of the brook. In the borough court this morning Recorder Hand sentenced Galloway to a term of 100 days in the Somerset county jail in default of $100 fine.

When arrested in Plainfield Galloway was positively identified by one of his accusers but two others refused to commit themselves when sought by Sergeant Higgins, owing to the prominence they would receive as complainants.

GOVERNMENT DEMANDS OPENING OF PROGRESSO

Notifies Carranza That Shipments From Port Must Not Be Stopped.

Washington, March 15.—A note demanding the opening of the Port of Progresso has been sent to General Carranza by the State Department.

This was learned on official authority today. The note was sent at the urgent request of farmers and grain men who represented to the administration that it would be impossible to harvest American crops unless the exportation of sisal from Progresso was immediately resumed. Sisal twine to the amount of two hundred million pounds will be needed for binding the American crops, and nine-tenths of the sisel used in making the twine is exported through Progresso.

While this government fully expects that Progresso will be ordered opened without trouble, the Navy Department today showed much quiet activity. It was denied that orders had been issued for naval vessels to concentrate at or near the port or that the State Department had requested any mobilization. The cruiser Des Moines now is in the harbor of Progresso and it is believed she will be capable of caring for the situation

LINE-GREENWOOD WEDDING DATE IS SET FOR MAY 21

Charles H. Line, son of Allie Line, of 248 East Front street, and formerly assistant physical director of the local Y. M. C. A., will wed Miss Bessie Greenwood, of Providence, R. I., at that place Friday evening, May 21. The young couple's engagement was announced March 8. The ceremony will be a quiet affair, attended only by the immediate families, and it will be performed by the Rev. Balantyne, formerly religious instructor in Oberlin College, and more recently connected with the International Y. M. C. A. Training College at Springfield, Mass., from which Mr. Line was graduated in 1913.

Following the wedding the couple will leave Providence on a honeymoon trip, part of which will be spent at the bridegroom's home in this city. Mr. Line is at present membership and social secretary of the Providence Y. M. C. A. He was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1903.

FIELDER OPPOSED TO FORM OF FULL CREW BILL

Trenton, March 15.—Governor Fielder today came out with a statement that he opposes the Stevens' bill to place the operation of the full crew law in the hands of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners. The Governor's particular objection comes from the fact that the bill allows the railroads to tell the Utility Commission how many men shall constitute a train crew. The Governor did not express himself on the repeal of the full crew law in its entirety.

Mrs. Theodore G. Davis substituted for Miss Etta Raybert, soprano, at Trinity Reformed church yesterday.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of the First M. E. church, will serve a supper in the dining hall of the church, Tuesday evening, March 23.

TEPPER'S--A Store of Independent Thought and Action

In the management of their stores many merchants are governed wholly by what their competitors do. They lack initiative, and pursue the line of least resistance, preferring to copy rather than originate. Obviously a store thus managed, is managed wrong, as efficient store management results from a study of a store's requirements and the requirements of its customers—and these are seldom alike in any two stores.

The TEPPER store operates independently. Its methods are its own. It sets a pace rather than follow a lead. It is a store of originality and inspiration. Its merchandise is the best; its values the greatest, because in buying and selling it pursues an original policy that results in the best for the least.

If you are not already a customer of this store, a trial purchase will add you to our list. Now is the best time—COME!

CANDIDATES CHANGE PLACES IN CONTEST FOR TRIPS TO WEST

Race is Free For All and "Unknowns" of Today May Be "Future Greats"—Everybody Collecting Ballots for Favorites.

In today's revised vote standing of condidates, it will be noticed that several candidates have changed their positions as to relative voting strength, and from now on many changes will take place as each new vote standing appears. The next change to appear will be published on Thursday, March 18, and will include all ballots cast up to 8 p. m. on Tuesday, March 16.

Everywhere, everybody seems to be accumulating ballots for some candidate in the transcontinental and Panama-Pacific Exposition tour contest, and it looks as though some of the present "unknowns" will be among the "future greats" and probably at the next announcement.

Each day the voting procession continues, all depositing single and subscription votes for their favorites, and clipped coupons arrive at the contest office in every imaginable way.

A man will enter and after a great deal of fumbling through a ponderous pocketbook, draw out the coupon, which will be carefully deposited. Small boys, grimy-faced, in some instances, drop crumpled and well-fingered votes for their candidates. Staid old ladies in very dignified manner deposit their ballots with much seriousness.

Many of the votes are inclosed in letters wishing the candidate success and inquiring as to what the contest department "thinks of her chances." These ballots are little messages of good will and affection for those who have enrolled their names.

Who will take and retain the lead in the different districts seems to be a vital question with the candidates. It is a little early to commence to worry over that. The time that it pays to be first is on the closing night, although, of course, most persons like to be on the "band-wagon." The vote announcement today discloses the fact that no candidate has a very big lead. With well-directed efforts almost any candidate can be well up among the top of the heap in the next announcement.

Opportunities.

You see, some candidates have greater opportunities for securing votes at the commencement of the contest than others. This cuts almost no figure. The idea is, who can secure enough votes in the prescribed time to win one of these four trips.

There have been many inquiries as to the limit for entrance of new candidates. There is no time limit. Candidates may enroll at any time during the life of the contest. As fast as possible the contest representatives are calling on the candidates who have been nominated and are explaining to them fully the details of the contest plan. If someone has not already seen you, come in and consult the contest manager. He may be able to whisper some subtle secrets as to different methods of securing votes, and can possibly develop voting strength for you which you have no idea you could control. If you have been wondering could you enter and win, at least give him an opportunity to discuss it with you. He may be able to show you where you can win.

Although you may consider that you are getting a late start in the race, careful planning and execution can bring you to the top of the list at the next announcement of vote standings. It would only take a few subscriptions to lead the list right now—a very few would do the trick. Why don't you try. Why let such a magnificent opportunity get away from you. Many people do not enter contests at the start because they did not know it would be so easy to lead. Last Thursday's vote list shows just what has been done during the first two weeks of the contest. Why not be one of the party.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday.

A Soldier's View

British are we to our inmost bones,
Teuton are ye in your deepest veins.
We cannot stall for your growls and groans;
Ye cannot fall for our plaints and pains.
For war is war with a single law,
"Forward, and do your worst!"
Forced to forget what this means—and yet
All of us human first.
When your rulers will ye will strike to kill,
For men of our mold we rate you.
But the sword one draws in a country's cause
Shall never be taught to hate you.

Birthday of Christ in the zone of wrath:
Out of their trenches—a sight to see,
Brave German soldiers come singly forth,
Each with a candle and Christmas tree.
For love is love, and we saw above
The star that the angels blest,
And we answered you then just as men to men,
"Welcome and do your best!"
Though again we stand with a gun in hand
For the blood of the foeman waiting,
In the kindly light of that Christmas night
There's no room left for hating.

Statesmen, directors of public thought,
Oh, if you saw—if you only knew!
Felt with the hearts of the men who've fought,
Saw at first sight with a soldier's view!
For the rage divine on the firing line
Is quelled when the bugles cease,
But what can abate the hidebound hate
Of an armed resentful peace?
There's fire and shot when the blood runs hot
And terrible tales to tell.
But your stony hate in affairs of state
Must clinker the bars of hell.

SEEK TO UNITE 250,000 IN NEW ARMY LEAGUE.

Major General Wood and Other Noted Men Express Their Approval.

The formation of "the American legion," an organization of first reserves for national defense, has been announced by Dr. J. E. Hausmann of New York, an ex-army officer, and Captain Gordon Johnston, U. S. A., aid on the staff of Major General Leonard Wood, in a formal statement made in behalf of a group of army and navy men who are unofficially co-operating with prominent civilians.

Dr. Hausmann and Captain Johnston emphasized two principles behind the movement. They wanted to make clear, first, that it is not an attempt at militarism, and, second, that while all who are loyal and patriotic are wanted to join, there will be small place in its ranks for hyphenated Americans.

The project contemplates the establishment of a first reserve of between 250,000 and 300,000 men who will include many formerly in the army, the navy, or the militia, and who will be ready for instant response to any call in an emergency. Offices have been opened in the Army building in Whitehall street, New York, and articles of incorporation will be filed at Albany.

"The integrity and value of the American legion is guaranteed by the character of the prominent men who will stand sponsor to it," says the statement. "It has already received the unofficial indorsement of Major General Leonard Wood, the strong approval of former President Roosevelt and of numerous other men of national prominence, and while the personnel of its executive committee and board of honorary advisers has not yet been finally decided upon, it can be stated in advance that it will include several former secretaries of the army and navy, former United States senators, college presidents, former governors, leading newspaper men, magazine editors, etc."

"LOVE SHIP" SAILS SOON.

Easter Argosy Takes American Gifts to Belgium's War Babies.

A steamer loaded with food for the Belgians, to be known as the "Easter Argosy—A Ship of Life and Love," will sail from New York soon, consigned nominally to Princess Marie Jose, the seven-year-old daughter of the king and queen of the Belgians.

The cargo of the ship will be the gift of the children of America to the 30,000 war babies, the mothers and the children of Belgium. The cargo is being gathered by the Belgian relief fund committee of 8 and 10 Bridge street, New York, and with every gift to the ship will go a letter from the giver to the little Belgian princess.

The Easter Argosy ship has already been brought to the attention of the officials of the Belgian government, and the government has informed the Belgian committee in New York that "if, as we expect, our beloved country survives this war and is enabled to rehabilitate itself the albums sent to the Princess Marie Jose, recording the generosity of the children of America and their elders, will be placed in the Museum of Political History of the Belgian nation and by special arrangement with King Albert will become a part of the permanent records of Belgium."

At the offices of the Belgian relief committee it was said that several thousand letters, each inclosing a subscription of 25 cents or more, have been received for the ship. While the great bulk of these letters are from children, there are many from grown people, among the latter some of the best known people of the country.

NETHERWOOD HOME SUFFERS $150 DAMAGE BY FLAMES

The home of David Hand, at Leland and Berkeley avenues, was damaged by fire yesterday to the extent of about $150. The flames are believed to have originated from a bonfire spark which lodged on the roof near the chimney, where the flashing was of tar paper. The house is slate covered, but the blaze worked its way down through and was rapidly making headway when a member of the family noticed it.

Fire headquarters was called on the telephone, and Chief Doane sent out No. 4 Company. The latter saw that a brisk fire was in progress, and turned in an alarm from box 69 at 12:05. The damage was kept low through the exclusive use of chemicals, although hydrant streams were laid in for an emergency. The damage is covered by insurance.

ANNUAL POLICE CRUSADE AGAINST MOTOR SPEEDERS

Another splurge of activity in the local police department's corps of speed-checkers was evidenced yesterday afternoon when two alleged violators of the motor vehicles' laws were taken into custody by Patrolman John Neylon. Louis Cohen, giving his address as 231 Muhlenberg place, was arrested on West Front street, charged with driving a machine at a twenty-five mile an hour clip. His case was laid over until Saturday morning by Judge DeMeza. Abraham Karno, of Bound Brook, when arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the police court this morning on a similar charge was granted a postponement until tomorrow morning.

The local magistrate announced this morning that the annual spring crusade against auto speeders would now be waged in earnest and law violators brought before him and found guilty must expect to be fined.

PATRIOTIC ORDER GIVES A PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT

Camp No. 1, P. O. of A., held another of its very enjoyable entertainments in the camp rooms in the Babcock building, Saturday night. The attendance was very large, and under the direction of Mrs. Andrew McDowell, who is president of the organization, the following program was rendered.

Sketch, "Cheerful, but Musical," acted by the Misses Dorothy and Mildred Johnson and Joseph Sweitzer; solos, Leo Stern's "Spring Son" and Sumer's "I Have Won You," by Miss Adele Freeman; solos, "For You Alone" and "Tennessee, I Hear You Calling Me," by Joel Olleer; duet, Sextet from "Lucia," Miss Freeman and Mr. Olleer; sketch, "Timothy Delaney's Courtship," with the following characters: "Aunt Tabitha," Miss Mildred Johnson; "Miss Alice, her niece," Miss Dorothy Johnson; "Fritz, her nephew," Edward Gawler; "Timothy Delaney," Bernard Colvin; "Samanthy, colored maid," Joseph Sweitzer. All the numbers were ably rendered, especially the vocal numbers by Miss Freeman and Mr. Olleer, both of whom possess trained voices. In the sketch, Timothy Delaney's Courtship," Joseph Sweitzer made a big hit as the colored servant, presenting the difficult character like a veteran of the vaudeville stage. Mrs. McDowell extended a vote of thanks to all participating and to Miss Hilda Story, who accompanied on the piano during the evening. The proceeds from the affair, which netteed a large sum, will be added to the sinking fund of Camp No. 1.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Mrs. McDowell, Mrs. Peter Johnson, Mrs. Lucetta Smith, Mrs. Ida Passmore, Mrs. William Clawson, Mrs. Mary Cable, Mrs. Minie Polon, Mrs. Florence Waldron, assisted by Theodore Van Pelt and Nimrod Horton.

HOPE CHAPEL MEETINGS.

The annual meeting of the Young Mens' Association of Hope Chapel is to be held tomorrow night, at which time the election of officers will take place, and other important matters acted upon. Plans for the coming baseball season will be taken into consideration at this time.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the chapel will be held Thursday afternoon, with the election of officers as the most important item of business.

The McWilliams Bible class is to hold a business meeting of special importance Friday evening, at which time a new program of work and activities will be adopted. Several matters of especial interest are to be presented to the session.

ADVERTISING AND CHARITY.

"It Pays to Advertise" is a time worn truism which the Daily Press is continually calling to the attention of merchants and also to the readers of the paper in an effort to get them to buy advertised goods. We have occasionally mentioned specific cases in which the value of newspaper publicity has been demonstrated, but the report of the work of the Committee on the Unemployed, which was printed in our news columns on Friday night, affords a most remarkable example. Says the report:

All money raised from individuals has been secured by general appeal. There has been no personal solicitation whatever, so that every dollar was the voluntary gift of the subscriber.

So far as we know all the "general appeal" mentioned was made through advertisements inserted in the Plainfield newspapers, part of them being paid for, and the balance of the space being donated. Through this method $3,200 was raised. This coupled with the money which the commission has received by being able to sell wood, and from other sources, has provided enough to care for the city's unemployed in a winter when there have been a dozen or more demands upon our people.

But the Plainfield example of the benefits derived from advertising for the support of charities is not the only one that can be cited. In Philadelphia full page advertisements were taken in all the newspapers for three days, and on these three days $60,000 was subscribed for the use of the unemployed. The day after the advertising was discontinued the subscriptions dropped to $809, although the news columns contained the strongest kind of appeals for funds. The first day the advertisements appeared $39,000 was pledged, and on the second day $14,000. Out of a total of $72,000 raised, $60,000 of it came on the three days the advertisements appeared, and the balance as a result of news stories. Does anything prove more conclusively than this that the people read the advertisements as closely, or more so, than they do the news columns of any newspaper.

Judge Tennant has closed all the saloons in Hudson county on Sundays. The liquor dealers are protesting that they cannot make a living unless they are permitted to remain open seven days in the week. One of the officials of the county says that a demand should be made on the judge to rescind his order, so that the county can continue to derive the revenue from the licenses. Probably it has never occurred to the protestants that the county would be a great deal better off with one-tenth of the present number of licensed places and the establishment of high licenses. No one wants revenue if it must be gained by breaking the Sabbath.

The old plan to befog the local option issue has made its annual appearance in the House at Trenton. A Hudson county Assemblyman has introduced a bill which would make it possible for the people to vote on the question of whether or not the saloons shall remain open on Sunday, as well as other days in the week. This is probably the beginning of a movement to emasculate the local option bill in such a way that those who now favor it will be opposed to it.

There's nothing that gives quite so much pleasure to a newspaper man as the recording of the receipt of contributions for some worthy cause. Just now the most crying need seems to be for condensed milk for the starving Belgian babies, and Plainfielders have given liberally to the cause. There is plenty of space in every issue of the Press, however, to acknowledge all the contributions that may be sent to us.

The decision of the police board to ask for a new ordinance which will make it practical to place Captain John J. Flynn on day duty is a wise one. It's a farce to keep an able man doing clerical work at night. The readjustment proposed will also give the roundsmen who now never get any day work, a chance to be relieved of the tedious night patrolling they have been required to do for many months.

It is gratifying to know that the work of the Commission on the Unemployed has been so successful. Plainfielders have again demonstrated that this city knows how to do things. The men who have actively taken charge of the relief work deserve the thanks of the entire community for the manner in which they solved a problem that has perplexed every city in the country this year.

According to despatches the Kaiser has said that he is going to use all possible means of destruction. An exchange suggests that the Katzenjammer Kids be called to the colors, to which we add Scoop and the Boss.

If Harry K. Thaw did not conspire to escape from Matawan, will some reader kindly inform us how it was all arranged. Surely the ways of New York juries, like those of the famous heathen Chinee, are "peculiar."

ENTERTAINMENT IN HONOR OF MISS HAZEL MARSH

A pleasant afternoon affair was given Friday by Miss Mary Krudop, of Washington avenue, Newark, in honor of Miss Hazel Marsh, of this city. The afternoon was spent in playing "500," the honors being awarded to Mrs. Alfred Lacey, Mrs. Ralph Taylor and Miss Marsh. The prize awarded Miss Marsh proved to be a variety shower of beautiful gifts from her many friends. Miss Marsh is to be married this spring to Ernest Washburn, of Glen Falls, New York. Guests were present from New York, Plainfield and Newark.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The feature photo-play at Proctor's Theatre today and tomorrow will be the five-part photo-play, "A Daughter of the People." The stage play of the same name was written by J. Searle Dawley who has taken it as a basis for the scenario of this picture, which was produced by the Dyreda Art Film Corporation, of which Dawley is the director-general. Laura Sawyer plays "Dell" in this picture, the "Daughter of the People." In this trio you have a combination of acting ability without equal, perhaps, in any recent picture production. The serial picture, "Zudora," or "The Twenty Million Dollar Mystery," and "Runaway June," which have been shown at Proctor's Theatre Wednesdays and Thursdays have been discontinued and in their place feature Paramount pictures will be presented. The first of these under the new contract will be "Paradise Lost," scheduled for Wednesday, and Jack London's "The Odyssey of the North" on Thursday. Many other notable productions have been booked and moving picture devotees who crave the five-part comedies and dramas are reminded that Proctor's Theatre will have the best and latest releases from the big concern.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

One of the most delightful stories that has even been placed before the public in dramatic form is that embodied in the play of "Jack's Romance," which will be presented at the Plainfield Theatre next Saturday night, March 20, by Fiske O'Hara and his excellent company of players. It relates how a young Irish gentleman, in the middle of the eighteenth century returns home to Ireland after an absence of several years in Canada, and wishing to observe conditions in the home of his brother, with whom he parted in anger, he comes in disguise. On the way he meets with a highwayman robbing a coach and puts the knight of the road to flight, thus winning the gratitude of the occupant of the coach, the fair daughter of the Duke of Ormonde. He obtains a place as secretary in his brother's house and while there makes love to and wins the daughter of Ormonde, discovers and unmasks the highwayman and reveals himself to his kindred. The play gives Mr. O'Hara ample opportunity for the introduction of a number of very charming Irish melodies which he sings in his inimitable style. He brings a fine company and a carload of handsome scenery and costumes.

The management of the Plainfield Theatre takes pleasure in announcing that it has secured an unusually notable picture production for Friday afternoon and night and Saturday afternoon of this week. The feature is Rip Van Winkle, made immortal by the late Joseph Jefferson and now continued by his son, Thomas Jefferson, who will be seen in the leading role of "Rip," returning home after his twenty years slumber in the mountains. The picture is complete in all the familiar details of the stage version and has many more which the wide scope of the camera permits. The production is given only in the afternoon of Saturday as Fiske O'Hara, who is billed to appear at the theatre on that date cannot reach the city in time to give a matinee, confining himself to the one performance at night. School children attending the performance of Rip Van Winkle Saturday afternoon will be admitted at a special price of five cents, if accompanied by parents or guardians. Regular prices will prevail at the other presentations. The attraction at the Plainfield Theatre today and tomorrow will be the feature photo-play in four parts, "The Country Mouse," acted by Hobart Bosworth and a superb company. The attraction Wednesday and Thursday will be May Irwin's comedy, "Mrs. Black is Back," with the world-famous comedienne posing her successful character of "Mrs. Black."

PHASES OF SOCIAL LIFE ARE DENOUNCED

Rev. F. L. Greene Preaches Forceful Sermon at Young Folks' Service.

The second in a series of "Young Peoples' Nights" was observed at Hope Chapel last evening, when a large congregation, composed chiefly of young people and members of the various Sunday-school organizations, were in attendance. Rev. Frederi. L. Greene, pastor of the chapel, was in charge of the service, and was assisted by Frank Rimmer and Walter I. Firstbrook.

Mr. Greene, during the course of his sermon, the text of which was, "What shall it profit a man to gain the whole world, and loose his own soul," denounced as unwholesome many of the phrases of the social life as indulged in by the young people of the day. The dangers of the habit of drinking for "social" reasons on the part of young men, the keeping of indecent company, and the yielding to the temptation of the modern "joy-riding" were presented in great vividness by the speaker. A strong plea was made by Mr. Greene for clean living and the demand on the part of the young women about to be married that their husbands live up to the same moral standards expected of the bride-to-be. The parents who were present were urged to practice Christianity in the homes, and become regular attendants at church services in company with their children.

The sermon of last evening was one of a series of an evangelistic nature being delivered by Mr. Greene during the Lenten season at the hour of the evening services. During Holy Week, evangelistic services are to be held each evening, coming to a close Easter night. The special speakers for these meetings are to be announced later.

COMMISSION FOR RELIEF COMPLETES ORGANIZATION

President John Grier Hibben, of Princeton University, presided at a meeting in Alexander Hall, Princeton, Saturday night, the purpose of which was to complete the newly organized New Jersey State Committee of the Commission for Relief in Belgium. Dr. Hibben outlined the work.

Other officials of the State committee include George Medley and Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield. Prof. Howard McClenahan, dean of Princeton University, addressed the meeting, giving a description of conditions as he found them in Belgium and France, especially in Brussels, Mons, Dimant and Louvain. He said that the gratitude of the Belgians to America is the most touching thing one can imagine. Captain J. F. Luroy, who for three months had charge of the distribution of foodstuff in Belgium, also gave an interesting account of this work.

BELGIAN BABIES FUND.

The Daily Press has been asked to acknowledge $1, which was sent by "A Friend of the Babies," direct to Miss E. B. Hartridge, treasurer of the local Belgian Relief Commission. The cash in hand now amounts to nearly $250 toward the $310 that is necessary to make it possible to send 4,800 cans of condensed milk to Belgium. Contributions for the cause may be sent direct to the Daily Press office, and it in turn will be given to the local Belgian Relief Committee. Five dollars more have come direct to the Daily Press for the cause, one from Mrs. A. C. Penn, one from "cash," one from Mrs. C. H. Smith, and two from Mrs. C. E. Ryder.

IVAN FLOD TO SPEAK.

Ivan Flood, State secretary of young people's work for the Baptist church, will speak at the Wednesday night meeting in the Park Avenue Baptist church. He was formerly engaged in Y. M. C. A. work at Newark.

REV. MAGUIRE IN TOWN.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire, formerly of the Park Avenue Baptist church, but now of the Ruggles Street Baptist church, Boston, was in town today visiting friends.

SECOND PERFORMANCE OF "HALL OF FAME" ENJOYED

The second performance of the "Hall of Fame," given by North Plainfield school pupils Saturday night, was equally as successful as the first, and the seating capacity of Saengerbund Hall was taxed to the limit. The entertainment was a little better than on Friday night, due to the fact that the small children benefitted by their first night's appearance before the public. The Newlywed trio, consisting of Miss Marian Blair, James Goodwin and Elmer French, as the 'baby,' scored a big hit as did "Buddy" Paggalucci, who was forced to give an encore to his solo buck and wing dance.

During the performance Mrs. M H. Ewart, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, under whose auspices the entertainment was presented, and who was largely responsible for its success, was given a beautiful basket of daffodils from members of the association. The presentation was made by Dudos Van Mater, of the senior class. Miss Viola Hauser, '15, winner of the poster contest, was also presented with her prize. Dancing was enjoyed until shortly before midnight.

PLANNING MINSTREL SHOW.

A minstrel show and entertainment is being arranged by the Nonpariel Club to be held at Saengerbund Hall Thursday evening, April 15. This will be the second entertainment of this type to be put on the boards this season by this progressive organization. Special music is to be furnished on this occasion by the New Amsterdam orchestra. The committee in charge is composed of J. W. Maurey, Eugene Hill, John Stewart and Robert Stevens.

GUESTS AT A PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hillman, of East Sixth street, were the guests of honor at a party given by Mr. Hillman's parents at their home in Brooklyn Saturday night. There were about forty present and a musical program was enjoyed during the evening. Ralph and Leo Hillman, of Brooklyn, and brothers of Mr. Hillman, of this city, rendered pleasing vocal selections. Refreshments were served during the evening.

BROTHERHOOD OF YOEMEN.

The recently organized local lodge of the Brotherhood of American Yoemen will hold its regular meeting at Coward Hall this evening. The charter is still open, and will properly remain so until April 1. This fraternity is especially strong throughout the west, and is just being thoroughly introduced in this section of the country. Another lodge is shortly to be instituted at Bound Brook.

PITY THE POOR BASEBALL SLAVE; HIS IS A BITTER LOT; HE MUST ENDURE ALL MANNER OF ANNOYANCE AND DISTRESS

At a time when the Feds are doing their all to free the ballplayer from the fetters of a soulless system, much is said of the cares and distresses of the poor baseball slave. Organized baseball has him in a net, and he has no will of his own. He must do as he is bid or go back to his coal-heaver's calling. A moment's consideration of his pitiable lot may aweken a little public sympathy.

In the spring of the year, while winter still lingers in the North, he must travel to the training camp, the quick contrast of climates offering a severe shock to his system. Pullman travel alone is annoyance enough. Arriving at the camp he is placed in the care of large, rough-mannered trainers, who rub and maul him in the cruelest fashion. A detailed account of a ballplayer's treatment in the early spring would be too affecting. Let us pass on to the woes and cares that assail throughout the later season.

It is true that ballplayers traveling from town to town are entertained at the leading hotels. Very often, though, the food provided for him is not what he might wish. A ballplayer with a nice taste for filet mignon very often finds several towns on the circuit where the chef is so inept that he is obliged to do without it. And when his batting falls off they say he is sitting up late.

All through the regular season he must spend the biggest part of his afternoon at the ball park that he may earn his $3,000 per. This cuts in dreadfully on any pleasures. Occasionally they take his picture and print it in the paper, which always annoys his relatives and friends. But there is a deeper cut to his pride. He must abide the humiliation of seeing his manager pay all of his expenses.

WHIRLWIND BASKETBALL OF THE RUSHING, CRUSHING VARIETY CAUSED Y. M. C. A. TO SWEEP THE BOARDS AND EVEN UP SERIES

Plainfield High School Performers Were Mowed Down by Speedy Association Quintet and Third Contest to Decide City Championship Now Necessary—Winners in the Van From Start to Finish—Individualism Not a Factor.

Enveloped in a counterpane of bewilderment which caused them to put up a style of the court pastime that was far from creditable, considering the form displayed in previous combats, the Plainfield High School basketball representatives interscholastic league champions, were treated to a sound lacing on the Y. M. C. A. court Saturday afternoon by the association quintet. Bigger, heavier and apparently more versatile than their schoolboy opponents, the home performers rang up an advantage that read 33 to 17 at the culmination of the real fighting.

Desperate battling on the part of the winners and on the part of at least two of the red and blue youngsters, featured the encounter. While a majority of the P. H. S. delegates appeared to be wildly scrambling around the arena of play in a daze there were a couple of the Ninth street boys who really showed the true schoolboy fighting spirit. Grit and determination figured in the style of game presented by this small part of the High School outfit but without the aid of their companions, and with the Y. M. C. A. team running along with a clocklike precision, their efforts proved futile. The speedy, crushing game of the mighty Y. M. C. A. faction mowed down the schoolboys as a steam-roller would flatten a grasshopper. It was a Y. M. C. A. day, pure and simple. Familiarity with the playing court, the advantage of weight, cunningness gleaned from experience and the fact that the High School performers were caught off their guard, turned victory toward the Y. M. C. A. goal and made a third game for the city basketball championship necessary.

Saturday's struggle was equally as decisive as the beating administered to the association youths by the red and blue regiment several weeks ago. Each team now has a single scalp tucked away under its belt. The rubber match, combined with the ingredients that made Saturday's tussle a tooth and nail scrap, should be one of the hardest fought and most interesting meetings ever staged between two local rivals. Plainfield High School's advantage in genuine playing ability makes up for the Y. M. C. A. team's handicap in weight. Swiftly moving, alert to pick holes through which to shove the ball for a possible goal, familiar with each other's style of game, and supported by thirty-second degree bands of cohorts, the opposing forces are without a doubt two of the most formidable and best equipped teams that ever met to fight it out for the city title. Championship tilts have been served up on silver platters in former years, one team has had a decided edge on its rival, and the interest has been waning. Not so this year, however.

The contending forces have all the necessary credentials and the team that snatches the gonfalon will certainly be entitled to all that goes to a crown bearer. The teams have been impressed with the idea that the one in a real combat and this impression will sink deeper ere the winding of the series. A cup and seven gold medals stares the victor in the face but these trophies are only of minor concern to the fighting basketeers. One is scrapping for the glory of a deserving Alma Mater, while the other is striving to uphold the athletic standard of one of the world's greatest institutions.

The Y. M. C. A. forwards were at their best Saturday afternoon; the Plainfield High School guards were at their worst. The Y. M. C. A. guards were fit and trim for whatever came their way; the P. H. S. guards never found the basket. In center the battle was evenly waged until the Y. M. C. A. sent a "sub" to the fore in the latter stages and then Chamberlain assumed the upper hand. Many of the High School players' shots circled the iron rim of the basket only to drop out rather than through. It's folly to cry over spilt milk but the fact that horseshoe luck never lurked in the immediate vicinity of the red and blue hoop was blindingly noticeable. On the other hand Moulton and Ricketts turned a couple of the most phenomenal, pure and wholesome luck double-deckers ever caged in a fracas of this kind around Plainfield. To be sure, the field goals were few and far between, but the Y. M. C. A. forwards bagged the two point tallies at times when they dealt deadly blows at P. H. S. prospects. Moulton chalked up a quartet while Ricketts fetched three across. Dunning, romping around the court in his best form, came through with four more. Burner got one and Captain Brynairski dropped in a brace, besides holding his man without a field goal tally.

For the losing faction Captain McNamee's half dozen pointers from the foul line proved the biggest swollen spot in the returns. Chamberlain copped a pair of two pointers, Rosenson pulled down a single and Peacock got a trio of fouls and one from the field. Thus endeth the scoring tale.

Toward the end of the scrap Coach Patch pulled Rosenson from the fray. To the sideline eye it was a move engineered without discretion. Rosenson was doing his best while their were others on the floor plainly in their own way. The advent of Coudray, and possibly that of Ryder, the latter having warmed the mats for the entire contest, might have swayed the luck in a different direction. At any rate it would be far from bad judgment to experiment with the score widely separated. But the story is told and why rehash the little faults of those who handle a team like the one beaten. Nothing too good can be said of the style of play introduced by the winning team and it is one safe bet that there'll be something doing in the next match.

COURT FOR RUBBER GAME NOT YET DECIDED UPON

Followers of the Y. M. C. A.-P. H. S. basketball series, being played for the championship of the city and The Ritz trophy, will have a week's rest before the final game is played off, as the High School has a full schedule, beginning today, three games being on the list. No decision has been reached between the managers of the two teams as to the place where the last game shall take place. This will be arranged within the next few days and announcement made.

The game will probably be played either on Monday night, March 22, or the Saturday following. The schoolboys are not generally allowed to play on school nights, but some allowance may be made, as the Y. M. C. A. players cannot play any other time. Two weeks from last Saturday is unfavorable, because it is so late in the season, and players and supporters are bound to lose interest in the court game with the coming of baseball weather.

THREE ENGAGEMENTS FOR P. H. S. FORCES THIS WEEK

The Plainfield High School basketball team faces a hard trio of games this week, which commences today with the South Side High School team, of Newark. This will undoubtedly be a stiff contest as the Newarkers have been playing some of the best scholastic teams of the State this year and have many creditable victories tucked away.

Wednesday afternoon the locals will go to New Brunswick for the first game with this team and Saturday afternoon Easton will be entertained on the Ninth street court. At Easton the locals had an easy time winning.

BASKETBALL FEVER CATCHING; HERE'S ONE MORE VICTIM

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the T. A. B. Society has formed a basketball team, seventy candidates having reported, so a star quintet should be organized out of the material on hand.

A coach has been chosen and practices will begin next week. The maidens do not intend to stage any games this season but will practice faithfully and enter the field early in the fall.

STAR GLEANINGS WILL TAKE THE FLOOR AGAINST Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball players have another hard game on hand for next Saturday night when they will meet a team composed of interscholastic stars on the association court. This will not be a picked all-star school team but several of the players would undoubtedly be placed on the "stars" if a team were chosen.

Lawrence Schneider, of the Leal team, is leading the aggregation and has Dickerson and Stewart as forewards, Chamberlain center, and Peacock and himself guards. There will probably be a preliminary game of interest to local fans.

GIRL PILOTS WILL MEET TO DECIDE GAME DETAILS

There will be a meeting of the managers and coaches of the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School girls' basketball teams this afternoon to decide the place, referee and conditions of the third interscholastic game.

The Y. M. C. A. will probably be the scene of the third contest although there is some misunderstanding between the two factions, P. H. S. wishing to play the third game on the Ninth street court. As a neutral court was agreed upon in the first place for the final contest, the Y. M. C. A. will in all probability be chosen.

KEEN BATTLE FOR MASONIC HONORS

Murray and Wright in Snappy Tilt for First Place.

Murray and Wright, of the Tyrian and Essex teams, respectively, of the Masonic Bowling League, are still battling for highest individual honors with the former leading, his average being 176.21 against Wright's 174.7. Of the first five individual averages, Tyrian has three. This team is still the leader by a good margin and it will be hard for Washington to overcome its big lead. The leaders have won 33 and lost 9 against Washington's 28 wins and 14 reverses.

Iremonger leads Plainfield pinners with an average of 164.14, and John Cose is second, his mark being 163. Both of these men are on the Anchor team and the best mark of the Jerusalem team is 148.15 held by V. W. Nash, Sr. The records, kept by Secretary W. B. Martin, of Elizabeth, follow:

FEMININE CRITIC PREDICTS A BIG YEAR FOR GIRLS' BASKETBALL ON LOCAL COURTS

That basketball is the predominating sport among the feminine portion of Plainfield's enthusiastic younger set was evidenced this winter and those who have been following feminine activities this season know that the "Queen City" will have an unusually large number of representative quintets on local courts next year. Several clubs have started teams late this year but have been practicing faithfully and will enter the field early in the fall.

Both Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools will again put out representative teams, both having several of this year's players in their line-ups. Plainfield will lose its star forward, Ruth Morris, who was the main cog in winning the first interscholastic game as well as many other contests by her remarkable foul shooting. Manager Sadie Rothberg will be missing at the side center position and Margaret Eaton's position at guard will be vacant. Both forwards on the North Plainfield team will be retained and with the Misses Spencer and Burtis, the interscholastic championship for next year is clinched by the boroughites, for the city "lassies'" prospects for next year do not seem very bright. North Plainfield's loss by graduation will be felt deeply in their center position which has been filled by Miss Lucy Douglas. This "lassie" has been one big obstacle in the path of many teams. Out-jumping the majority of her rivals, her alertness and versatality together with the "do or die" determination which she possesses have resulted in many N. P. H. S. victories. Elsie Debele, who has been a valuable guard for several years, will also be among the absent ones.

The Y. W. C. A. aggregation will practice in its limited gymnasium for the few out of town games on its schedule. It is to be regretted that with such a quintet as the association has the local girls have no adequate gymnasium where they could play home games.

The Women's League, of North Plainfield, has caught the basketball fever and although it does not intend to stage any games this season it will "come back" in the fall. The sextet is composed of former and present N. P. H. S. girls.

The Chi Gamma Chi fraternity has been practicing at the Columbus Club for several weeks and expects to put on a novel attraction at their rendezvous after Lent.

The fastest aggregation, however, will be "The Plainfield Five," who again expect to return in their old form. These girls have been playing for the last two months in the Columbus Club preliminaries and have not lost a single game. The work of the Misses Helen and Ida Hummel is of an exceptional quality, the former being classed among the "star" forwards in the State with her sister a close second. The quintet also includes the Misses Marion Mair, Clara Smith, Helen Brynairski, Ellen Doughty and Mildred McAuliffe, all North Plainfield High School alumnae and one from the Plainfield High School alumnae.

FUND STARTED FOR NEW N. P. H. S. GYM NOW TOTALS $145--INTEREST IS KEEN

In addition to the good work that is now being done by the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association in the borough, that organization has taken the initiative in a movement that has long been the dream of borough athletes and athletic supporters. It was anounced at the performance held Friday night, in Saengerbund Hall, under the auspices of this association, that the surplus funds that were realized as a result of the entertainment, will be placed in a bank to be used as a fund for a gymnasium for the borough school.

The lack of a basketball court and gym, which might possibly contain a swimming pool, has always been a drawback to borough athletics. The present facilities for the court game, while they serve the purpose to a certain extent, are not what the boroughites should have. The lack of showers and washing facilities are great drawbacks, which must be endured to uphold the athletic reputation of the school. The subject of a gymnasium is not a new one, but not until now had anyone ever really taken hold of the matter with a forward step. There are undoubtedly many citizens of the borough who will be willing to support this movement and give the students what they deserve. A pool would also be a great advantage, as the majority of public schools are now taking up swimming in the general routine of school work.

The association realized about $100 as a starter for the "new gym" fund, and since the first announcement was made last Friday night there have been $44 added to this amount by voluntary subscriptions from borough citizens.

ANOTHER LOCAL BOY IN PHILLY UNIFORM

But It Was Only for An Afternoon—Jack Wilson the Lucky Gent.

Jack Wilson, captain of the Holy Cross football team, and last year one of the diamond stars in the Saurer baseball camp, has just returned from a Southern trip, during which he came in contact with Jack Martin, the local boy, who is with the Philadelphia National League Club on its spring training trip. Wilson met his fellow-townsman in Jacksonville, Fla., where the Phillies have pitched their tents.

He was an interested spectator during several of the club's workouts, and one afternoon had the honor of doning a Philly uniform. Wilson cavored around the diamond with Martin and the other recruits, getting some tips from the club coaches.

According to Wilson, Martin is going "great guns" in the Southern clime. He is knocking the cover off the horsehide and performing in a sensational manner in shortfield. Wilson claims that Martin is "in right" with the Philly management, and, according to his dope, the Plainfielder will be among the regulars on the Quakertown team when the season blows around.

QUERY COLUMN WILL BE RESUMED BY THE PRESS

The "Queries, Comment and Answers" column, a feature that proved itself vastly popular with readers of this paper, will be resumed in tomorrow's issue. Many requests for a continuance of this department have been made, and an accumulation of queries has been received.

The first installment will include queries that have been in our possession a number of weeks. It will be impossible to answer all the same day, but they will be disposed of in the order received.

HAND GETTING READY.

"Nips" Hand, the pride of the Scotch Plains' baseball fans, is getting in trim for the opening of the season, now only a few weeks off. Hand expects to do the backstop work for the Worcester team of the New England League.

PUBLIC SERVICE RAILWAY'S RECORD FOR SAFETY

Company's Efforts to Conserve Lives and Health of Patrons and Employes Win High Commendation from Judges in Nation-Wide Contest for the Anthony N. Brady Medal

DURING THREE YEARS 1,194,793,266 PASSENGERS WERE CARRIED WITHOUT A SINGLE FATALITY DUE TO COLLISIONS BETWEEN CARS OR DERAILMENTS

More than a Million a Day and Not a Passenger Killed on the Cars

The Object, the Offer and the Conditions:

Public Service Railway was one of the first transportation companies in the country to put the "Safety First" principle into actual practice in a scientific and systematic manner.

Public Service Railway believes implicity in the Code of Principles of the American Electric Railway Association, which Code the President of Public Service helped to frame. The opening article of that Code reads:

"The first obligation of public utilities engaged in transporation is service to the public."

"The first essential of service is safety."

Because of the work it has accomplished along safety conservation lines Public Service Railway entered the contest for the Brady medal.

The Anthony N. Brady medal was offered by the American Museum of Safety to the Electric Railway Company that could demonstrate by results that it did more than any other electric company in the country to safeguard the safety and health of its patrons and employes. Many roads competed. The selection of the winner was left to the following eminent gentlemen:

BION J. ARNOLD,
Chairman of the Board of Supervising Engineers, Chicago.
PROF. GEORGE F. SWAIN,
Massachusetts Institute of Technology.
JAMES H. McGRAW,
President McGraw Publishing Company, of New York.
WILLIAM J. FRENCH,
Industrial Accident Commissioner of California.
FRANK J. SPRAGUE,
Consulting Enigneer, New York.

Certain conditions were agreed upon to govern the competition and to these all the contestants submitted. They involved the presentation of facts covering the measures adopted to conserve Safety and Health and the results achieved from the use of Protective Devices at Points of Danger.

Safety Devices for Cars, Buildings, Roadways.
High Standards with regard to Inspection.
Maintenance and Improvement of Rolling Stock.
Care in Selection of Employes.
Periodical Examination of Employes.
Rules and Discipline.
Educational Measures Affecting the Public.
Educational Measures Affecting the Employes.
First Aid to the Injured, Including Instruction and Training of Employes.
Attention to Lighting, Ventilation and Cleanliness.

"That Honorable Mention Should Be Awarded to Public Service Railway Co of New Jersey, which was a Close Second," Was the way the Judges' Verdict Read

FIRST HONORS WERE GIVEN, NOT TO ANOTHER SURFACE ROAD, BUT TO A COMPANY WHICH OPERATES IN PART ON THE SURFACE AND IN PART IN SUBWAYS AND OVERHEAD, CONDITIONS WHICH TEND TO LESSEN THE ACCIDENT HAZARD. NO OTHER SURFACE ROAD WAS ADJUDGED TO BE UP TO THE SAME HIGH STANDARD THAT WAS ACCORDED THE PUBLIC SERVICE RAILWAY.

PUBLIC SERVICE RAILWAY BEGAN ITS EFFORTS TO PROMOTE AND SAFEGUARD THE LIVES OF ITS PATRONS AND EMPLOYES YEARS BEFORE ANY CONTEST WAS THOUGHT OF. ITS ENTRY FOR THE BRADY MEDAL WAS AN INCIDENT. ITS MAIN PURPOSE WAS, IS AND WILL CONTINUE TO BE TO TRANSPORT THE PUBLIC SAFELY. THE COMPANY MANAGEMENT AND THE COMPANY EMPLOYES WILL PURSUE THE POLICY OF DOING EVERYTHING POSSIBLE TO ELIMINATE ACCIDENTS AND CONSERVE LIFE AND HEALTH.

IT ASKS FOR THE CO-OPERATION OF THE PUBLIC SO THAT THE GOOD WORK MAY BE MAINTAINED FOR THE BENEFIT OF ALL.

GREATEST HORSE GAME OF BASEBALL WAS A FROLIC; THE PLAYERS SAT ON CHAIRS

Roger Bresnahan likes to tell the story about the time Steve Evans played through a game in the outfield seated at ease upon a chair and with a parasol in one hand carefully shading his eyes from the sun. This yarn of Roger's, however, has little indeed on the one the old Cubs relate of a game they played several years ago at Shreveport, La.

The game was a practice affair between the Cubs and the local team and had started out in a rather listless manner. There were few spectators and the players seemed to be taking little interest. Lee Garvin, catcher, justly celebrated for his whimsicality and caprice, had an idea along about the second inning, and to give the game a bit of interest he sat behind the bat on a chair to catch with his pipe thrust through his mask.

The notion seemed to appeal to others of the players. Several of them dashed to the grandstand, and, procuring camp stools, resumed their positions on the field, much better pleased with the change.

Frank Chance and the Shreveport manager sat on the bench and bellowed their indignation and disapproval. But the absurdity of it all impressed them, and they became as eager over the thing as the rest of the men. They were soon seated at the side lines coaching.

Every player was required to sit on a chair, even the batters. Baserunners carried their chairs with them as they ran. The game lasted for some six inings, and the Cubs won with only a small margin.

FORMER SCHOLASTIC STARS WILL MAKE RIVALS HUSTLE

The Columbus Club will line up against the Y. M. H. A. Thursday night, while the Plainfield girls' five will appear in the preliminary against the Y. W. H. A. The Y. W. H. A. has been playing fine basketball lately, and an exciting contest is due to be staged.

The Y. W. H. A. has several former High School stars in its line-up, including the two Solomon sisters, who made a fine combination in 1912. Miss Sadie Rothberg will play the center position for the visitors.

MASONIC SCHEDULE

The Anchor team, of the Masonic League, will get into action tonight against the Tyrian Five and Hermann will play Essex. Wednesday night Azure is booked to meet Jerusalem. The game between Tyrian and Orient scheduled for Thursday night, has been postponed and will probably be played on March 29 or April 1.

AND STILL THEY BOWL.

The Elks' and Park Club senior bowling teams will meet tonight on the latters' alleys. This is the first match of the thir series and a return match will probably be played in the near future on the Watchung avenue lanes.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

TENTH EPISODE.

A Prisoner on the Yacht.

CHAPTER I.

NED WARNER, in front of the blazing windows of the New York cafe, stood as one in a daze, deaf to all the words of Bobbie and Iris Blethering, who feared, from the ashen pallor of his face, that his murderous frenzy might react upon himself. He saw again his lovely runaway bride being forced out of the cafe against her will by the man with the white mustache and that infernal scoundrel with the black Vandyke, Gilbert Blye! He saw himself prevented by the frightened Bobbie and Iris and the solicitous waiters from dashing among the glittering tables and grappling Blye by the throat and strangling him to death. He saw himself rushing to the ornate entrance through which they had taken his beautiful June and arriving in time only to see her whirl away into the night in Blye's luxurious limousine, the heavy man with the thick eyelids up in front with the driver, the middle aged woman and the vivacious brunette with concern and fright on their pale faces as the dome light of the car shone down upon them, and on the rear seat with June the two men who had carried her away by violence, the white mustached man laughing, and the dark, handsome face of Gilbert Blye bending over June with that suave smile on his lips.

Too late! Too late for anything but his stupor. The limousine had turned the corner. On that side of the cafe there was not a taxi to be seen. Bobbie's car stood in front, on the other street. While Iris endeavored to arouse the stupefied Ned, Bobbie ran around and brought his roadster. They drove up to the corner and turned down the street through which the limousine had disappeared, but where in all that wilderness of moving vehicles could the track of June be found? Nowhere! It was as if the earth had opened and swallowed her up.

It might as well, for June, in a swift motorboat with the gay party which had kidnaped her from the cafe, was then swiftly approaching a long, low yacht which loomed gracefully above them in the misty river.

June's struggles were useless in that heaving water, and her cries of protest were unheard in that lonely waste. Strong arms lifted her to her feet. A strong hand from above grasped hers, and she was pulled up to the deck. Below her she heard the laughter of the three men who had abducted her, and with their laughter blended the shrill, high voice of that vivacious brunette, Tommy Thomas. June's heart sent out a wild call to Ned. This had been the first time she had seen his face since the day of their wedding.

That Infernal Scoundrel With the Black Vandyke, Gilbert Blye!

At the door of the sumptuously fitted crimson and gold salon on the yacht the tottering June was confronted by a stolid steward, with gray mutton chop whiskers, and a puckered looking stewardess, who wore, as if habitually, a half whimper.

"The dearie looks faint," said the stewardess.

"Well, bring the young lady a glass of wine, you," gruffly ordered the steward.

Mrs. Villard came in and dropped in a chair, while the vivacious Tommy danced over to the gold lacquered piano, its beautiful marine view painted by the famous Velaz. Blye and the white mustached Cunningham and the heavy Edwards followed, laughing, as Wilkins wheeled in from the pantry a portable buffet, its frosty topped bottles packed in glistening ice.

"Have a taste of this, dearie. It will soothe your nerves." The whining stewardess held to June's lips a glass of sherry, but June drew away from it with repugnance and, rising, hurried away from the sumptuously fitted salon. She did not know where that passageway led except that it led away from that hateful company. The stewardess followed her, the glass of sherry still in her hand. "Right in here, dearie," and she opened the door of a magnificent stateroom, its mahogany walls paneled with ivory tinted tapestry, its brass bed hung with rich lace.

June hesitated, but down the passageway came Orin Cunningham, his eyes twinkling and the laughter of wine upon his lips. June darted into the magnificent stateroom, hastily shut the door and locked it.

In the crimson and gold salon were the popping of corks, gay laughter, in which even Mrs. Villard joined, and then the loud strains of swift dance music, pounded out by the nimble fingers of Tommy Thomas.

Blye sat quietly, with that suave smile upon his lips and stroking his black Vandyke with his long, lean, white fingers, upon one of which sparkled a diamond. He rose presently, and, tiptoeing down the gangway, stopped at June's door and listened. He could hear an occasional stifled sob as June sat amid the soft cushions of the couch. Before her, through a half open door, could be seen a glimpse of a snowy white bathroom, and in the adjoining little pale blue boudoir stood June's own luggage!

Ned! That brief sight of him had filled June's whole soul with longing. Poor little runaway bride!

There were the rattle of a donkey engine and the scraping of chains on the yacht Hilarity. The anchor was coming up, and there was an instant change in the easy rocking of the craft. She shuddered, and then there was the sound of seething water as the Hilarity gathered headway. June was on her feet in an instant. She ran to the porthole and gazed out at the barely moving lights along shore. The portholes were too small to let her shoulders through. She ran to the door and opened it stealthily, then closed it and held the knob as Tommy Thomas and Orin Cunningham danced past in the salon.

The alert ear of Gilbert Blye caught the click of that latch, slight as it was, and his eyes glowed; he motioned significantly toward the corridor, and Edwards, reaching up, said something in the ear of Mrs. Villard. A slight frown crossed her brow, but she rose instantly and went down the gangway to the door of June's stateroom. She knocked, but there was no answer.

"June!" she called. "June, dear!"

No answer. Mrs. Villard listened. No sound. She went back slowly to the salon.

"You'll never make that child one of us," and she shook her head.

June sat on the couch in her stateroom with her hands locked upon her knees, staring into the white slice of brightness formed by the tiling of the bathroom, and while she pondered on what she should do Marie and Henri reached the city and stopped at a telegraph office. When they came out of that place a short, wide, thick man who had been waddling down the street, with a blunt stub of a cigar in one corner of his mouth and a look of habitual furtiveness in his little eyes, started abruptly at sight of Marie, and when the touring car started the short, wide man hung on behind, his cigar stub firmly clamped between his teeth.

The doorbell rang at the Moore home in Brynport. Stern John Moore, reading his paper beneath the portrait of June, looked up quickly, and there was a slight tremor at the corner of his paper. Aunt Debby's voice was heard:

"Why, it's Mr. Ned and Miss Iris. Why, good evenin'. The folks is to home."

Stern John Moore listened with silent attention while Mrs. Moore, her hand upon her breast, stifled the emotions to which Iris Blethering gave full play as the "kidnaping" was described.

There was but one conclusion among the men, and Ned, composing his voice

"It is a matter for the police," he declared.

as he passed from the mention of Blye, stated that conclusion.

"It is a matter for the police," he declared and picked up the telephone.

"Our daughter is in danger," said the grave voice of John Moore.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

ORCHID TULLE AND VIOLETS.

Artificial flowers play an important part in the designing of the new evening gowns. They are introduced in the gown above as corsage trimming and in little nosegays dotting the frock here and there—one of these catching the end of the long tulle scarf or end which falls from the butterfly bow at the back. Orchid tulle is used for this frock combined with and worn over self-tone satin. The sides of the tunic are of the satin—the front and skirt of tulle, also the ruffle at the foot.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

When it was barely light, Nell was awakened by a step on the stair, and it flashed upon her that her guest was up. She soon heard her husband's mother vigorously wielding a broom in the living room.

"Well, I guess she won't find much dust; the rugs have not been down two weeks," reflected Nell angrily. She thought of getting up, but Dick was asleep and she dreaded to face the old lady alone. Soon she heard her pouring water and wringing out a cloth. "She must be cleaning, and the house barely settled." Then it flashed on her that she might be washing the floors that had just been varnished.

Nell slid out of bed and putting on her bathrobe and slippers went out. Madam Morton was on her knees rubbing soap on a cloth preparatory to scouring the new varnish. What should she do?

"Oh! good morning," she called. "You are up early."

"Early!" snorted the old lady. "It must be six o'clock."

She was just ready to plump the soapy rag on the newly varnished floor.

"Please don't put soap on the new varnish, mother; the workman told me not to touch it with soap."

"It must be a queer sort of a floor that you can't wash with good soap suds," her mother-in-law exclaimed, her rag poised in air.

"You see, it was varnished only last week," explained Nell in a conciliatory tone. "I keep it waxed and use my oil mop on it."

"Well, of all the new-fangled notions that ever I heard of!" And the astonished woman dropped the soapy rag in the pail.

"We don't want you to be working while you are here," continued Nell in her most persuasive tone. "You should have a good rest during the visit."

"I'm no hand to sit around or lie abed in the morning. People who sleep the morning away lose the best part of the day," proclaimed Madam Morton.

"We enjoy the evenings so much that we never go to bed very early, and Dick is so tired mornings that we sleep until the last minute," said Nell.

"Why don't you call him Richard? That's his name, and when a man's married it's time he had a little dignity."

She had risen from the floor and was wiping her hands on her apron. Nell did not reply, but two bright red spots burned in her cheeks.

"I'll go and get dressed and get breakfast. Don't you want to take a look at our yard? We think it is going to be very pleasant." Nell felt it would be safer to have her guest out of the house while she dressed. "Here's a shawl to throw over your head."

Nell breathed a sigh of relief when she heard the door close behind the old lady.

"What you up so early for?" asked Dick, as she re-entered the bedroom.

"I rushed out to save the new varnish from a baptism of soap and water. Your mother has swept and cleaned for the last hour." Nell began dropping on her skirts.

"If that's not like her," laughed Dick. "That's her way of enjoying herself. In her early days she had to work hard and now she doesn't know how else to put in her time."

"I am going to take special care that I do not form such habits," laughed Nell.

Household Hints

FOR ST. PATRICK'S DAY

St. Patrick's day is an ideal day to entertain, for nothing is prettier than a color scheme of green and white for table decorations and to carry it out in all the appointments throughout the house and in the luncheon or dinner menu.

The luncheon cloth may be trimmed with shamrocks and harps, following the border of the cloth, while the centerpiece may be a basket of white flowers intermingled with green, or a pretty green fern.

The place cards may be in the form of little green hats with pipes in the band, or small white cards designed in green, while the bon bon dishes may be in the form of pigs, which stand on a larger paper shamrock, and should be filled with many pretty little things displayed in the stores now which would make a table for a St. Patrick day luncheon or dinner look very pretty.

Here are some recipes which could be used in a St. Patrick's day luncheon or dinner:

Salad in Green Pepper Cases—One bunch celery, half pound English walnut meats, two large apples and one head lettuce. Chop, mix all together and serve in green pepper cases with mayonnaise or French dressing. Besides being very pretty this is a very delicious salad.

St. Patrick's Day Whip—Whip one pint good cream, then add stiffly beaten whites of three eggs, half cup powdered sugar and one cup of finely powdered macaroons, one teaspoon of vanilla, half teaspoon bitter almond; color with green vegetable coloring and freeze for two hours.

St. Patrick's Cake—A very appropriate cake for St. Patrick's day: Three and one-half cups flour, three cups sugar, one cup butter, one cup milk, five eggs, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream of tartar. Rub butter and sugar to a cream, add egg yolks beaten until light colored; sift together thoroughly the flour, soda and cream of tartar, and add alternately with the milk. Lastly, add whites of eggs beaten to a stiff froth and add two teaspoons vanilla. Bake in deep round pan; when cold, cover with white icing, putting a border of green around the bottom. With vegetable coloring make pipes around the sides of the cake and a shamrock on top. In the middle of this stand a tiny harp, which is typical of the day. The pipes and shamrocks may be made of citron if so desired. This makes a very pretty decoration for the center of the table.

Cream of Asparagus Soup—Cut in inch pieces one can of asparagus and cover with boiling water slightly salted. Let come to a boil, then press through colander. Run together one tablespoon each of butter and flour and add to it a quart of rich milk. Let cool until smooth and creamy. Now add asparagus mixture and a little white pepper. Serve with croutons of toasted bread cut in shamrock shape.

A GLORIFIED SUNDAY ROAST

Wash a nice roast—veal, pork or beef. Season well with salt and pepper, dredge with flour. Place in roaster.

Cut carrots in shape of fingers and stand up around roast, then place a ring of any vegetables that you like, such as tomatoes, turnips or potatoes, around the carrots.

Cover top of roast with slices of onions.

Add water to come nearly half as high as the roast. Sprinkle well with salt and pepper. Place in moderate oven and do not uncover till you think meat is tender.

WATERWORKS FOR THE COUNTRY HOUSEWIFE

There's a woman "county agent" in South Carolina who has been blessing the women of her county by "demonstrating" the following waterworks "system":

On the outside of the kitchen wall a shelf.

On the shelf an empty molasses barrel.

In the kitchen a galvanized $1.25 sink.

From the barrel to the sink a piece of pipe.

In the pipe a fifty-cent faucet.

There's the start. Between that start and a bathroom and hot water lies many a weary day. But the smallness of this work is its bigness. Almost anybody can show people how to finish.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Adventures of Minnie Monkey.

One Monday morning Minnie Monkey's mother said to her:
"It's half-past seven, I declare!
You'd better hurry round, my dear, or you'll be late for school;
Come, let me wash your face and comb your hair."

But Minnie Monkey teased and sulked and said: "Oh, mother dear,
Please won't you let me stay at home this once?"
Her mother said to her: "My child, you'll have to go to school,
Or you'll grow up to be a perfect dunce."

So Minnie started schoolward, though she didn't want to go.
Said she: "A day like this is much too fine
To stay inside a schoolroom with a lot of stupid books;
I think I'll try a little monkey-shine."

By that Miss Minnie meant that she'd play hookey for the day;
And though it was a naughty thing to do,
She ran away from school as fast as ever she could go
Until she'd run perhaps a mile or two.

At last she stopped for want of breath and climbed up in a tree.
Said she: "I think that I'll rest here a bit."
Just then she spied a cottage not so very far away.
"I'll go," she said, "and have a look at it.

"I'm feeling rather hungry, too; I think I'll try to get A sandwich at this cottage if I can."
She never would have ventured near the place if she had known
'Twas the cottage of an Organ-Grinder man.

But as she didn't know it she ran gaily up the path
And stopped to knock politely at the door;
Then suddenly Miss Minnie found herself surrounded by
More children than she'd ever seen before.

They quickly took her in the house and laughed and shrieked for joy
While Minnie very nearly died of fright.
The thrilling things that happened to Miss Minnie after that I'll save to tell to you tomorrow night.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — SCOOP'S MIDDLE NAME IS CHARITY. — BY "HOP"

HOW WAR HINDERS MISSIONARY WORK

Rev. Edwin E. Calverley Gives Interesting Talks on Conditions in Arabia.

"How the War is Hindering Missions in Arabia," was the subject of an interesting talk given by Rev. Edwin E. Calverley, of Kuweit, Persian Gulf, at Trinity Reformed church, yesterday morning. The fact that Mr. Calverley has been associated with Dr. Paul W. Harrison, Trinity church's missionary in Arabia, increased the interest in his presence here at this time. Mr. Calverley said, in part:

"The war is hindering missions in all parts of the world, especially in Moslem lands. The Arabian Mission of the Reformed church in America has two stations in war areas on the Persian Gulf. One is at Muskat, where the local Sultan is being assisted by the British in suppressing a rebellion. This rebellion is led by a blind Mulla, who plays on the superstitions of the Arabs and promises to turn the bullets of the enemy to water, so that they will not hurt his followers. The uprising prevents the missionaries from visiting their sub-stations.

"Another station of the mission is at Burrah, the port of Mesopotamia, where the dates come from. It was recently captured from the Turks by the British. The war operations kept the missionaries from their usual school and evangelistic work, but gave them increased scope for medical service. The missionaries joined the Turkish Red Crescent Society—like the Red Cross—and crowded even the corridors of the mission hospital with wounded Turkish soldiers. Such service will retain for them the respect and friendship of the Moslems and give them greater influence when peace is restored.

"The Arabian missionaries are doing pioneer work in one of the hardest mission fields in the world, and are working with insufficient facilities and accommodations. Dr. Paul W. Harrison, who is the representative of Trinity Reformed church, had for his private quarters part of the examination room, where he prescribed for his patients, and at night he made his bed with his patients on the ground in the courtyard of his dilapidated dispensary. His removal of a vein from his own arm and transplanting it to the neck of a little idot Arab boy suffering from hydrocephations created much talk among the Arabs, and gave them new evidence of Christian love that will in time win the following of the false prophets to Christ."

Mr. Calverley spoke last night at the Netherwood Reformed church, where he again gave an interesting talk of his work.

OUTLINES PLANS FOR LAND BUREAU

Former Senator Frelinghuysen Addresses Dunellen Board of Trade on Subject.

BENEFIT TO FARMERS

All Possible Data Would Be Collected by State Department—Various Land Credit Systems Which Have Been Successful Abroad Explained.

Plans for the establishment of a land bureau in connection with the reorganization of the State Board of Agriculture, were explained last night by Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, the president, at a meeting held under the auspices of the Board of Trade of Dunellen. This department, if the two bills introduced by Senator Gaunt, and which were prepared in accord with the suggestions made by Mr. Frelinghuysen in his annual address to the State Board of Agriculture, become laws this session, will do much for the benefit of the farmers of the State.

Information relative to farms for rent; farms for sale; data concerning the soil in different parts of the State, and everything that would be of interest to the farmers, will be collected and kept on file in the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Frelinghuysen also explained the various land credit systems which some of the countries of Europe have found so useful in helping the man with brawn and brains, but who had practically no money to finance his operations. He spoke of the investigations made by his friend, former Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, of Ohio, who spent some time in this research, and who has written a book on rural credits.

Referring to the proposed reorganization of the State Board of Agriculture, Mr. Frelingnuysen said that the control would be retained by the farmers, who have control of the present Board, and the reorganization would result in greater efficiency, and with the broader powers that would be vested in the Board as a result of the enactment of the proposed legislation, more would be accomplished for the farmers throughout the State than could be done under the present plan, which is not up-to-date.

Mr. Frelinghuysen stated that if the bills were passed by the present session of the Legislature there would b a convention of the farmers, to be composed of delegates selected by the various agricultural organizations throughout the State, as heretofore, and these delegates would select the new Board of Agriculture; elect new officers, a secretary, and perfect plans for the conducting of the work under a new plan.

Mr. Frelinghuysen referred to the fact that there was now a distinct trend of "back to the soil" and told of the work of some of the associations that were maintained to encourage this movement. He also stated that the Federal Government through the Department of Agriculture, was doing some splendid work in helping those who really wanted to get back to farming, and with an effective bureau under the supervision of the State Department of Agriculture, he was confident it would do some good work in New Jersey.

Referring to the activity of the land sharks, Mr. Frelinghuysen said that a land bureau could do much to curb their activities. He said that the fake development of town lots was also a practice that must be discouraged, and if needs be restricted by legislation. He declared that legitimate development of real estate was of benefit to a community, but the fake development of land unsuitable for town sites, was detrimental to the community, ought to be stopped and the men back of such operations ought to be sent to prison.

ISAAC VAIL SUCCUMBS TO HEART TROUBLE

Well Known Resident Passes Away at His Home on Richmond Street.

Isaac Vail, aged 70 years, one of the city's best known residents, died at his home on Richmond street, yesterday afternoon within half an hour after he had been stricken with a heart attack. He had been about as usual during the day althought suffering from lumbago, an illness which he first noticed Sunday. Members of the family noticed his condition when the heart began to fail and summoned the family physician, Dr F. W. Cornwall, and Dr. Krans. The latter arrived soon after but was unable to do anything as the sufferer was beyond medical aid. Death ensued about 5:30 o'clock.

Mr. Vail was a native of Basking Ridge where he was born in 1845. He came to this city twenty years ago and engaged in the real estate business, being very active in it until a short time ago when he practicall retired. Mr. Vail never held political office but always took an active interest in civic affairs. He was a member of the First Presbyterian church and at the time the Asbestos Club was in its prime he was one of its most ardent members.

Besides his wife, Mr. Vail is survived by one son, James Simpson Vail, the latter residing at the parental home on Richmond street. There is also a sister, Mrs. George Lewis, of Mountain avenue, and a cousin, Mrs. Freeman Cadmus, of Philadelphia.

The funeral will be held at the late residence Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock and burial will be in the North Plainfield cemetery.

H. A. WOODRUFF WILL RETIRE FROM BOARD

Declines a Re-election as Trustee of Boro Board of Education.

Four trustees will be elected to the Borough Board of Education at the annual school meeting to be held at the Somerset School tonight at 8 o'clock. The retiring members are Francis L. Sill, Hiram A. Woodruff, Charles Holstein and F. O. Dunning. Mr. Woodruff has announced that he will not consider another term, but the other three members will seek re-election. Mr. Dunning's time expires now as the successor of former Mayor N. B. Smalley, but there is still another year of the unexpired term to be completed.

There are a number of candidates mentioned, including Maurice E. McGrath, W. L. Smalley, C. W. Krausse and Captain William C. Smith. There is every indication that the school meeting will be largely attended. While women cannot vote for school trustees they can vote for appropriations, and it is said that the women intend to make a strong showing. Next year's budget is to be voted upon, the total amount wanted being $28,035. The appropriation has been made for the new Harrison Avenue School. Mr. Woodruff, who is to retire, has been a trustee for twelve years and is now vice-president of the Board.

NAMES AZARIAH BEEKMAN PROSECUTOR OF SOMERSET

Trenton, March 16—Governor Fielder today sent to the Senate the name of Azariah M. Beekman, former Assemblyman from Somerset county, as prosecutor of the pleas for that county. Mr. Beekman succeeds Frederick A. Pope and will take office on April 1.

NOT STEPHEN GALLOWAY.

Owing to a misunderstanding, it was announced that Stephen Galloway was arrested by the local police some time ago when it should have been his brother. The latter was arrested by Chief Weiss, of the borough police last Saturday and was given a sentence of $100 or 90 days, in the borough court, yesterday.

P. T. A. MEETING.

The Plainfield Grammar School Parent-Teacher Association will hold a meeting in the Plainfield High School Auditorium at 7:45 tonight. All parents of pupils in the grammar grades of the High School building are cordially invited to be present.

STILL ANOTHER ONE.

Fire headquarters received an alarm this afternoon for a grass fire on Myrtle avenue near Clinton avenue. The West End company, No. 3, was sent out and extinguished the flames.

ALFRED NOYES AS A POET OF PEACE

Mrs. H. D. Hibbard Describes English Writer Who is to Appear Here Thursday.

NOTABLE POEMS READ

Monday Afternoon Club Prepares Resolutions on the Death of Miss Eliza Elvira Kenyon, the Founder of the Organization.

"As Kipling has made himself a poet of war so Noyes has made himself a poet of peace," declared Mrs. Henry D. Hibbard, in her paper on Alfred Noyes, the celebrated English poet, at the meeting of the literary department of the Monday Afternoon Club held yesterday afternoon in the Parish House of the Congregational church.

Mrs. Hibbard's paper was a most interesting one, her treatment of the poet himself and his works being carried out in a critic's style.

Alfred Noyes is a young poet of today. He is 35 years of age, being born in 1880, and at this early age he has made poetry his business. Unlike other poets who set aside a manuscript to enlarge and better it after a few years, Noyes, publishes his work just as soon as it leaves his pen. There is a rapidity and ease in his early writing that is seldom seen even in a more matured poet and his works always find an easy market.

Interspersing her talk, Mrs. Hibbard read several of the more noted of Noyes' poems many of which had been Miss E. E. Kenyon's favorites, among them being the very fantastic, "Forty Singing Seamen," "For-

MRS. GILMORE'S FUNERAL ATTENDED BY MANY FRIENDS

The funeral of Mrs. Lillian Howard Gilmore, wife of Harry Gilmore, whose death occurred Friday, was held yesterday afternoon at her late home on Union street. The service was in charge of Rev. Dr. D. COUNTY MOURNS THE DEATH OF CHAS. DODD

Funeral to Be Held at Late Home in Elizabeth on Thursday.

The funeral of Charles W. Dodd, warden of the Union County Jail, whose death occurred from apoplexy while on a New Jersey Central rain yesterday, will be held at his ate home, 15 South Union street, Elizabeth, Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. The service will be in charge of Rev. E. B. Cobb, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth, of which Mr. Dodd was a member and burial will be made in Hillside cemetery, this city, beside the body of the warden's youngest son, Charles Dodd, Jr. The latter died two years ago.

The pall bearers for the funeral have not yet been selected but they will probably be Union county officials. The flag on the Court House at Elizabeth was lowered on an order from Sheriff Otto and the sheriff also notified the prisoners in the Union County Jail of the warden's death. Deputy Warden Johnson will be in charge of the prisoners until a new warden is appointed.

All the physicians in the case are unanimous in their opinion that the fatal attack of apoplexy was brought on by Mr. Dodd's running to catch the 12:32 train at Elizabeth yesterday noon. He was an unusually fleshy man, weighing exactly 285 pounds, and was completely overcome by the exertion. Mrs. Dodd was prostrated when Sheriff Otto broke the news of her husband's death, as was also his daughter, Mrs. E. T. Hand, of this city.

When the funeral service is held, delegations will be in attendance from the Plainfield Exempt Firemen, Jerusalem Lodge of Masons, Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., and the Plainfield Police Department. Mr. Dodd's chief recreation for many years was a hunting trip to the South frequently in company with "Christy" Mathewson, the famous baseball pitcher. Speaking of the late warden to a Daily Press reporter today, a prominent Union county official paid him the following tribute.

"Warden Dodd had earned the reputation if being one of the best disciplinarians in the jails of New Jersey, which fact is attested by his having been repeatedly named as head of Union county's institution.

"During his long term of service he handled some of the most desperate criminals ever arrested in these parts and on more than one occasion his life was threatened. A few years ago he narrowly escaped being seriously injured when one of the jail inmates in passing out of the dining room attacked him with the handle of a broom.

"Warden Dodd had the respect of the inmates of the county jail and while a strict disciplinarian he was noted for his square dealing. He was ever anxious for the welfare of the inmates and while he was not given much to modern ideas which have been introduced into some of the jails and reformatories of the State he nevertheless never opposed any new departure which he believed would tend to help the prisoners reform."

THANK MAYOR FOR AID

Executive Sends Encouraging Letter to Organization—Will Give Movie Show to Explain How White Plague Is Fought.

Consideration of plans for turning the Open Air School over to the Board of Education and routine matters occupied the time of the Executive Committee of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield at the March meeting held last night in the Babcock building. A resolution was passed thanking Mayor Calkins for the active aid he has given the organization, and it was voted to later have a feature motion picture describing anti-tuberculosis work shown in one of the local theatres.

The Board of Education will probably take charge of the school work after the current year, the salary of the teacher being the only thing that is now paid. A committee from the League, consisting of Miss Mabelle Phillips, Dr. E. S. Krans and F. W. Iredell, has investigated the methods of conducting such schools in other cities, and at their suggestion a letter will be sent to the Board of Education, proposing that the present school building be taken over, without any charge for rental, and the school run as at present. An alternative is the erection of a new school on the top of the High School, or the BLOCKADE RAISES PROTEST OF U. S.

British Action Officially Declared to Be Violation of American Rights.

ORDER OF AGGRESSION

While Declining to Discuss the Matter President Wilson, It is Said, Considers the Situation as Extremely Grave.

Washington, March 16—President Wilson today, declined to discuss with visitors the British order placing a strict embargo on German shipping until he had seen the official text of the order. His callers, however, inferred from his manner, that accepting the press report of the order as correct he viewed the situation as extremely grave.

Phompt protest will be made by America to Great Britain against the terms of her order closing the seas to German trade. The text is looked upon in official circles here as presaging an unprecedented aggression on the rights of neutrals.

The American protest will take the position that non-contraband goods destined for the civil population of Germany have a legitimate right, in the absence of a blockade to go into Germany, and that neutrals have a right to obtain non-contraband goods from Germany.

Attention was called to the fact that if the text of the order, as published here, is used as a rule of operations, a British cruiser may hold up neutral vessels on all of the seven seas and haul them into a British port irrespective of the nature of the cargo.

An official of the State Department pointed out that the language employed in the order is so broad that the British cruisers lying off New York may be expected to stop any vessel bound for Germany or coming from Germany and haul her before British authorities.

The State Department has issued the following statement:

"The British embassy has received information as to the construction to be given to the statement in regard to the shipment of cotton to neutral countries of date March 8.

"The date of shipment is construed as being the date on which the ship left the port where the cotton was first put on board destined to neutral countries, in case where the contracts for sale and freight engagements or for insurance were made prior to March 2. This applies to cases where the cotton is placed on board at one port and transshipped to another, the first point governing the date.

"Article 2 applies to insurance placed before March 2 on cotton shipped to a neutral destination for neutral sale on delivery, provided it is loaded before March 16 and that the ship sails before March 31.

"The term 'contract price' means the price at which the cotton was sold at the point of destination, the contract of sale value to control.

"In case of vessels which have sailed since the first of March, and others which sail before the shippers are able to submit the requisite documents for consular certificates, the cargoes will benefit by the arrangement if the parties conform with the requirements for a consular certificate at the earliest practicable moment."

Paris, March 16—We have effectively shelled a column of the enemy, consisting of motor drawing artillery, provisions and ammunition. Fighting at moderate distances continued throughout Sunday and yesterday, with the advantage constantly with the defenders. At Przasnzsz, the Germans violently continued an artillery fire, but their infantry is unable to resist the Russian attacks. We are holding the enemy on almost the entire front with particular success in the wooded sections bordering on the River Orzyo.

French and British general offensive will begin as soon as the fields are dry and artillery can be moved over them, according to present plans. A moderate offensive was begun early in the new year to keep the allied troops in spirit and the Germans on the defensive.

The French have assembled vast quantities of munitions, so when the real offensive begins it can be carried on with sustained power for two or three months with an enormous expenditure of small arm ammunition and shells. It appears likely the French artillery has a store of 25,000,000 shells.

A long and rapid pursuit could not be sustained with the railways torn up behind retreating armies without adequate automobile transport. For this reason the French and English have gathered tens of thousands of auto trucks.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

SEWER WORK TO BE STARTED WITHIN A WEEK

It was said last evening that the work of constructing the borough's collecting sewage system will be well underway within a week. The bricks for the manholes have been distributed along Dunellen avenue, where the start will be made as also have the sewer pipe, and as soon as the ditch digger arrives work will be started at once.

At the corner of Third street and Jefferson avenue, on property owned by Albert Rajotte, a one story building the dimensions of which is 75x20 is being constructed for the accommodation of out-of-town labor by the contractors, H. K. Corbin and Company. Between 75 and 125 laborers will be employed in the construction of the system and it looks now as if this is going to be all out of town help, as to date there has been nary a local applicant for one of the jobs. The Corbin firm has charge of hiring these laborers, but they have agreed, all things being equal, to give preference to town people.

Four inspectors are to be appointed by the borough to see that the specifications of the sewage system are lived up to. One of these positions has already been filled by the appointment of G. Sumner Smith, of Grove street.

Mr. Smith has inspected the pipes which have been distributed on Dunellen avenue. The pipes are only eight inches in diameter and while Mr. Smith was inspecting them a number of citizens wanted to know whether they were storm sewer pipes as they didn't seem to think that they were of sufficient size to take care of the sanitary sewer matter. In that connection, Borough Engineer Churchill said yesterday afternoon, that the pipes which will be laid on Dunellen avenue have been laid satisfactorily by other municipalities along more compactly built up thoroughfares than Dunellen avenue.

The eight-inch pipe will be the smallest sized pipe used in the construction of the system. A pipe 15 inches in diameter will be the largest.

BOARD OF TRADE FAVORS FULL CREW BILL REPEAL

At the monthly meeting of the Board of Trade held in the Borough Hall last evening, several matters of import were considered after Senator Frelinghuysen's interesting speech on "The Reorganization of the State Board of Agriculture," which speech will be found in another column of the Daily Press.

A resolution was passed favoring the repeal of the "Full Crew" bill with the provision that the matter be placed in the hands of the State Railroad Commissioners to determine how big a crew is needed.

It was also voted to protest against the passage of Assembly bill No. 410, which would prohibit the sale of anthracite coal containing more than 5-100 of slate on the ground that the elimination of this portion of the supply from the market would result in the appreciation of the cost of fuel to consumers, large and small.

The committee in charge of the celebration of the twenty-ninth anniversary of the borough to be held in the local theatre on Monday, reported everything in readiness for the event

Following the protests of numerous residents of that section, the road committee from the Board of Freeholders visited the borough to inspect the conditions in the western end of the town. The large drainage ditches lead to the boundary line at Terrill road and there run into Plainfield and empty into Green brook. Although the ditch the other side of the road is still used for drainage purposes, it has been dammed at the town line and as a consequence residents in the vicinity of Farley avenue are flooded with water. One property owner, who has been endeavoring to sell his place, appeared at a recent borough Council meeting and said that every time he secured a party to look at his property it would be covered with water as the result of a rain storm. Mosquitoes also thrive in that section and the Freeholders have promised to give the citizens a speedy relief from prevailing conditions.

Friends and relatives of the twenty-five boy scouts who took part in the exhibition last night, gathered in the lecture room of the Baptist church to witnesses the affair. The scouts clearly showed that they had drilled hard for the exhibit and their efforts as a patrol, no one individual excelling, in "first aid," signaling, tower building, telegraphy, knot tying, and archery, drew rounds of applause from the spectators. A very interesting address on the work being done by the Boy Scouts throughout the United States was given by the Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Baptist church, and one of those responsible for the revival of Boy Scout activities locally after a decline of several years. It is expected that following the repetition of the affair tonight the proceeds will have reached an amount where it will be possible to purchase new outfits for every member of the troop.

A number of people in Scotch Plains have organized under the name of the Busy Workers and propose to hold meetings at the homes of the members at regular intervals, part of the time to be spent in profitable work and to be followed by dancing and music.

Edward Baker, who is well-known in Scotch Plains, and a brother of Joe and Jack Baker, of this place, will leave Saturday for California with the Panama-Pacific Exposition as his goal. Baker, who is considerable of a pugilist, having engaged in numerous ten round bouts for lightweight honors in Newark and other eastern cities, has signed agreements for exhibition bouts at clubs in Pittsburgh and other cities en route.

Henry L. Jesperson, Jr., has returned to his home on Martine avenue after a business trip of several weeks' duration.

The Sunday-schools in the various churches of the township are busy making preparations for the Easter Sunday exercises and the church choirs are practising special music to be rendered at the services. The teachers of the All Saints' school are scheduled to meet at the home of the Misses Kyte, on Martine avenue, this evening to start the formulating of a program.

The local members of the Westfield Golf Club will probably hear with interest of the determination of the board of trustees to make numerous improvements during the coming summer. One of the most important of these, if the necessary property can be acquired, is the enlarging of the course to an eighteen hole link. The tennis courts will also be put into first class condition. The club grounds already embrace considerable property in Fanwood township and a petition asking for a fire hydrant was recently sent to the Township Committee.

South Plainfield.

There is considerable interest being shown here in the School Board election which will be held in New Market tonight. Jeremiah TenEyck who has been a member of the Board for the last nine years has announced that he will run again. Those who have been mentioned as opposing candidates are Robert Ritter and Edward Smith. This school election seems very likely to be a lively one and the indications are that the women will take an active part. The Plainfield Transit Company will furnish enough buses to take the crowd over leaving here at 7:30 o'clock and will leave New Market at eleven.

Mrs. Thomas Brennan, of Elizabeth, has returned to her home after spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Kaine.

THOMAS M'INERNEY WAS NOT A PRISONER

He's Just a Red-blooded Young American Who Yearned for Adventure.

Yearning for another glimpse of the "Great White Way" and the attractions Greater New York holds out for the re-blooded young American, Thomas McInerney, Jr., the fourteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McInerney, of West Sixth street, had an experience Sunday night that the youngster will not soon forget. Several weeks ago "Tommy" accompanied his mother on a sight-seeing trip to the "big village." Mrs. McInerney formerly lived in the metropolis and is thoroughly familiar with all of the centers of interest located between the Battery and Bronx Park. She accordingly took the youthful Jerseyite through the Aquarium and other places too numerous to mention.

"Tommy" is an ardent admirer of Johnny McGraw's New York Giants and he had previously accompanied his "daddy" to the Polo Grounds to root for the Gothamites when they walloped Johnny Evers' "Beantowners" but his eyes never bulged with genuine juvenile wonderment as they did when he was escorted by his mother through the country-famous features that exist on Manhattan Island.

Much to the regret of the Plainfield youngster his mother had to curtail the tour before they had visited the Museum of Natural History, inducing "Tommy" to return home with her after she had religiously promised to bring him back to New York if "he was a good boy." Since that time the youth has been on his good behaviour and recently he has been led to think that the time was about ripe for another jaunt through the streets of the city made famous by its skyscrapers.

Mr. and Mrs. McInerney, in accordance with their weekly custom, attended services in St. Mary's church Sunday morning, but upon their return found that fourteen-year-old Thomas had deserted the "feathers" and was nowhere about the house. Investigation revealed the fact that he had partaken of a breakfast of coffee and coffee-cake prior to his leaving and nothing more was thought of his absence until noon-hour rolled around. Mrs. McInerney, well knowing the sharpness of her son's appetite, began to get worried over his continued absence and when he did not return in the afternoon she held a conference with the father at which time it was decided to request the police to aid them in the search for the boy.

The mother recollected her promise to take "Tommy" back to New York some day and her suspicions at once became aroused. A visit to the youngster's room revealed a tin bank which had been broken open and robbed of its contents, amounting to a little over a dollar.

Yesterday morning the telephone tingled at the local police headquarters and the voice of Lieut. Lane, of the New York city department, was heard on the other end of the line. He notified the Plainfield officer that Thomas McInerney, Jr., had just awakened after a comfortable night's snooze in the Children's Court at Twenty-third street and Seventh avenue. The senior male member of the McInerney family was acquainted with the message and he immediately set out for the metropolis. Through some misunderstanding the report on the books at the local headquarters was entered in a way that indicated that Thomas, Jr., was arrested in New York Sunday night. Such was not the case, however, and reports to that effect were erroneous.

Met by his father in the Children's Court the youthful adventurer had a long tale to relate. He told of using the bank's contents to trolley as far as Jersey City and then take the ferry across the river to New York. He visited a motion picture theatre and upon coming out thought it was about time to scoot for West Sixth street, Plainfield, N. J. He accordingly boarded an elevated train and became confused. It was impossible for him to recover his bearings and after wandering through a maze of streets and indulging in a series of train rides he finally applied to a policeman for assistance. He was provided with a night's lodging by his brass-buttoned benefactor who in turn notified the parents here.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of youthful appearance. Your hair is your crown. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—Adv.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

DRUGS AND POISONS.

Popular Delusion of the Safety of the "Purely Vegetable."

"Of all popular delusions as to drugs and chemical compounds," said a prominent chemist, "perhaps the most harmful is that concerning medicines that are 'purely vegetable.' There seems to be almost a universal impression among even the educated classes that such medicines as are composed entirely of vegetable compounds are on that account harmless, while on the other hand any mineral compound is of necessity poisonous.

"Now, as a matter of fact, not only has the question of whether a medicine is vegetable or mineral not the slightest relation to its poisonous or nonpoisonous qualities, but in practical medicine it would seem that most of the common poisons are vegetable. Look at the poisons most commonly known and note their composition. Take strychnine, aconite, opium, alcohol, digitalis, hyoscine and cocaine. Every single one of these is 'purely vegetable,' yet most of the deaths by chronic poisoning come from one of these. The most powerful poison known, 'ricine Kobert,' one five-thousandth of a grain of which will kill a grown man, is made entirely from the castor oil bean.

"On the other hand, many minerals, so far from being poisonous, are not only harmless, but soothing. Bismuth, a pure mineral, is given in quite large quantities even to small babies for the purpose of allaying inflammation, while iron is one of the most common tonics.

"Soda is not only one of the most universal and harmless of minerals, but it is also largely used in our foods. Salt is a pure mineral, yet it is not only necessary to life, but one of the greatest cleansers and preservatives known. Without it bacon and ham would be impossible and the luscious dill pickle unknown.

"Of course, there are minerals that are highly poisonous, such as mercury, arsenic and potassium in certain combinations, but they are neither more deadly nor more numerous than the vegetable poisons. This also may be said in favor of the mineral poison. It is considered by many physicians that its action is much more certain than its vegetable brother; rather, vegetable poisons are much more uncertain in their action upon the human system. Hence death by overdose is more likely to occur from a vegetable than a mineral poison when taken medicinally.

"Just how the public ever got the delusion that the 'purely vegetable' was a badge of harmlessness I do not know, but the fact remains that such is the common belief."—Washington Star.

They Used Charles Lamb.

Franking privileges in England were greatly abused in days gone by. The government employee's friends shared in his opportunities. In a letter written by Wordsworth in 1815 the poet said: "By means of a friend in London I can have my letters free. His name is Lamb, and if you will add an 'e' to his name he will not open the letters. Direct as below without anything further, 'Mr. Lambe, India house, London.'" Coleridge, too, saw that a postage saved was a postage gained and made use of the Mr. Lamb of the India house.—Charles Lamb.

Art and Nature.

Art is the revelation of man, and not merely that, but likewise the revelation of nature, speaking through man. Art pre-exists in nature, and nature is reproduced in art. As vapors from the ocean, floating landward and dissolved in rain, are carried back in rivers to the ocean, so thoughts and the semblances of things that fall upon the soul of man in showers flow out again in living streams of art and lose themselves in the great ocean, which is nature. Art and nature are not, then, discordant, but ever harmoniously working in each other.—Longfellow.

UNNECESSARY FIRES.

Thoughtlessness on the part of individuals who throw burning matches, cigars or cigarette butts into clumps of dried grass and bushes has caused the local fire department considerable trouble during the past two weeks. More than a dozen grass fires have needed the attention of the fire fighters and if one of those responsible for a blaze is caught by the police it goes without saying that he will be severely dealt with. At this time of the year the grass is particularly dry and a stray match will start a blaze that reaches threatening proportions before it is under control. Oftentimes frame structures are located near the yards and fields in which the grass fires are started and the firemen have had their hands full on several different occasions to prevent more serious blazes.

Be careful where you throw burning matches, especially if you are walking along a thoroughfare lined with grass on both sides. Be sure the match is out before you dispose of it. Do not leave bonfires lighted in fields or yards where there is any possibility of them spreading. If you discover a fire burning in a field the best recourse is to smother it with an old carpet or beat it out with a broom, but if you see it is getting beyond control call the fire department from the nearest phone or box.

WHY NOT A "PAY-UP" WEEK?

Some months ago, at a dinner of the Business Men's Credit Association, the statement was made that some five hundred or less people in Plainfield had succeeded in "sticking" Plainfield merchants to the tune of about $200,000, or perhaps a little less. That's an abuse of the credit system needing correction, and every citizen who is not prompt in paying bills due to carelessness can help make things much easier for the local merchants by getting out a check book and settling up at once.

The New Brunswick Times call's attention to a plan which has been adopted in Waukon, Iowa, of holding a "pay-up week," and it might be a good idea for Plainfielders to follow the lead, for it is said that conditions are not much better here now than they were when the speech mentioned above was made. The Times describes the plan as follows:

Jones is a butcher. He owes Brown, the tailor, for a suit of clothes. Brown owes Smith, the druggist, for medicines. Smith, the druggist owes White, the plumber, for repair work on his home, and right on without end debts are outstanding.

Now, some of these debts have been almost forgotten. Of course, someone owes Jones, the butcher, and finally he receives this money. The "Waukon idea" simply calls for all of these men owing money to set aside a certain week to be known as "Pay-up Week," and during the six working days set aside, they begin to pay up.

Jones pays Brown; Brown pays Smith; Smith pays White, and by the end of the week this list of bills has been squared.

Waukon, Iowa, has found that 2,000 bills were paid during her "Pay-Up Week," and that the banks reported merchants' accounts increased by the total of $40,000 in cash deposits. The entire community was rid of debt.

While the Plainfield merchants are not in the habit of owing each other money, it would be a fine thing if the Board of Trade, or some other civic body started the plan of a "pay-up week" in Plainfield. We do not suppose that all of the accounts carried on books could be collected, but a good many thousand dollars would undoubtedly change hands in such a week, and there would be a general cleaning up of old accounts if some of the slow payers in the residential sections could be shown that they would help the general prosperity of Plainfield by paying what they owe.

Numerous hair-breadth escapes from fatalities have been recorded recently on streets surrounding local public schools through which automobilists insist on driving their cars in a reckless manner. Particularly around the noon hour is it dangerous to drive a machine past a primary school. Efforts of teachers and janitors to keep the youngsters out of the streets have proven futile. Children are bound to seek the streets as a playground prior to and after school hours.

Unless certain individuals who pilot their cars along West Fourth street near Arlington avenue exercise more care in the future something more serious is going to happen, this being the center of the danger zone. Frequently a toddling youngster runs out in the path of an on-rushing machine and some miraculous swerves on the part of drivers have recently saved more than a score from serious injury. If the tot runs out in front of a car the driver will probably be held blameless in the event of an accident, but a little care exhibited by drivers would eliminate any possibility of a fatality.

The Elizabeth Times says that the ordinance which has been proposed by City Commissioner Hague, of Jersey City, making it a misdemeanor for anyone to cross a street except at the corners, is a bad one. The Times evidently does not know that in Washington such a ruling is strictly enforced, and has been remarkably successful in reducing accidents to the minimum. No less a personage than the President of the United States has been called down by "coppers" for violating this rule, and less important people have been taken before a magistrate and fined.

PLAN TO TRANSFER SCHOOL

Washington School, if practical. It will be also proposed that new classes, known as open-window classes, be established in the regular rooms at several of the schools for pupils not needing special care and food. The League stands ready to continue to furnish necessary outfits for the children. The school cost $1,876.90 to run last year.

On motion of C. B. Tyler, it was voted that the organization express its gratitude to Mayor Calkins for the letter which he sent accepting one of the vice-presidencies of the organization, and for the speech in which he paid tribute to the work at the dinner of the Business Men's Association on March 1. The letter from the Mayor said in part:

"I regard the work of the League as deserving public support to a greater degree, perhaps, than most organizations whereby citizens generously and voluntarily devote themselves to civic welfare. The public safety and public health stand related to the community much as food and drink stand related to the individual. Tuberculosis is not only a disease but it spreads easily and is insidious; that is, it often obtains momentum before its start has even been recognized. If this is so, the League is doing work which vitally concerns the community as a whole, not merely its general welfare, but its life, and as the community therefore might reasonably be expected at its own expense to guard its health in this, as in other directions, it certainly ought to rise generously to the support of an organization which has of its own accord stepped in to do real work.

"I regret that I have not lately been able to be as active in the League as formerly, but I heartily commend your activities and congratulate you on your organization and good management."

The moving picture which the League expects to show in one of the local theatres is a four-reel feature which has been prepared by the Universal Film Company, working with the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

A report of the Clinic Committee, prepared by E. W. Elliott, showed that since the opening of the Clinic in August, 1913, up to last month, 324 patients have been examined, and 1,220 visits have been made to the Clinic, the average per day being eight. Sixty-six cases have been diagnosed as positively tubercular. Of the total patients examined 76 were men, 84 were women and 154 children, including those who were examined for admission to the Open Air School.

ALFRED NOYES POET OF PEACE

est of Wild Time" and "The Flower of Old Japan," which represents Noyes' best narration and power of emotion.

Noyes is also a noted lyric genius, said Mrs. Hibbard. "The Moon is up, the Stars Are Bright," being the best known lyric. Noyes expresses the patriotic sentiments of the entire English people."

Many members of the club paid grateful tribute to Miss Kenyon as friend, teacher, club member and member of the community in which she has lived for so many years. The following expression of affection appreciation of the Monday Afternoon Club for the character and work of its founder was presented by a committee and adopted by the club by a rising vote:

"This Club is called together today to mark a sad event in its history—the loss of its founder.

"On March 9th the earthly life of Eliza Elvira Kenyon came to a close that she might enter one larger and more abundant.

"Perhaps she did not ask more years, as she had long passed the allotted age of man, but we feel that we might have asked it for her. She seemed even in her long life not to have given us all she had to give, for she was ever giving in richness and fullness of thought, and when in her physical weakness she spoke to us, there was the same keen appreciation as in past years of all that is beautiful in literature and art.

"We shall miss her dignified presence among us, that quiet repose that produced calm though no word was spoken. We shall remember her open mind, with no narrow pride in outgrown ways, and no unwillingness to see the good in change which promised progress.

"The interests of this club were very near her heart, and doubtless she had large expectations for its future. She had no faith in the superficial veneer which sometimes passes for culture; she required facts interpreted by intellect and knowledge applied to the betterment and enrichment of life.

"We best hold her memory in reverence by working in her spirit and striving to fulfill the purposes for which she labored. She has passed from us full of years and honors.

"May her rest be sweet,
"May perpetual light shine upon her."

On Thursday afternoon the members of the club and their friends will have the opportunity to hear Alfred Noyes personally, who will appear at the Plainfield High School auditorium in a recital of his poems. This is a splendid chance for those who have been studying the life and works of the poet to get a closer view of the man himself.

SELECTING HER EASTER BONNET

CANDIDATES CLIPPING WAY TO THE PANAMA EXPOSITION

Rain of Ballots for Contestants While Scissors Are Busy—Race for Four Splendid Trips on in Earnest.

The merry war of ballots continues with unceasing ardor, and it is clip, clip, clip on to victory.

Already the mercants a.e said to have noticed an increased demand for scissors, and were at a loss to understand the heavy run on the market for long, sharp ones.

The reason has been discovered. It is because so many who have friends aspiring to be trip winners in the Trans-continental and Panama-Pacific Exposition Tour contest are minus a good sharp pair of scissors, and are purchasing them so as to be able to clip neatly the ballots.

It looks as if the scissors might be completely demoralized for some of the ballots taken from the ballot box yesterday were not clipped at all, but simply torn from the paper and deposited. Ballots must be neatly trimmed when voted. This rule is not made in harshness, but from necessity and in a kindly spirit. It is also a material assistance to those assigned to the counting to have the little slips tied in packages and the numbers marked thereon. Many are now doing this.

Rumors are rife about different efforts that have been made to secure votes, and attempts on the part of some of the candidates to discourage their sister candidates. The contest department being familiar with these rumors has taken no action, believing that they would go unheeded by the candidates approached. In fact in many cases it has proven to be the necessary incentive to spur such candidates on to greater efforts knowing that, even though temporarily down in the lists, they could demonstrate that they were in to win.

Trouble is not new. There is always a spark plug that isn't working. People have been known to fool with the "Danger Dynamite," sign, and people have a mania for touching places marked "Fresh Paint" to see if it is really fresh. Knowing this, the contest manager has ignored the different rumors, but feels that a friendly hint to all candidates to let their sister candidates alone may be in order. Do not bother them or interfere with them.

Think well before taking any action into which overzealousness might lead you. Consult with the tour department or your advisers and you can be sure that no clever, legitimate plan will be discouraged.

The next announcement of the standings of the candidates will appear in Thursday's Press. No votes received after 8 o'clock tonight will be counted for Thursday's paper, but will be held over until the following publication.

There will be no change in the vote schedule as printed in the first announcement, on the back of subscription blanks and in the prospectus.

The management of the Press assures all agents that the contest will not affect them in any way.

Turn in you subscriptions so that we can commence the delivery of the Press to new subscribers without delay. By so doing you are not obliged to vote the ballot issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions until the end of the contest, if you do not wish to do so. The only ballot which you have to vote is the one you cut from the Press. This must be voted on or before the date printed on each.

Special Announcement.

The Tour Department is on the second floor, room No. 7, Press building, and entrance is at 221 Park avenue. For the convenience of the candidates and their friends the Tour Department will be open between 7 and 8 o'clock each evening except Sunday.

Special Notice.

Candidates and their friends must see that single ballots (those cut from the paper) are tied or fastened together in some way before they are deposited in the ballotbox. Loose ballots are liable to get misplaced and the candidate to whom they were intended might not get credit for them. It is not necessary to write the candidate's name on each ballot if the above is carried out; the name on the top ballot in a package will be sufficient.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Warren Townley, of the Junior class, and Ralph Smalley, of the Senior class, have been selected by the play committee of the boys' A. A. to act the two minor parts of deputy sheriff in the coming Athletic Association play.

A meeting of all the fellows in the High School who expect to present themselves as candidates for this year's baseball team held a meeting this noon to talk things over.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Success in capital letters was spelled for the new management of the U. S. Astor Theatre on West Front street at the opening Saturday. The theatre, which has been altered in many ways that add to its attractiveness since President Frank G. Hall, of the United States Theatres Company, took charge early last week, was filled to capacity for both performances, and the patrons were loud in their praise, particularly of the splendid projecting facilities of the new equipment. Never before in Plainfield have motion pictures been presented with such clearness that they were a delight to the eye from the mechanical view point, and this feature added to the fine productions of the program made the performances a pleasure from start to finish.

"The Woman in Black," a four reel Klaw and Erlinger production, and Francis X. Bushman in "The Glare of the Lights," the story from the Ladies' World, will make a double bill of feature attractions for tomorrow and Thursday, while for Friday and Saturday "Under the Gaslight," another four reel Klaw and Erlanger feature, and Francis X. Bushman in "The Battle of Love" a three reel film play, present drawing qualities that are sure to be appreciated by theatre goers here.

The daily program will also include dramas and comedies from the leading producers.

COST HIM $10.

Queries, Comment and Answers

Constant demands made by our readers for a return of this feature has led us to start it again today. The following installment of queries is a portion of an accumulation received during the time the feature has been suspended. Many more are on file and will be answered in the order named. When sending in questions write plainly and be sure to say what you mean.

Sporting Editor:

Query—What salary does the mayor of Plainfield receive? [illegible] This amount, or [illegible] per year, is turned over by him to some charitable organization. Although he does not devote his whole time to office duties the work of the office occupies a good portion of his daily thought. You can generally catch him at his office between the hours of 9 and 10 in the morning.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Is the public in general allowed to use the Plainfield High School swimming pool? To whom should I apply for a permit to take [illegible] a week?—C. N. B.

Answer—The public generally is allowed to use the pool. It was built with the people's money to the people. Consult with Ralph S. Patch, the Plainfield High School athletic instructor, concerning the nights on which you can swim in the pool.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Has the city of Plainfield a flag-pole? If so, where is it located?—B. D. R.

Answer—The city flag-pole was formerly located at the head of Park avenue at Front street, but was removed to the city High School grounds on Ninth street when that institution was dedicated. That is the only flag-pole the city has at the present time.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Is the Y. M. C. A. open to persons of all religions? Are Hebrews admitted to membership?—I. K.

Answer—The Y. M. C. A. in Plainfield is an interdenominational institution. Hebrews are admitted to membership and there are at present a large number enrolled.

Sporting Editor:

Query—How can I reach Jack Martin by mail?—N. M. K.

Answer—Address him at the Philadelphia National League Club headquarters in Jacksonville, Florida.

[illegible] examines at the [illegible] on Rock avenue made [illegible] their board?—G. F. T.

Answer—One of those there at present time are able to do manual labor. The little chores they do about the house in no way serve to repay the city for their keep.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Is there such a thing as a running broad jump on ice?—H. G. T.

Answer—Although it may not be one of the things that are "sailed away," there certainly is such a thing as a running broad jump on ice. Edmund Lamy, the well-known professional ice-skater, holds a record of 25 feet 7 inches in this novel event. It was made at Saranac Lake, N. Y., January 30, 1913.

Sporting Editor:

Query—How did the Plainfield baseball club get the name of Plainfield "Pets?"—B. D. T.

Answer—In the days when Plainfield really had a speedy semi-professional nine some sport scribes stooped to pick a suitable nick-name and decided on "Pets." Since that time, however, the "Pets" have on many occasions proved themselves something else besides things to be petted.

Sporting Editor:

Query—How far apart are the electric light posts in Plainfield?—J. Y.

Answer—About one hundred feet. There's no specified distance.

TABLES TURNED ON SPEEDY NEWARKERS

Plainfield High School Youngsters Ran Away With South Side.

The wearers of the red and blue experienced an unexpected pleasure yesterday afternoon, when the boys' basketball team of the Plainfield High School met the team of South Side High School, of Newark, for the second time this season. In the former game at Newark, the local team was badly defeated, yesterday the final score was 53 to 33 in favor of Plainfield. The game was fast and hard, at times a little rough.

Fred Chamberlain started right off with the whistle, and in two passes, Chamberlain to McNamee to Chamberlain, he caged the ball for Plainfield's first two points. In a few seconds he again dropped the ball in the basket. South Side's first three points came from foul goals caged by Weinstein, while the local boys were rolling their score up to thirteen points. The first field goal for South Side was caged by Weinstein making the score 13 to 5 in favor of Plainfield. The Queen City boys continued to hold a comfortable lead throughout the first half, and this period ended with the score at 30 to 18 in favor of Plainfield.

The second half was closer and faster than the first. Plainfield scored twenty-three points and South Side fifteen. In this half King scored four of the six field goals made by his team. Chamberlain and Rosenson were the high score men for Plainfield with sixteen points apiece. Weinstein led for South Side with fifteen points, five field goals and five fouls. The score:

The Sparrow pinners of the Columbus Club Five-man Tournament took two games from the Peacocks in a scheduled match last night. This gives them an undisputed hold of second place for the present, but the Parrots, who are making a strong bid for second honors, still have another series to play before the final standing is announced.

The Sparrows copped the first two games of last night's match, both with a total score of 820. In the final roll their opponents had an advantage of four pins at the end, the score being 804 to 800. Taylor, of the Peacock five, was the individual star of the match, getting scores of 222 and 200 in the first and third games, and scoring 161 in the middle roll. These were the only two scores of the match that touched the two-century mark. Friday night the Hawks and Robins will meet, this being the last match of the tournament for the leaders. The scores:

EXPECT HARD BATTLE WITH TRENTON GIRLS

Local Y. W. C. A. Athletes Will Have to Extend Themselves to Come in First.

That the Plainfield Y. W. C. A. basketball representatives will have their work cut out for them when they line up against the Trenton Y. W. C. A. contingent on the Columbus Club court a week from next Saturday night, to take part in a contest that will decide the State feminine court title, is a foregone conclusion. Trenton trimmed Plainfield by the smallest of margins on the capital city court, but the locals have been doing spectacular practice stunts recently and expect to triumph over the visitors with a good-sized margin to spare on the credit side.

Saturday night, the Trenton clan hung up a 13 to 10 victory on the line at the expense of the Perth Amboy Y. W. C. A. regiment and is confident of adding several more scalps to its list before the season closes. A large number of tickets have been sold for the engagement and a record crowd is expected to pack Columbus Club.

WHY ATTEMPT TO WITHHOLD THE NEWS OF A WALLOPING?

When the local Y. M. H. A. basketball team is successful in chalking up a victory it's a case of a wild scramble to get the returns on the sport, but when the Plainfield Hebrews are soundly spanked by an opponent the tale is a different one. One week ago the locals trimmed a delegation from Elizabeth and despite the fact that stringent protests were lodged against the official's decisions in this combat the Plainfielders were enthusiastic in their heralding of the victory. Sunday night the locals were walloped by an even more decisive score at Elizabeth. It resulted in an effort to keep the score from getting into the papers.

It was the deciding game of a series between these combatants and the Betsytown aggregation now appears to have a clear road toward the State Hebrew title. The final score was 48 to 11.

The sensational shooting of Harry Bloch of the winners, who is a member of the N. Y. U. quintet, featured the tilt. He scored sixteen points, Louis Barr was next with seven field goals. Rosenson starred for the 'Fielders. The first half ended with the score 26 to 4 in favor of the Elizabethans. The second half was a repetition of the opening period.

ANOTHER CHAPTER IN ELKS-PARK BOWLING

Antlered Pinners Bowled on Borough Lanes—Same Old Story, "Two Defeats."

The Park Club and Elks' bowling teams went at it again last night on the Washington avenue alleys and it was the same old story, the Parks won two on their home drives. This puts them ahead in the third series of games between these two clubs but the "Bills" will have a chance to get back those two games on Thursday night, March 25, when they entertain the Park pinners on the Watchung avenue lanes.

The match last night was an interesting one and was witnessed by a large number of supporters of both sides. The Elks took the initial roll by seven pins and then dropped the last two by big margins. Waldorf rolled for the Elks in place of Johnny Campbell, who is on the sick list. Blatz registered an even 200 score in the first game and Nash made high score of the initial roll which was 203. R. Lyman's 198 was the highest the Parks went in this game and the final scores were 888 to 881 in favor of the visitors. In the next game the home pinners increased their total score of the first by ten pins while the Elks dropped down 46. Waldorf struck a 199, but scores of 146 and 152 pulled the team score below their opponents.

Barlow and Daniels tallied 203 and 212 respectively in the final game and boosted their team score up to 918 against their rivals' 841, the lowest team mark of the match. Blatz chalked up a 203 in the last game.

The score follows:

ELKS.

Blatz	200	146	203

NEWARK-ELIZABETH MATCH SCHEDULED FOR FRIDAY

A large crowd is expected to witness the bowling match between the Newark and Elizabeth Elks team on the Elks' alleys Friday night for fourth place in the Senior Elks League which closed two weeks ago. Both of these out of town teams expect to bring large delegations with them and a hot time is promised when the fight starts.

V. W. Nash, Jr., captain of the local Senior team, will act in the capacity of umpire and representatives from New Brunswick and Paterson have been chosen for official scorers.

THE GREED OF SOME BALL PLAYERS IS GREAT

The prevailing greed of the players was well illustrated recently by the attitude of Pipp and High of Detroit and Bill James of the Boston Braves. Pipp and High refused to be transferred to New York unless Donovan would agree to increase their salaries. They held out the argument that Detroit was a sure pennant contender and that a transfer from the club might lose them a share of the world's series next fall.

Picking a pennant at this time for a club that figured no more prominently a year ago than Detroit seems rather farfetched. The fact that Hugh Jennings is willing to let the young men go would indicate that he is none too sure of their ability to effect such a happy end.

To the interested bystander it would appear that some one in Detroit is not playing exactly fair. Colonel Ruppert and Captain Huston purchased the New Yorks with the distinct understanding that Pipp and High were to be sold to them by Detroit. It rests with Frank Navin to make good, even if it costs him money to do so.

The case of Bill James' arguments against the world's champions appears even a more brazen piece of effrontery than the stand of Pipp and High. This hero of the tussle with the Athletics signed a straight term contract at his own figures last fall. He was presented with a $1,000 bonus after the world's series. He has no reason to complain of being underpaid. Whatever fault there may be lies at his own door, the club owners say.

INTERCLUB TITLE CLINCHED BY BOROUGH ORGANIZATION'S SPEEDY REPRESENTATIVES

Interspersed with sensational shooting, close guarding, speeding, passing and bull-dog determination on the part of each side, the second game between the St. Joseph's Boys' Club and the Columbus Club five, for the inter-club championship, resulted in the latter's defeat on the T. A. B. court last night, by a score of 28 to 25, giving the boroughites claim to the medals and all the honors that go with a championship.

The score stood on edge all through the struggle and was a tie until the last minute and a half of play when Moulton's side throw ended in a beautiful basket which was closely followed by a foul from him.

The contest will be one long remembered by those present; both teams being about evenly matched, each composed of Plainfield's most popular basketball performers, each being the bitterest of rivals for the series and each battling tooth and nail for the verdict and a point to sway the score in its own direction.

Had Columbus Club a good foul shooter, the score would have been far different and a third game would have been necessary. It was Bryniarski's fifteen foot goals in the first period that put St. Joseph's in the lead.

Excitement ran high during the contest and the three hundred spectators kept up a constant din for the players. At the first chirp of the whistle Columbus Club entered the fray with a rush, caging three baskets and two fouls and things looked dubious for a while for the boys from "over the brook." But never "letting the grass grow under their feet," they caged a trio of ringers and four fouls and at the conclusion of the initial period the score stood 18 to 14 in favor of the North Plainfielders.

With renewed energy both quintets entered the second period of the contest and again the Columbus Club swept the St. Joseph boys off their feet by a period of fast playing, close guarding and two beautiful field goals. The Columbus boys managed to keep within one point of the church boys and within the last minute and a half of play Coyle dropped in a foul which tied the score 23 to 23. It looked as if an extra session would have to be played when Moulton caged a pretty goal on a jump which was followed by a foul, putting the borough boys in the lead again.

Fouls played a prominent part all through the game many being called on both sides. Out of 16 called on the St. Joseph boys, Columbus Club made good on 7, while St. Joseph's tallied 10 out of 23 chances. Both teams got the same number of goals, each being credited with 9.

Taylor tallied the largest number of points for the losers while Bryniarski and Denny did the bulk of the scoring for the victors. Much credit is due Caulfield and Wilson, guards on the Columbus Club team. The former played the best game he has ever entered and beside holding his man to one goal in the first half played a fine all around game, also caging a basket. Wilson, who has not played basketball for three years, "came back" and proved to be an unsurpassable stone wall for the North Plainfielders. The heavy guard kept Moulton scoreless in the first half and tallied a neat basket for himself.

A third game will be played off in the near future between these two factions and judging from last night's close fight, the final score may be shifted to the Columbus Club. The third contest will probably be staged on the T. A. B. court, which is fitted out in excellent style for a court game.

The lineup of the two teams and score follows:

TWICE "COUNTED OUT" BOB FITZSIMMONS WILL TRY TO "COME BACK" IN MATRIMONY

Despite the fact that "Ruby Robert" Fitzsimmons, the grand old man of the roped and resined arena, has been laid on the pugilistic shelf and has been twice floored in the arena of matrimony, announcement was made today that the big Cornishman was "doiling up" to take his third plunge into a marriage ceremony. When sought by a Plainfield Daily Press reporter Bob admitted that he would visit a "knot-tier" during the next few days and receive his third wedding seal. Queried concerning the identity of the Mrs. Fitzsimmons-to-be Bob summoned a short, plump woman from another room of his big Dunellen farmhouse and introduced the scribe. His fiancee admits her passage through twenty-seven summers but left the pen-pusher to judge for himself how many winters she had weatnered.

The bride-elect is Mrs. Temo Simonin, said by some who know her to be a German countess. This fact she admits without being urged. She is the divorced wife of Henry Simonin, a mine owner with homes at Portland, Oregon, and Jacksonville, Florida. She was married the first time in France, where she met the big ring artist twelve years ago. She lost trace of him after her marriage and the pair did not meet again until eighteen months ago when the former ring idol was doing a vaudeville turn with a corps of female beauty specimens at Cleveland, O.

The couple, it is said, applied in Newark today for a marriage license and it was refused, whereupon they were seen going toward New York, it is supposed to be married.

The spark of love remaining in the hearts of the former acquaintances was kindled into a flame and she came to Dunellen with Bob when he wound up his footlight contract. Twelve months ago Mrs. Simonin obtained her divorce and a few months later Julia Gifford, Fitzsimmons' second wife, applied for and was granted her divorce papers in Chicago. They have been living at the Dunellen home since returning from Cleveland and are as giddy as a pair of twenty-year-old elopers over the coming nuptials.

Although she speaks with a decided broken German accent the bride-to-be claims to be the master of twenty-four different languages and says she is prominent in the work of a number of women's lodges, principal among which is the Order of the Eastern Star.

Bob and his future wife have been appearing in vaudeville in Brooklyn and during rehearsals in Dunellen the woman has made herself popular among the acquaintances of the fighter. She sports a large diamond engagement ring and Bob proudly boasts that he welded it with "his little hammer."

Fitz at one time was a village blacksmith and when asked if the "anvil chorus" would be one of the selections to be rendered at his coming wedding he nodded in the affirmative; adding, "Listen to me, my lad. 'Igh want to tell ye that 'igh 'ave made up my mind to get married and all the powers that be will not interfere with my plans. The big guns who handle boxing in New York State classed me as a 'as-been in the fight game but 'igh will show that 'igh can come-back good and strong in the game of matrimony 'Igh am fifty-three years old but feel like a man of thirty."

Bob's first wife was Rose Julian who has since passed away. The big fighter has always carried a soft spot in his heart for his boyhood love and when queried concerning her he appeared noticeably touched. By Rose Julian he has two children, Rosalie, aged seventeen, and Bob, Jr., aged twenty. Both live at the Dunellen home, the girl acting as housekeeper for her father and his spouse.

CIVIL WAR BREAKS OUT IN CHAMPION CONTEST

Internal dissention almost disrupted the pinochle series for the championship of the East and West Ends, played at the Reminiscent Club's headquarters last night. After Frank Shattle and Prof. Kogan, the standard bearers for the East End, had lost three games, the former became afflicted with a bad case of stage fright because of the continued jeering of the gallery, and threatened to quit. The cool head of his partner acted as ballast and held Shattle down with the result that they took the fourth game. The fifth went to George Houseman and D. J. Galbraith, making the West End the winner of the series, four out of five.

The East Enders have got the worst end of the play for three successive Monday nights, and Shattle has been asked by the East End committee to give a new pinochler a chance. The latter will have a trial team with Prof. Kogan next Monday and if he makes good will be retained. The series has been drawing a large gathering each week and the spectators last night numbered about forty. A handsome silver loving cup has been offered by the Reminiscent Club as a prize.

M'GRAW IS NOT SUPERSTITIOUS.

John McGraw was fanning recently and declared himself as not in the least superstitious. "This stuff about jinxes and all the rest of it doesn't mean anything to me," he said. But then he remembered something and modified his statement.

"I'll admit," he remarked, "that there was something which happened in a world's series once that I took as a lucky sign, and it came through too. It was back in 1905, and we were playing the Phillies. And Coakley was in there pitching. As Mack had been a little slow in selecting him, his name wasn't put on the score board until the first inning was under way. Two men were out when Mike Doplin came up, and he met the first ball Coakley pitched and smashed it on a line into right field. It hit the name Coakley on the score board squarely in the middle and knocked it off the fence. Yes, we knocked Coakley out of the box two innings later."

RUNAWAY JUNE

CHAPTER II.

IN the dock adjacent to the one from which the Hilarity's motor tender had departed there paced, almost perceptibly, a night watchman, who consisted of an overcoat, a cap and two glints of eye. To him there came, as the docks intensified their loneliness, a brisk little chauffeur with a thin mustache and a woman with high cheek bones.

"The Hilarity!" stated the little chauffeur, with an accusing tone, and with a sweeping gesture he pointed to that adjacent dock where stood a big hamper with the word "Hilarity" glaring white on its side. "She is gone!" Then Henri stepped back.

"Yep," rumbled a frosty voice.

"But her tender," objected Henri, "also is gone. Listen, my friend," insisted Henri, stopping in front of the overcoat and cap, but moving aside as it came irresistibly on. "The facts are like these: Mademoiselle has gone on board the Hilarity. Behold, here is the maid of the charming mademoiselle. She was also to have gone on board the Hilarity. How, then, shall she go?"

"Dunno."

The maid of the charming mademoiselle now stepped forward.

"Can you drive a motorboat?" she asked.

"Voila!" And Henri snapped the fingers of both hands, snapped them three times. "Voila, mademoiselle, Marie! If it goes I can drive it."

"Can't we hire this boat?" and the resourceful Marie pointed to a trim little craft.

"Nope."

"But, comrade." And Henri jerked his cap on the back of his head as he wheeled at right angles.

"It is important. Look. Here is money. I take the swift little boat. I swish out of the slip. I swish down the river. I swish across the bay. Like lightning I swish, and I overtake the yacht Hilarity. I deliver the charming maid"—a little bow here—"and a kiss from the finger tips to the charming mademoiselle, and immediately I swish back. Nothing is lost! All is safe!"

"Get off the dock," came the answer.

"But, monsieur."

"Hike."

"I, Henri, detest you," was the angry response. And he followed Marie off the dock.

Henri had another idea. He drove to a nearby saloon and procured a bottle of whisky, which he offered to the man on the dock.

Mrs. Moore Stifled the Emotions to Which Iris Blethering Gave Full Play.

"Thanks." The voice was one degree less frosty. The neck of the bottle disappeared into the slit of the overcoat collar, and the gleaming bottle turned heavenward.

"Voila." Henri himself took a sip and stuffed the bottle in his pocket. "I shall go away, my friend, but I shall return." He hurried back to the touring car up on the street and drove away, and the thick figure slinking out of the shadows hopped on behind.

In the ivory tapestried stateroom, as the Hilarity steamed slowly across the bay, June Warner suddenly rose and rang for the stewardess. That puckered person came with alacrity, but before she went to June she stopped in the door of the crimson and gold salon and, catching the eye of Orin Cunningham, bobbed her head and smiled her ingratiating smile and jerked her thumb over her shoulder toward June's room; then she turned her pallid eyes toward Gilbert Blye for a fleeting moment and hurried away.

"Did you ring, dearie?" she whined as June opened the door.

"Yes." June studied the woman a moment speculatively. She could not confide in this creature. "You may bring me some water, please."

"Yes, dearie." The stewardess whirled and hurried to the door of the crimson and gold salon, where Tommy Thomas sat between Cunningham and Edwards, with a hand on a shoulder of each. The stewardess, with a sidelong glance at the quiet Blye in the corner, hurried over to the group on the bench.

"She wants some water," she whispered, bending over and grinning her ugly grin.

"Oh, yes." Again the grin. "Young ladies always trust me. Say, I think she wants to escape."

Blye, with a frown on his dark, handsome face, walked across and spoke to Cunningham. Orin nodded and, his eyes twinkling, went to the portable buffet, where he selected a long stemmed, gracefully shaped, gold incrusted goblet of Venetian glass. He filled it with ice and set it to one side. Then, while the others watched him, Tommy Thomas, with a half sneer, and Mrs. Villard, with shocked concern, he took from a locked case a tiny stone bottle. Now he emptied the ice from the beautiful goblet and poured into it a few blood red drops. Mrs. Villard half rose and looked toward Gilbert Blye; then, with a catch in her breath, she sat down and was silent.

Blye went to the door as the stewardess came up the gangway and called her in with a jerk of his head. On the lips of Edwards there had come a firm set, and his heavy lidded eyes had narrowed. Without a word Cunningham handed the glass to the stewardess, but between the two there passed a look which was full of meaning. Blye, with his glowing eyes on the glass, smiled suavely.

"I brought you the water, dearie," said the stewardess, entering June's stateroom.

"Oh!" An exclamation of delight from June as her eyes widened with the beauty of the delicate Venetian goblet.

"That's something else I made for you in the pantry, dearie," explained the stewardess, in her coaxing whine, and bobbed her neck. "It's a fine stimulant and soothing to the nerves."

June took the fragile glass in her hand. Its sheer beauty had won her. She inhaled daintily. The fragrance was most appealing. She looked at it again and smiled. She did feel faint and weak. She lifted the glass to her lips, and the tip of her tongue caught the delicious flavor. Suddenly, as she tilted the glass to drink, she caught the pallid eyes of the stewardess fixed eagerly upon her. The woman's mouth was half open, and she was breathing hard.

With a flash of intuition June jerked her lips from the glass and threw it, crashing and splintering, into the fireplace.

"Why, dearie!" exclaimed the stewardess, and in great agitation she pushed a button at the side of the mantel.

June's eyelashes lowered for an instant, and her lips set; then quietly she went into the little blue boudoir and sat thoughtfully upon the daintily upholstered settee.

The steward came pompously in.

"Well, you've done it again, you!" he growled as he surveyed the splintered fragments of the delicate Venetian glass.

"No, Percy," whined the woman and glared toward the boudoir door with her pallid eyes. She jerked her thumb in that direction, and then she winked.

"That's you," snarled Wilkins. "You always say it's a guest."

"How much?" whispered the woman in a sibilant hiss, which carried as it was intended to do.

"Them glasses is $12 apiece, and it'll be taken from your wages. That comes out of my pocket!"

June bit her lips. Twelve dollars! It was a lot of money to a girl who had found dollars coming slowly and independence hard to win, but she picked up her purse. After all, she had no proof that the woman meant anything but kindliness.

"Is this breakage charged against you?" asked June.

"Why, yes, dearie." A sniffle went with the whine.

"How much will it cost you?"

"Twelve dollars!" Sniffle. "But it's all a part of our job, so never mind, dearie."

"I do not wish you to lose the money," and quite thoughtfully June counted $12 from her slender store. She added another for the customary tip and gave one to the man, and they thanked her most obsequiously. As June returned to the boudoir their suppressed voices broke out again.

"No," protested the woman in that whining hiss; "that's my money—the dollar's mine, anyhow."

"Nothing yours except what I give you," stated Percy Wilkins gruffly. "That's the law, and you know it. Clean up that mess, you," and he left the room.

The woman's whining mumble could be heard all the while she was cleaning up the fireplace. She was going when June returned to the stateroom, but on the floor near the door was a yellow leather bound blank book, its side worn like glass from the constant friction of a pocket. June picked it up and opened it with idle curiosity. On the first inside page, at the top, was the big scrawled word "From." At the top of the opposite page was the word "To." The first item on the "From" page was dated four years back.

"From Sallie Fish, wedding portion—2,000 pounds."

Beneath this was the item—

"Savings, Percy Wilkins—162 pounds."

On the opposite page the first entry was:

"Booking to the States.

"Percy and Sally Wilkins, 22 pounds."

After that the entries were all in dollars. On the "From" side they were chiefly the wages of Percy Wilkins and Sally Fish Wilkins, for they had apparently gone into private service immediately. On the "To" side, which represented the expenditures, there were very few entries, but they were interesting. In the four years the woman had had four cheap dresses besides her uniforms and very scant accessories. The last entry among the receipts was June's $14 under the head of "Tips." On that page the book showed an item, "Banked to the credit of P. Wilkins, $12[illegible]."

And it all belonged to the man, every penny. If the woman had anything it was a gift, no matter what she brought to the man on her marriage nor what she had earned since! It seemed universal, this condition.

A startling thought came to June. Suppose she achieved her independence, suppose she earned her own money, so that she could go to Ned, asking from him nothing but love in return for her love, would he own what she had earned? If so, what would become of the principle for which she had run away? She paled at that thought, and then she laughed. She did not know the law in this matter, but she knew Ned. Dear Ned! She hunted her handkerchief in a hurry.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Dick's mother had gone home and the household had returned to its late breakfast hour.

"My dear, isn't this pretty poor coffee you are putting up?" Dick sipped his beverage with an air of an analytical chemist.

Nell grew red. "Really," she began, "I wondered if you'd notice it. It isn't coffee at all."

Dick stared.

"I think coffee hurts you; I know it makes you nervous, so I thought we would try this."

"Oh, it isn't the coffee," began Dick, "it's——"

"For a man of your highstrung temperament, I really think——"

"Bosh! Nell, would you mind calling it off? I must save my strength to cope with later and unavoidable exasperations. Don't give doctor's advice for breakfast."

"My poor dear," purred Nell, "what a bad night you must have had."

"Never slept better," he affirmed.

"What is it, then? You are perfectly horrid this morning."

There was a longish pause. Finally Dick began to grin. "If I were as charming as I normally am every morning you would grow unappreciative. I must add variety to my charm."

Nell's expression suggested that patience was a difficult virtue to practice. She made a pretense of eating her breakfast.

"Let me make you another slice of toast; you are hungry this morning," she suggested.

"Nothing more, thank you," he answered.

Nell looked at him a few seconds in silence. "Dick, did you remember to use your hair tonic this morning?" she asked, a real concern in her voice. "I can see your scalp; your hair is getting so thin it is fairly wispish."

"Really, my dear, the details of my toilet are hardly suitable matters for table discussion." Dick was really nettled.

"You are particular this morning, I must say." Nell's tone was copied from Dick.

"On second thought I withdraw my objections," said Dick, a wicked twinkle in his eyes. "There's a matter I have thought of speaking about for some time. If this is to be a meeting where toilet matters are subjects of discussion, I would like to mention that that breakfast cap is very unbecoming; couldn't be more so."

Nell had a little tilt to her nose and it was elevated to a more saucy angle as she gazed out of the window.

"And your hair has been out of curl of late," he continued.

"Anything else?" she asked with studied sweetness.

"Nothing along the line of beauty hints, but if I can have some of your good amber coffee for tomorrow morning I am sure the world will again have its accustomed charm."

"That will be easier than curling my hair to produce the same result," laughed Nell.

"You will make it then?"

"I'll do anything to restore the rosy coloring to your horizon," said Nell mockingly, as she kissed him goodby.

WINDSHIELD AND SUNSHIELD IS THE NEW CHINESE PARASOL.

These odd, almost flat Chinese parasols are a distinct note of the new in spring fashions. The parasol is really an excellent windshield as well as a practical protection from the sun, and makes a charming though eccentric background for a pretty woman. The parasol pictured here is of Chinese blue silk with little birds in mahogany attached to the inner side of the parasol while the outer side looks like any plain flat sunshade.

Household Hints

FISH FOR LENT

There is nothing more delicious than a properly prepared fish. It is not only nutritious, but since it contains little fat, especially the white varieties, it is easily digested and is well adapted to all those whose occupations demand nervous energy.

There is no better fish than salmon. It has the distinction of being richer than meat in footstuffs.

Next in value comes fat halibut, followed by shad, whitefish, mackerel, bluefish, lean halibut, bass, flounder, trout, cod, haddock, cusk, etc.

Salmon, mackerel and bluefish are red-blooded fish, and have the oil distributed throughout the body. They are nutritious for those with good digestive organs, but they are too rich for invalids.

More easily digested are whitefish, flounder, halibut, cod and haddock, because the oil is in the liver.

Oily fish should never be fried.

Broiling and baking are the best methods of preparing fish.

Salted fish is very fine as a relish, but the nutritive qualities are lacking in it and it should not be depended upon for nourishment.

Whitefish should be cooked with butter or fat to make it desirable food, because it is so dry.

The flesh of good fresh fish is firm and hard and if pressed with the finger it will rise at once. If the eyes be dull and sunken, the gills pale and the flesh flabby or soft, the fish is not fresh.

After the fish is purchased, clean it as soon as possible in strongly salted water. Wash it (do not soak it) by wiping it with a cloth that has been wet in salt water. Then wrap it in a cloth sprinkled with salt and place it in a cool place. Put ice around it, if necessary, but do not let it touch the ice, as fresh water and ice will soften it. When once it loses the hard, firm consistency it is considered unfit to eat by those who know what good fish really is.

To skin a fish, cut a thin, narrow strip down the backbone, taking off the dorsal fin. Then open the lower part half way down. Slip the knife under and up through the bony part of the gills, and hold this bony part between the thumb and finger and strip the skin off toward the tail. Then do the same on the other side.

To bone a fish, clean and strip off the skin. Lay the fish flat on a board. Begin at the tail and run the knife in under the flesh close to the bone, and scrape it away clean from the bone, holding the flesh carefully so as not to break the flakes. When the flesh on one side is removed, slip the knife under the bone on the other side, raise the bone, leaving the flesh on the board; then pull out all the small bones left in the flesh, which you can easily feel with the fingers. Great care should be taken that bones are removed, because, besides being dangerous, they are a great source of annoyance when eating.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALE

The Adventures of Minnie Monkey.

When Minnie Monkey wakened in the Organ-Grinder's house,
Said she: "I know I have a [illegible]."
And while she was st[illegible]
The Organ-Grinder man said, "Come along."

The family dressed Miss Minnie in the little coat and hat;
Said they: "We hope you'll have a lucky day."
So they set out, and when they saw some children in a yard,
The Organ-Grinder man began to play.

And while he played Miss Minnie turned her finest somersault;
She really didn't find it very hard;
But when she started toward the house to get the children's coins,
A great, big, dog came dashing through the yard.

Miss Minnie dropped her little cup and scrambled up a tree;
And when she'd reached the very tipmost top
She saw the Organ-Grinder man a-running up the street
As fast as though he never meant to stop.

The children said to her: "You needn't be at all afraid;
This dog is only playing; he won't bite."
But Minnie would not listen when they told her to come down;
She only sat and chattered in her fright.

At last a boy climbed up the tree and seized Miss Minnie Monk;
He tucked her underneath his arm and then
He quickly scrambled down the tree, as only boys know how,
And soon they were upon the ground again.

Said he: "This is my monkey; now I mean to take her home."
Of course the children knew that he was right.
But of the things that happened next, exciting though they were,
I'll have to wait and tell tomorrow night.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by THE W. C. T. U.

The Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal church has just given to the public the result of a poll of the leading magazines on the question of liquor advertising. It publishes a list of over sixty "abstaining" magazines, not including women's publications, which it is assumed are all, or practically all, without such advertising.

This investigation has shown that the number of magazines refusing liquor advertising has increased during the last seven years at least fifty per cent.

The list of "abstaining" magazines follows:

Argosy, All Story Magazine, Associated Sunday Magazine, American Boy, American Homes and Gardens, American Review of Reviews, Arts and Decorations, American Magazine, American Sunday Monthly Magazine, All Outdoors.

Black Cat, Boy's Magazine, Book News Monthly, Business.

Munsey's Magazine, Metropolitan Magazine, McClure's Magazine, National Geographic Magazine, National Magazine.

Dry Transportation.

A California Congressman is troubled over the prospect confronting the Congressional party which is to attend the Panama-Pacific Exposition. He says that if the Navy Department has control of the ships which carry the distinguished company, it will be, by reason of Secretary Daniels' dry order, "a funeral trip." On the other hand, if they go overland there are whole States—States longest East and West—where grape juice will be the strongest drink obtainable. Whether by land or by sea, "It's a dry, dry way to San Francisco," wails the drinker. And it is fast getting dryer. Only the other day came the news that the Pennsylvania Railroad had abolished liquor from all its dining cars West of Pittsburgh. It has also announced that it will not renew the license for the bar in the Broad Street Station at Philadelphia, and that although its license to sell liquor in the New York terminal will not expire until September, the bar will be closed at once. This will leave the Pennsylvania system East of Pittsburgh without a bar in any of its stations or restaurants and without the sale of liquor in any of its dining cars.

The College Movement.

An important division of the temperance army and one which is rapidly increasing in numbers and efficiency is the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association. The national convention of this body, held recently in Topeka, Kansas, is characterized as the greatest national student gathering of a civic character ever assembled in America. The keynote of the convention program was "The Challenge of the anti-liquor movement to the present student generation," and its slogan, "We'll see this thing through." A nation-wide campaign was initiated, the aim of which is to enlist college men and women for active service in the fight now being waged for national prohibition. Dozens of college and university presidents and many well-known political leaders sent greetings to the convention. Secretary of State Bryan's being in the form of a two-page handwritten letter.

Phoenix "Almost Ruined."

Phoenix, Arizona, January 5—This morning, when the police magistrate of this city took his seat, the chief of police placed before him charge sheets upon which there was not a single arrest for drunkenness. As a matter of fact, drunkenness has hardly appeared in this city during the five days since the prohibitory law went into effect. For a year previous the average had been fifteen arrests per day and 80 per cent. of them for drunkenness.

WAR NEWS

Berlin, March 16 (by wireless)—The following statement was given at German headquarters today: "Western theatre of war—The British position on a height near Lombaertzyde, south of Ypres, in West Flanders, for which we have been fighting since the day before yesterday, has been taken by us. South of Lille, height northwest of Arras, in Champagne, an engagement is growing in intensity for possession of a cliff. In Champagne, several French attacks broke down under the German fire, the enemy suffering heavy losses. In the Argonne an engagement is in progress. In the Vosges fighting is reported in several places."

Copenhagen, March 16—The allies have landed parties in the vicinity of Smyrna and are preparing to move on the city by land, according to a dispatch from Athen, printed in the Berlinal Anzeiger, of Berlin.

Geneva, March 16 (via Paris)—A dispatch to the Tribune from its Rome correspondent, says that a large part of the Italian navy is being concentrated at Taranto at the southern extremity of the country and the point nearest the Dardanelles.

Paris, March 16—A special dispatch from Rome says that the Government has issued an order expelling from Italy the correspondents of the Vossische Tageblatt and the Frankfurter Zeitung.

Amsterdam, March 16—The Germans have posted 42-centimetre guns at Nieuwkerke on the line from Ostende to Thorout, as well as at Ypres.

DURING 1914 The Prudential paid its policyholders over $39,000,000.

This great sum of money, the greatest amount ever paid policyholders in any year by The Prudential, saved thousands of homes, kept thousands of families intact and opened the doors of hope and opportunity for thousands of widows and children.

Everybody is invited to visit the Prudential Exhibit on Life Insurance and Public Welfare at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco.

Hereafter the basis of adjustment will be:

In Ford sizes, plain tread, 6,000 miles; Kant Slip, 7,500 miles. All other sizes, plain tread, 5,000 miles; Kant Slip tread, 6,000 miles.

The word "adjust" is merely figurative, because in 1914 the total adjustment in Kelly-Springfield Tires for the whole United States was less than 1%. You get this unequalled service in uninterrupted mileage—not adjustment.

Before buying some other tire at a lower price analyze the basis of adjustment offered by the other maker—see what you really do get for less money.

$4.00, $4.50, $5.00 and $6.00

The man who wears "VAN ARSALE'S" Shoes knows that comfort and quality are surely hidden underneath the outward appearance of each and every pair.

All he has to do each season is to come in and pick one of the "NEW ONES" or ask the salesman to duplicate his old favorite style—if it's a "conservative."

He knows that he can then forget all about shoes for the season.

EASY, isn't it?

Then why don't you try a pair or two this Spring?

He was 65 years old and was a native of Franklin county, Quebec, removing to this city about fifteen years ago. FARMER DIES IN PATH OF FLAMES

Samuel Manning Drops Lifeless Fighting Grass Fire on His Piscataway Farm.

OVER EXERTED HIMSELF

Was One of Best Known Agriculturists in This Section—Eighty-one Years Old and Had Hundreds of Plainfield Friends.

Over exertion, brought on by fighting a grass fire that threatened his home, caused the death yesterday of Samuel R. Manning, one of South Plainfield's oldest and best known residents. An apopletic stroke affected him in the midst of his efforts to beat out the flames and he fell prostrate in the path of the fire. His inanimate form was noticed by James Hamilton, driver of a school bus, who ran to his assistance and lifted him clear until his juvenile passengers could summon the neighbors.

Mr. Manning was still breathing when taken to his home and Dr. P. B. Cregar, of this city, was summoned. When the physician arrived, however, the sufferer was beyond medical aid.

Mr. Manning's farm, on the New Brunswick road, is intersected by the Port Reading Railroad and shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon a passing locomotive ignited a field of dry grass by dropping sparks. Fearing his home and barns would be destroyed, Mr. Manning sent his son, Albert, to one part of the field and ran about at the other end himself, fighting desperately to check the blaze. His son was busily engaged a long distance away when the fatal attack felled the father.

Samuel R. Manning was born at South Plainfield eighty-one years ago and always lived in that section. He purchased the farm on which he died about fifty years ago, residing on it continuously from the time he took title. It was one of the best known in the South Plainfield end of Piscataway township. He was held in the highest esteem by his neighbors and in this city, which he visited regularly every week, he had hundreds of friends. He was road commissioner in Piscataway township for many years. He is survived by two brothers, William H. and Leune V., of South Plainfield, and four sons, William D., of Randolph road, this city; Marcus W., of Orange; Charles F., of Newark, and Albert W., who resided on the parental farm; six grandchildren and one great grandchild.

The funeral will be held in the South Plainfield Baptist church, Friday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, and will be in charge of the pastor, Rev. J. J. Allen. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

In accordance with a resolution passed at a recent meeting the following communication has been submitted to Assemblyman William N. Runyon, Arthur N. Pierson and Charles L. Morgan, representing Union county:

"The Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union, through its good citizenship committee, congratulates you upon your correct interpretation of public opinion in Union county regarding the question of local option. Upon a local option platform you were elected, and a recent poll of the Assembly shows that you are standing pat. The Senate has passed the bill. All eyes are upon the Assembly. We trust that you will do all in your power to prevent that honorable body from falling down before the brewer's big horses."

The following letter was sent to State Senator Carlton B. Pierce.

"The Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union through its good citizenship committee, congratulates you upon your vote for the local option bill in the State Senate. We are glad to have in the Senate a man who desires to give the people a square deal upon the liquor question. Your firm stand for this principle merits the commendation of all Christian citizens."

RARE TREAT OFFERED BY MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB

The Monday Afternoon Club is offering a rare treat to the citizens of Plainfield and the neighboring towns in the lecture to be given under its auspices in the High School Auditorium tomorrow afternoon at 3:45 o'clock by Alfred Noyes, the noted young English poet.

Mr. Noyes believes that at the present time poetry is more in touch with life than it ever was. If this be true he is one who has helped to make it so. He is not a poet's poet, but a poet for men. He is broad-shouldered, manly and sturdy, and the dominant quality of his poetry is virility.

The president of Hobart College, in speaking of his lectures there, says: "He is a real poet, and he knows how to recite his poetry so as to give the precise impression necessary to transmit its meaning to the audience.

ELKS PROVED TO BE FINE ENTERTAINERS

Many Present at St. Patrick's Day Reception in Local Club Last Night.

Proving itself beyond a doubt the most successful social event of its kind ever conducted under the auspices of the local B. P. O. E. Lodge the reception and dance in the Watchung avenue club house last night supplied entertainment to about 400 members and guests. The affair was arranged as a St. Patrick's Day gathering and unique favors, appropriate to the season, were distributed.

Members of the local organization had as their invited guests friends from this and other nearby cities and the gathering was a thoroughly enjoyable one, the attendance including many of those prominent in the society set here.

Throughout the evening dancing, for which music was furnished by Van Eps' banjo orchestra, of New York city, proved the predominating feature. The strains of terpischorean airs prevailed in the club until long after midnight, refreshments being served during intermissions by the committee in charge.

C. O. S. WANTS MONEY TO LOAN TO WORTHY PEOPLE

It is a commonplace to say that this winter families never before known to ask for help have fallen into want. The Charity Organization Society has been particularly anxious not only to tide such families over to better times but to do so in such a way that their self respect and desire to remain independent may not be impaired.

In an encouraging response to an unspoken appeal on behalf of such cases of want an anonymous donor has presented the society with $100 as the nucleus for a loan fund. Since then two additional gifts have been received for the same purpose and a return of $10 has already been made on the first loan. The demands are so great, however, that the loan fund has already been overdrawn for the small amount of $3. The Society therefore places the matter before the ever-generous public of Plainfield knowing that even in these days of manifold appeals so excellent an opportunity as this to place a little money where it will do the most good will not be overlooked by those desirous of helping others to help themselves.

The affair was arranged by a committee composed of Mrs. A. E. Force, Mrs. George Wescott, Mrs. W. R. Causbrook, Mrs. Elizabeth Woodard, Mrs. Arthur McVoy, Miss Stein and Mrs. E. W. Pionier. HEAR OF FAILURE IN EAST PRUSSIA

Germans Reported to Have Been Compelled to Withdraw From Niemen.

PRZEMYSL FALL SOON?

German Aviator Dropped Bomb on British Merchant Vessel—Satisfactory Solution of Negotiations Between China and Japan.

Rome, March 17—The German offensive in East Prussia has completely failed, according to a statement given out by the Russian embassy in Italy. General Von Hindenburg has been compelled to withdraw large portions of his army which advanced on the Niemen to strengthen the corps in North Poland, leaving forces inadequate to withstand the Russian offensive. Germans taken prisoners admit that the leaders are suffering from increasing discouragement at their failure to continue a successful advance.

London, March 17—A news agency despatch from Petrograd says that the taking of the Austrian fortress at Przemysl is believed in the Russian capital to be a matter of but a few days.

The S. S. Blonde, which arrived at the Tyne today, reports that she was attacked by a German taube type aeroplane which dropped a bomb on her, killing one of the crew. The aeroplane was unable to drop another bomb accurately enough and the Blonde escaped.

Glasgow, March 17—The captain of the British steamer Apollo reported today, that his ship had collided with a German submarine while en route from Rotterdam to Bristol. The submarine sank immediately, he said.

Tokio, March 17—A satisfactory solution of the negotiations between Japan and China is imminent, according to a statement issued by the foreign office to representatives of the powers.

Paris, March 17—Franch war statement issued this afternoon says:

"On the Yser the Belgian army made new progress yesterday, and repulsed a German counter attack. On the front held by the British army, there was a very violent cannonade. The enemy attempted a new counter attack upon the trenches to the north of Arras without success.

"Soissons and Rheims were bombarded. Two shells struck the cathedral at Rheims. In Champagne, north of Les Mesnil, and west of Height 195, we captured 50 yards of ridge held by the enemy.

"In the Argonne there were several German counter attacks between Bolante and Four de Paris. These were repulsed. In the Woevre region there was an artillery duel. One of our aviators bombarded the fortifications at Calmar."

Constantinople, March 17—The following official statement was issued today:

"During the last few days only unimportant operations were undertaken by the allied fleet. Activities of ships of the line were limited to demonstrations. Two attempts by cruisers and destroyers to approach the outer fortifications and clear the mine fields were rendered abortive by the effective fire of the defenders. The civilian population of Constantinople is calm, in fact almost indifferent to the blockade."

Berlin, March 17 (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Western theatre—Fighting for an advanced cliff on the south slope of Lorette height, northwest of Arras, has been decided in favor of the Germans. In Champagne, west of Perthes and north of Les Mesnil, several unsuccessful French attacks were made yesterday. North of Les Mesnil the enemy's attacks were renewed with stronger forces and the engagement continues.

"In the Argonne the fighting is not yet finished. The French who had occupied the slope northwest of Vauquois and east of the Argonne were driven back. In the Vosges there have been only artillery duels.

"Western theatre—Russian advances against Tauroggen and Laugszarden have been repulsed. No change is reported south of the Vistula."

OFF TO PANAMA.

Edward Wagner, of 164 Westervelt avenue, and his father, will leave tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock for the Panama-Pacific Exposition. They will go by water route and will board the "Lyre" in New York harbor. A number of friends from this city will accompany them to the pier.

This special contest will be a contest within a contest and all votes turned in for the special prizes will also count at the end of the regular contest for the tours. The prizes offered are the very best money can buy and are guaranteed by the firms from whom they were purchased. The prizes:

First prize, $100 diamond ring, purchased from the jewelry store of Charles E. Vail, 236 Park avenue; second prize, $25 merchandise certificate on Woodhull & Martin Company, and $15 in gold; third prize, $35 solid gold wrist watch, purchased from Reliable Jewelry Shop, 245 West Front street.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over; they are beauties, both of them.

This special offer will appeal to those low on the list, those who have just started and those who start in now to try and win a special prize, even though they do not care to continue and try for the tour prizes. Everybody starts even in this special contest so the chances for new starters are as good as those already in the contest, and perhaps better, for those who have the high vote have necessarily seen a great many of their friends and got subscriptions and their list of people to be seen has diminished to a certain extent.

The special prizes will be awarded

BOARD OF EDUCATION CANDIDATE A WOMAN

Mrs. George Vandeveer Nominated in Dunellen Last Night.

For the first time in Dunellen's history a woman, Mrs. George Vanderveer, of Prospect avenue, was nominated as a candidate for the Board of Education. This took place at the annual school meeting held in the Whittier School last evening when Joseph G. Walton, president of the Board of Trade, named Mrs. Vanderveer, saying, "Most of the members are out of town for the greater part of the day and cannot keep in close contact with the work performed by the school. For this reason I propose to nominate a woman, who I really believe capable in every manner to serve on the Board of Education. The woman would keep in close contact with the schools during the day and she would be of incalculable assistance to her colleagues."

Mrs. Vanderveer has been in school work with her children and has followed the school work as the president of the Parent Teacher Association.

Mrs. Walton's nomination was seconded by G. Sumner Smith.

The other nominees were, George Cameron, Silas W. Neilor and Hervey B. Walters, who were nominated by J. Travis Sutphen and Joseph G. Walton, who was nominated by J. Alfred Wilson.

W. A. Houghtaling was also nominated but he has not been a resident of the borough for three years and was unable to run.

W. S. Frederick, in great heat, declared: "It has been said that Dunellen is not aggressive or abreast of the times. I defy any one to tell how better work than has been done by our Board of Education can be performed." The defy was not taken up.

The chairman of the meeting was Editor George W. Day, of the Weekly Call, and the secretary, W. S. Frederick. The tellers for the election of trustees were C. M. Ryno and Lewis T. Churchill and for the appropriation, Blanchard Gardner and David S. Campbell.

The result of the balloting for trustees was as follows: Hervey B. Walters, 76 votes; George Cameron, 71; Silas W. Neilor, 66; J. G. Walton 15; Mrs. George Vanderveer, 14; J. Alfred Wilson, 1; and John P. Fenner, 1.

The balloting for the school budget resulted as follows: Repairs, 72 votes; current expenses, 71, and manual training, 70.

The budget was based on the following estimated receipts and expenditures for the year: Receipts—Estimated receipts from State, $7,000; estimated receipts from manual training, $600; current expenses (borough), $11,500; manual training (borough), $600; repairs (borough), $500, and total $20,200. The total estimated disbursements amounted to $20,200.

The annual report of the Board showed that the enrollment of the schools has increased from 356 in 1911 to 511 in 1915. The financial part of the report showed a balance of $8,080.06 on hand in the current expense; a balance of $31.94 in the repair account; $501.62 in the manual training, $1,150 in the bond and interest, and $187.44 in the building. The building account showed disbursements of $19,385.58; $18,589.58 of which was for the erection to and the enlarging of the Lincoln School and $[illegible] for furniture and equipment.

Every House Should Be Piped for Gas

Gas has been used for so many years and by so many persons that its advantages as a fuel are universally conceded.

But the gas men have not been standing still on past performances. They have been devising new appliances and perfecting old ones, so that today there are at least ONE THOUSAND USES FOR GAS.

Even in the home there are various ways in which the use of gas may be devoted to reducing labor and increasing comfort and efficiency.

With proper piping and the use of the Conceal-O plate outlets, conveniently placed, one may readily utilize gas for a chafing dish, a samovar, a percolator or a toaster, right on the dining-room table. The Conceal-O plate makes it unnnecessary to have a tube from the lighting fixture to the table.

If one desires to have the advantages that the use of gas affords, one might just as well have ALL those advantages as a few of them, and to obtain them all is only a matter of proper house piping and appliances.

The Comfort is worth more than the Cost.

RE-ELECT BOARD IN FANWOOD TOWNSHIP

J. Z. Hatfield, F. W. Wescott, T. J. Nichol and B. P. Hall Chosen.

At the annual school election of Fanwood township, held last night, John Z. Hatfield, Frank W. Wescott and Thomas J. Nicholl were re-elected for terms of three years, and Freeholder Burton P. Hall was elected to serve the two-year unexpired term of S. G. VanHoesen, who resigned. The appropriation of $10,000, $300 of which is for repairs and $9,700 for general expenses, was also voted for.

Great interest in the election was manifested by the colored residents of the "Big Woods" section, where a new school will shortly be built. R. M. Huse was nominated for a three-year term by them, but was hopelessly out of the running on account of rejected ballots.

The yearly financial report, similar to the one published in the township report, was submitted by the Board of Education as was the annual report in which the reason for the delay in the building of the new school was explained. All legal obstructions have been cleared now and the sale of the bonds completed, leaving the Board at liberty to receive bids for the construction of the building, which will be done on March 25. An outline, prepared by S. Dana Townsend, superintendent of schools, was read describing the work being accomplished in the schools this year.

CLINICAL SOCIETY HEARS PAPER ON CANCER PROBLEM

Dr. Howard C. Taylor, of New York, read a highly interesting and instructive paper on "The Cancer Problem," before the members of the Plainfield Clinical Society, last night. The gathering was at the home of Dr. Ellis Hedges and included twenty physicians in all.

Dr. Taylor placed emphasis on the necessity of educating the people to detect the first symptoms of cancer and what methods to adopt to prevent its passing the primary stage. "In several of the States," he said, "associations have campaigns of education under way to lessen cancer troubles, much the same as publicity is given everywhere relative to the tuberculor evil. Much could be done to stamp out the malady," he said, "if the people were given proper instruction.' He urged that the Plainfield physicians use their effort tn securing the proper publicity.

The paper was given a general discussion after Dr. Taylor concluded and refreshments were served late in the evening. The next gathering of the society will be held in April at the home of Dr. Norman Probasco.

CELTICS CELEBRATE THE IRISH HOLIDAY

From the Atlantic to the Pacific Citizens Pay Honor to St. Patrick.

The Celtic race and its descendants celebrate today in all countries of the world. From the Emerald Isle men have gone far and wide in search of fortune and liberty, and have cherished in their children the memory of St. Patrick, the patron saint. In America today, as in the quaint villages and mighty cities of Ireland, as in the battle ranks and warships' turrets under Britain's flag, the shamrock is worn and the good St. Patrick is remembered.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific, every town and hamlet has its Irishman or its man of Celtic blood. Every city is witnessing today the gathering of its Irish citizens to pay honor to the saint. While in some the rancor of politics is stirred up by those who would have Irishmen espouse the German cause, the gatherings today are mainly patriotic and religious, expressing more than ever the profound hope for liberty and progress in the green isle.

Despite the fact that authentic records of St. Patrick are to be had, some dating back almost to his own time, the average reader will probably admit that all he knows about St. Patrick is that he drove the snakes out of Ireland and is beloved by the Irish. But St. Patrick is more deserving of honor and fame for turning the Irish from their worship of idols and hobgoblins to Christianity than for ridding the Emerald Isle of creeping things. He was the apostle of the Irish, and there was no influence so great as his in the history of the race.

The date of St. Patrick's birth is a mooted question, some writers placing it at 377, and others five years earlier. He undoubtedly lived to a ripe age, and historians place his death on March 17, 464.

He was captured by pirates when he was sixteen years old and taken to Ireland from France. He was set to work tending sheep in the mountains, and while doing so prayed fervently day and night "in the snow, in the frost and in the rain." After six years of slavery, St. Patrick escaped from Ireland in a small boat and returned to France, where he was again captured. Some few years later he again made his way to Ireland, where he began his long work of combating the Druids at Tara.

There is a story to the effect that when he was first taken to Ireland by the pirates, he was sold into slavery in exchange for an old kettle. When this kettle was filled with water and placed over the fire, the water became colder and colder as the fire increased instead of hotter, and would not boil until St. Patrick himself prayed over it.

There are several versions of the banishment of snakes from Ireland. One is that while St. Patrick was on Mount Eagle, he was attacked by serpents, which he drove headlong into the sea. Another historian declares that an Egyptian prince visited Ireland and expelled the reptiles, and that the goodly saint had nothing to do with it. A legend from Killarney has it that toward the close of St. Patrick's life there was a certain huge snake that had not been expelled. St. Patrick procured a huge oak chest, so the story runs, into which he enticed the big serpent by suggesting it would be more comfortable than the hard ground. The lid was bolted down, and the serpent begged for his release. But St. Patrick was obdurate and said he would release him "tomorrow." Then he tossed the chest into the lakes of Killarney. The legend further runs that fishermen ever afterward heard the wily old snake crying to know if "tomorrow" had come yet. And they said his writhing was what caused the waves of the sea and his pleas for release the ocean's roar.

The ruins of Slane Abbey on Tara Hill is the greatest memorial to his labor. Throughout Ireland are many "standing stones", with a cross graven on them by order of St. Patrick, symbolic of the consecrating of the Emerald Isle to Christianity. Before St. Patrick's time these stones were fetishes of the pagan belief; but he placed the cross upon them to typify the triumph of Christianity. The Cathedral of St. Patrick at Dun-Patrick is filled with monuments and merial tablets. There is a covered well within the enclosure believed to have been used by the saint himself.

St. Patrick's body is buried under a huge rock adjacent to this cathedral. On the rock is engraved the single word "Patrick."

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Fiske O'Hara, that most excellent interpreter of Irish character roles, will fill an engagement at Plainfield Theatre Saturday night, March 20, presenting his newest play, "Jack's Romance," an ideal picture of Irish life in the middle of the eighteenth century, one of the most picturesque and delightful epochs in the history of the Emerald Isle. "Jack's Romance" tells a very charming story of the eighteenth century life in which the younger son of a noble family, one Jack Connolly, is the principal figure. Jack has been a wanderer for a number of years, and as time has cooled down the anger in which he parted from his brother, he determines to return to his native place and see his kinsman. Not knowing what his reception would be like, he comes in disguise and meets with many exciting adventures, among them being a fight with a highwayman about to hold up the coach of the Duke of Ormonde. Jack sings his way to the heart of the Duke's daughter and wins her, besides discovering the highwayman and becoming reconciled to his family. As usual, Mr. O'Hara's Irish ballads are a very delightful feature of the performance and it is said that he is singing more sweetly this season than ever.

May Irwin, the distinguished comedienne and star of a great number of successful comedies, plays the title role in the film production of the most celebrated of all her stage triumphs, that screamingly funny farce, "Mrs. Black is Back," written by George V. Hobart, and which will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre today and tomorrow. As the unfortunate but jolly Mrs. Black, who in haste lies to her husband about her age, and repents thereafter at leisure (said leisure being chiefly employed in the manufacture of more deceptions to account for the first), Miss Irwin is at her best, and her inimitable facial expression and excellent pantomime work render her art especially adaptable to the screen. The Plainfield Theatre will present another notable picture production Friday afternoon and night and at the matinee only on Saturday, Washington Irving's immortal story of "Rip Van Winkle," with Thomas Jefferson posing the leading role. Children accompanied by parents or guardians will be admitted to the Saturday matinee for the special price of five cents.

BIBLE CLASS REHEARSING.

The Probasco Bible class has undertaken to present "A Regiment of Two," by Anthony E. Wills and judging by the rehearsals the class is going to outdo its former successes. The play is very amusing and the efforts of the "Regiment" to get out of its scrapes are very astonishing.

The cast is as follows: "Arthur Sewall," B. M. Harris; "Ira Wilton," Robert P. Mitchell; "Harry Brentworth," Carlton L. Smith; "Reginald Dudley," Edward W. Cady; 'Jim Buckner," N. J. R. Chandler; "Conrad Melzer," Earl B. Pierson; "Eliza Wilton," Harold W. Downs; "Grace Sewall," Fred E. Serrell; "Laura Wilton," W. Herbert Hillman," and "Lena,' James W. Dunwell.

RUNYON AND LOCAL OPTION.

Much to his credit Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, played an important part in preventing the House of Assembly from dodging the issue on the local option question at the session of the House yesterday afternoon. The bill had been reported adversely by the committee on municipal corporations, and Minorty Leader Martin moved that the report of the committee be sustained by the House. There was a minority report favoring the bill. Mr. Runyon opposed the Martin resolution and said that the Local Option bill was one that commanded serious attention, and that while it had undoubtedly been the fond wish of many that the Senate would kill the bill, it was imperative that the House should give it every possible consideration, whether the members favored it or not.

"We are too jealous of our reputation as a Legislative body, I believe," said the local man, "to fail to give every consideration to this measure, which is one that demands more of the members of this house than almost any other matter that may come before us. I feel that this is a case where we must stand up and be counted, either for or against the measure. This is no time to quit or side step, for the eyes of the whole state are on the bill."

Mr. Runyon then pointed out that the contents of the bill perhaps did not meet with the approval of the majority, but the chance remained nevertheless for those in the House to be strong one way or the other, and it was their bounden duty to register a vote, as it was not worthy of the dignity of the body to dodge the issue. He called attention to the fact that action on the bill might destroy the further political ambition of those present, but "we should make of no moment anything that may happen to us. This is a chance to register a decent and honest vote. Be men! It is up to us to act with ourselves as men and not to adopt a course which will bring upon us the odium of disregarding the wishes of a great number of people."

Even those who are opposed to local option cannot but admire the manly attitude of the Plainfielder, and it is to his everlasting credit that the bill was finally brought to a vote as a result of his stand. He certainly will lose no friends in Union county by being unafraid.

A GOOD THING.

Efforts on the part of those interested in the education of North Plainfield boys and girls to raise a fund for the erection of a gymnasium for the borough High School should be encouraged and those backing the movement should be accorded the support of every parent who has children in school across the brook. For a long time past the Board of Education has deemed it necessary to set aside an appropriation of several hundred dollars each year to rent a hall in which North Plainfield school children may enjoy indoor recreation facilities during the winter months. Only a limited amount of time is allowed the students for the use of the hall now rented, and there has been a growing demand for a place under the control of the municipality.

The fund has been started with a generous contribution from the Parent-Teacher Association and the canvassers should be given the support of the borough as a whole in their undertaking. Despite the difficulties under which physical education is conducted in North Plainfield, the High School is one of the foremost institutions in the scholastic athletics in the State and gives every promise of being able to retain its supremacy.

The police department's spring crusade against automobile speeders is on again. Chief Kiely has issued stringent orders to his men to be on the lookout for law violators and the result will probably mean many arrests during the next two months. The authorities are not especially after the conservative driver who can pilot his car through the streets at a clip several miles over the speed limit without endangering the lives of pedestrians, but are on the trial of the reckness thirty-mile-an-hour driver who has classed himself as a "road-hog." Few machines on our city streets keep within the limit at all times but to the credit of automobilists in general it may be said that a majority exercise a little judgment in handling their vehicles.

Strict policing has reduced the number of flagrant violations to a minimum and the city magistrate's practise of fining every guilty party has brought the would-be law breakers to realize that they cannot trifle with the local authorities. Chief Kiely has impressed upon his men the necessity for enforcing the law in the spirit and not to the letter and better results have been obtained through this policy.

Sheriff Otto's plan to provide instruction for prisoners in the county jail, which he has advocated ever since he took office, may soon become a reality. Assemblyman Morgan succeeded yesterday afternoon in getting the House to pas his bill which gives the Freeholders optional power in the matter. If the bill passes the Senate, and there is no reason for believing that it will not, the Freeholders undoubtedly will take advantage of the situation, and the sheriff's school will be established.

SPECIAL PRIZES IN CONTEST

as follows:

The first prize, a $100 diamond ring, will be given to the candidate, regardless of district limitations, who turns in the greatest number of votes on paid-in-advance subscriptions between midnight Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., Saturday, April 3.

The second and third prize will be awarded respectively to the candidates who have the second and third largest numbers of votes issued as in the case of the winner of the first prize.

The winners of the special prizes will be announced and the prizes will be awarded as soon after April 3 as the work of verification is complete.

The present vote standing of all the candidates now entered will not be considered in the winning of these extra prizes nor will the votes issued on subscriptions that have already been turned in and not voted.

Remember that the vote coupons clipped from the Press do not count toward winning these extra prizes, but count the same as heretofore for the principal prizes.

A great fusilade of ballots was poured into the contest department up to 8 p. m. yesterday, by candidates and their friends, and it has resulted in several changes of position to more aggressive assailants. See important announcement in another section of this paper.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Always on the alert for anything new and novel in the moving picture world, Messrs. Proctor and Sanderson yesterday signed a contract with the World Film Corporation for the exclusive presentation at Proctor's Theatre, this city, of the special series of one-reel comedies which the big firm is now putting out. These comedies will feature such well known stars as Richard Carl, now playing on Broadway in "Ninety in the Shade"; Lulu Glaser, the star of a dozen successful musical comedies; Jefferson DeAngelis, listed among the highest priced stars in the country; Thomas A. Wise, late of "Gentleman from Mississippi" and many others as equally prominent. The first picture under the contract will be displayed at Proctor's on the coming Saturday, under the title of "The Dancing Beetle," featuring Richard Carl. One of these comedies will be shown on each successive Saturday thereafter, the title to be announced in these columns. These films are an absolutely new idea and Messrs. Proctor and Sanderson will receive the weekly installment within three days after their release, giving the Plainfield people something original, as the expression goes, not off the bat." Today's big picture feature at the Proctor house will be the world famous drama of capital and labor, "The Lost Paradise," featuring H. B. Warner. Still another feature picture, Jack London's "Odyssey of the North," is scheduled for tomorrow while the succeeding episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" is announced for Friday. Tomorrow's change of vaudeville will bring the following acts: The Eight Black Dots, a Southern melange of song and dance; Hong Fong, Chinese nut comedian, singing German, French, English and Jewish and doing eccentric dancing. Gwyn and Goscett in the "Down East" skit, "A Golden Wedding"; Rucker and Winford, "The Chinaman and the Coon," and the Scotch players in "My Wife from London."

WANTS JUSTICES TO ENFORCE LAW

State Motor Vehicles Commissioner Urges a Universal Co-operation.

CONDITIONS HERE GOOD

Increasing Number of Motor Vehicles in the State Given as a Reason for Vigorous Campaign—Department Not After Fine Money.

City Judge William G. DeMeza, of this city, as well as every county judge, other city magistrates, and even Supreme Court justices, have been communicated with by Job H. Lippincott, the State Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, requesting co-operation during the year of 1915 with his scheme to enforce the motor laws in New Jersey municipalities. Unlike in a majority of communities in this State there is an intelligent enforcement of the laws here and it is with an idea of bringing about a universal reform that the State Commissioner has instituted the campaign.

Offenders brought before the local magistrate have felt the hand of the law in almost every instance and the police department is co-operating to bring about the arrest and subsequent punishment of all flagrant violators. Mr. Lippincott points out that the vast increase in the number of motor vehicles each year makes it increasingly important that the authorities in every part of New Jersey should be impressed with the grave importance of their duty in maintaining safe conditions upon the highways.

The Supreme Sourt justices have been asked to co-operate with the State Department to the extent of bringing to the attention of each Grand Jury, the importance of the matter. The effect upon the authorities would be extensive, he says, and the moral effect upon each automobilist in every community would be immediately evidenced by a stricter observance of the law and automatically safe conditions would be obtained.

The Commissioner has drawn a comparison between the amount of fines collected in various municipalities and he says that the law has been more strictly enforced in some places than in others. For instance, in Hudson county, Bayonne had only one case in which a $5 fine was inflicted and Hoboken had one, in which a $10 fine was imposed. Jersey City collected $532 as the result of 59 cases, which shows up very unfavorably as compared to Newark, which for a similar period returned $2,380 as the result of 195 cases, and the town of Weehawken, which returned $603 as the result of 78 cases.

The attention of the prosecutor of Mercer county is called to the fact that almost all of the fines received from Mercer county come from the city of Trenton and the prosecutor's particular attention is directed to Lawrenceville, Pennington, Princeton and Windsor, none of which returned more than $10 for the year.

The commissioner states that the department does not desire to obtain a large amount of fine money from any section, nor is the department grading counties on the basis of the amount of fine money collected, but rather upon the number of cases tried and the distribution thereof, always having reference to local conditions. The plan of the department is by co-ordination of authorities to bring about a uniform enforcement of the act throughout the length and breadth of the State and to prevent what has been apparent in former years—that in one community there has been a reasonably strict enforcement, and in another an unreasonably lax enforcement.

JERSEY BUILDING DEDICATION APRIL 1

Vice President Marshall Will Be Among Honored Guests on That Occasion.

San Francisco, March 17—Theodore Hardee, representing President Moore, has officially advised that the New Jersey building will be formally dedicated on April 1 at 3:30 p. m., when it is expected that Vice-President Marshall and a number of distinguished people will be present. Three prominent Jerseymen have agreed that the world is very small after all. They are Capt. Bernard McLain, of Elizabeth; C. A. Oliver, formerly of Rahway, and Capt. W. J. Ennis, of Company B, First New Jersey Volunteers, Newark.

These gentlemen met by accident in the New Jersey building and were introduced to one another by Colonel Margerum. After having their pictures taken they sat on the porch for hours swapping stories of the early days of New Jersey and the wonderful progress the State has made in the past fifty years. Capt. McLain is touring California and expects to visit Honolulu.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

They tell us an ill wind always blows someone some good. That Y. M. C. A. victory of last Saturday afternoon makes a third game for the city title essential and incidently will the two institutions cause to open their money boxes for the reception of a few scattered shekels. These combats have proven magnets for the basketball fans and some good returns have been reported by the coin checkers who welcome the spectators at the gates.

If you enjoy slam-bang competition staged on the European war style, don't pass up an opportunity to witness that engagement on the Columbus Club court tomorrow night. It will be an international argument with both contestants sending out their heaviest artillery.

Recent happenings have led us to believe that it's a good thing for somebody that the basketball season is near its finish. Some dissatisfaction is apparently lurking in several of the camps of basketeers around here and unless the exhibition curtain is soon pulled across we're going to witness one grand splash.

News that Bob Fitzsimmons, the hero of many a ring battle, is going to tie up to another life contract comes as a big surprise. Some few weeks ago the lanky Cornishmen swore up and down to us that he was still able to take good care of himself and now he turns around and signs up a helpmeet.

A local baseball magnate told us the other day that if he could see enough talent laying idle around Plainfield he would gather together a ball nine and compete with Newark for that Federal League franchise. If Baker had swatted out a half dozen home runs in each of the world's series games last year Connie Mack's boys would have pulled down another world's flag.

If some of these championship affairs were started a little earlier in the basketball season this old burg would be crazy by this time. This finishing dose has certainly stirred things up around the old Queen City.

With a half dozen good courts staring them in the face the Plainfield High School and Y. M. C. A. fives can't come to an agreement as to where the third tilt will be staged. That's our idea of nothing at all to worry about.

One soldier in the European war has been carrying a pedometer around on his person since the conflict got underway. A recent registration read 1,200 miles. We are of the opinion that if certain basketball players in this town had an apendage of this variety hitched to their person they would find that they had traveled a good deal further than the soldier boy has. On the other hand we're inclined to believe that there aren't very many basketball players who would exist through 1,200 miles of European war fighting.

Query—Is it true that the fines collected by the city police department from automobile speeders go to the State? What is the limit for autos in Plainfield? Has any patrolman the right to cause the arrest of drivers who violate the law or must a State official arrest him?—L. D.

Answer—A portion of the fines collected from violators of the motor vehicles' laws in Plainfield go to the State Department of of Motor Vehicles and in turn is used in the repair and upkeep of State roads. Twelve miles is the speed limit in Plainfield. Members of the Plainfield police force, patrolmen or men of other ranks, have the right to take violators of the law into custody.

Sporting Editor:

Query—When a man obtains a divorce, does that mean that he can never marry again?—E. F.

Answer—Not always. The clause making it unlawful for him to marry again is seldom inserted in a divorce decree.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Do the Plainfield public school teachers get paid during the summer months?—G. T.

Answer—No. However, the salaries are made sufficiently high to cover the two months' lay-off each year.

Sporting Editor:

Question—Is there any chance of my getting a position with the contractors in charge of the construction of the new sewer system?—H. O.

Answer—There probably is if you can perform the work required. In the contract a clause was inserted whereby the contractors agreed to employ local labor as far as possible.

Sporting Editor

Query—Where can I secure further information concerning the examinations to be held for a position on the police force?—V. G.

Answer—Apply to Chief of Police Kiely at the local headquarters. He has the necessary data at his command and can probably give you some personal advice on the subject. You had better get busy pretty soon, however, for the mayor has announced that all applications must be in by March 20.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Is Scotch Plains a city?—N. J. U.

Answer—Not in our opinion. Inasmuch as it has not sought to rival New York city in population figures, commercial enterprises or other branches of human endeavor, this question is our idea of nothing at all to worry about.

NORTH PLAINFIELD PLAYERS HAVE THEIR FIRST WORKOUT

North Plainfield High School baseball candidates had their first practice yesterday afternoon on Cricket field, and from the large number that turned out, N. P. H. S. certainly ought to have a team picked out to make a good showing against Clinton H. S. in the opening game of the season April 2.

Over thirty fellows were out and all showed an earnest desire to make good although not much work could be done except to get a little fielding and batting practice. Captain Smalley was well pleased with the turnout, however, and entertains high hopes of putting another winning team on the field this year. Coach Mullen was present to help with the work.

Those who were out were Oliver Hebert, Harold Lunger, Hyman Abrams, John Dawe, Gibson Fairman, Appleton Van Mater, Martin McDonough, Andrew McDonough, Ray Force, Ray Stewart, Frank Fetherston, Augustus Van Deventer, Harold Meade, Tom Ball, Ronald Conroy, Warren Townley, Oscar Dilts, Frank Rowley, Vincent LaPorte, Ernest Stahl, Daniel Denny, Ralph Smalley, Victor Levitz, Duclos Van Mater, Wesley Hughes and Edson Day.

GIRLS AFTER OUT OF TOWN OFFICIAL FOR THIRD GAME

At a meeting of the coaches and managers of the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School girls' basketball teams held yesterday afternoon, Monday afternoon, March 22, was the date decided upon for the third interscholastic game. The managers of the two quintets were delegated to secure the Y. M. C. A. court, if possible, for the contest.

The question of referee was discussed and several letters were sent out to out-of-town officials, among them being one to Max Leimer, who refereed the second boys' game several weeks ago.

WILL DELAY ACTIVE CAMPAIGN FOR "GYM" UNTIL NEXT FALL

Although there is a great amount of interest being shown in swelling the "new gym" fund started by the Parent-Teacher Association of North Plainfield, for a new recreation center for the borough schools, the executive committee has decided not to start an active campaign this spring but will wait until the latter part of the year or the first of next year. There are several reasons why the association cannot launch such a campaign at the present time and get the best results, so the fund will be increased at present by unsolicited subscriptions.

The receipts, which were realized from the "Hall of Fame," are not as large as was first announced as the expense to produce the entertainment two nights was heavier than expected. After deducting the total expenses and the money for the spelling prizes, for which purpose the entertainment was given, there was $50 left for this worthy movement. As has been announced before forty dollars have been added to this amount by voluntary contributions which brings the total near the one hundred dollar mark. The contributions were given in the following amounts but no names will be published at the present time: Three $10, two $5, one $3 and one $1.

Subscriptions may be sent to any of the executive officers, or to Mrs. E. D. Hutchinson, chairman of the entertainment committee. The executive officers are Mrs. M. H. Ewart, Mrs. Judd Stewart, Mrs. Allan Laing and Mrs. W. O. Taylor.

ROBINS' LAST MATCH.

The Robin bowling team, champions of the Columbus Club five-man bowling tournament, will roll its last game Friday night against the Hawks. The Robins can drop all three games and yet maintain the lead.

MASONIC MATCH.

Azure and Jerusalem are booked to meet in a regular match on the Masonic League alleys tonight.

BORO FIREMEN OUT FOR COPPERS' SCALPS

North Plainfield Aggregation Held Initial Practice Several Days Ago.

The members of the North Plainfield Fire Department have already started to work the kinks out of their salary wings and have been out tossing the ball around during the last few spring days. There are a large number of men out for positions, including several new players. The borough fire fighters will probably play their annual game with the Plainfield cops again this year and hope to repeat last year's performance, that of walloping the "coppers."

Jim Walker has been elected as manager and a captain will be chosen before the season starts. The firemen are aching for a practice game with the borough school team some time soon. There are about fourteen in the department that are good ballplayers, among them being "Garry" Sheppard, "Bert" Bodine, "Al." DeCamp, Fred Coulthat, Ray Schmidt, who is a stellar backstop, "Al." Fritz, the fleet-footed outfielder, "Larry" Barry, who covered the difficult station to perfection last season, "Mike" Hogan, Claude Hand, who has a variety of curves, Harry Schuck, "Jim" Walker and "Joe" Haulenback.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

CHAPTER III.

THE arrival of an envelope by messenger rendered unnecessary the immediate need of police aid for the Moore family.

With fingers which trembled in spite of his habitual control, the father of June opened the telegram and read this strange message:

I am sorry I had a certain party tied and lost in Hunter's woods. Please find him and tell him I am sorry. I am going to join our darling. I will protect her until we meet again, when all will be happy. Your faithful MARIE.

New plans were made accordingly.

On the dock against which rocked and grated the swift little motorboat

Swiftly, Silently, June Gained the Deck.

Flash the lonely overcoat and cap pursued their almost imperceptible way. A touring car stopped on the street up the hill.

"It is cold, my friend, is it not?" called Henri as he rushed forward, bottle in hand. "Shall we warm ourselves—yes?"

"Yep," rolled up the somber voice, with frosty cordiality, and the neck of the bottle disappeared in the slit of the overcoat collar.

"The motor tender from the Hilarity—it is not yet returned, eh?"

"Nope."

"Voila!" Henri is even cheerful as he races back up the dock. "I shall return, my friend Monsieur Frappe."

As Henri jumps into his car a dim, fat figure slinks out of the shadows and hops on behind.

* * * * * * *

Left alone momentarily, June threw open the door which she had just locked and dashed back along the gangway toward the pantry. At the end of the passage she found a companionway which led her up to the deck. She rushed forward to the prow, taking in at a glance that they were far from shore and in the open water. The distant lights glowed dully through the mist, but just ahead of her, on the port side, bore down the red and green lights of a tug.

"Ahoy!" she cried, lifting her hands to her mouth like a megaphone. "Ahoy!" she screamed.

Strong arms seized her—the heavy jawed officer she had seen as she had come on board. Two others came running up, Edwards and Cunningham. Close behind were Tommy Thomas and Mrs. Villard, the former laughing, the latter panic stricken. A handkerchief was pressed against her mouth, and the tug flashed by.

It was Edwards and Cunningham who dragged June down into the crimson and gold salon, and as June was jostled in the first thing she saw was the dark, handsome face of Gilbert Blye! He was standing at the portable buffet, quietly drinking a glass of wine!

P. Wilkins and wife came running in, and Edwards, panting, his heavy lips parted in a half snarl and half grin, released his hold on June.

"Lock her up," he ordered and joined Blye at the buffet. Blye lifted his glass, suavely smiling, as June, now unresisting, was led away.

Inside her stateroom June locked her door and at the same time heard it bolted from the outside.

* * * * * * *

On the dock the overcoat and cap watched the figure of Henri with drowsy interest; also a short, thick figure.

"Say, what do they want?" the short, thick figure asked, with stiff lips.

"Didn't I tell you before to hike?" husked the warm steam of breath. "Get off the dock."

"The beautiful little motorboat!" interrupted Henri, with ingratiating enthusiasm. "My friend M. Flambeau, would it not be possible"—

"Nope."

"Voila!" Henri was quite cheerful. "I shall return again, my friend Frappe."

Henri was just starting his car and the short, thick figure had just slunk out of the shadows to hop on behind when the overcoat and cap sat on the edge of the dock, with their feet dangling toward the water.

"Ah!" breathed Henri to the stiff figure beside him. "At last it arrives! We shall wait!"

"Is there any left?" husked a voice.

"Pardon," abjectly apologized Henri, "a thousand pardons, Mlle. Marie!" And he produced a fresh bottle.

The thick, short figure slinking back into the shadows wiped its lips with its tongue and shivered.

Dawn—slowly the chill, gray mist which lay upon the river began to clear.

"Voila," cracked the voice of Henri, but the tone was cheerful still. "He sleeps!"

It was true. The overcoat and cap, after bobbing and swaying dangerously over the water's edge for hour after hour, had at last stretched out on the dock for the slumber due to a night watchman who was thoroughly at ease and thoroughly warm.

Henri and Marie, with all the mental effect of stealthiness, sprang into the swift looking little motorboat.

A short, thick figure came painfully waddling out on the dock and shook the overcoat. The cap wabbled.

"Hey!" This was from the short, thick figure, but the aperture through which the sound came was so stiff that the result was only a wheeze.

A snore came from the overcoat.

"Hey!" A punch, a kick, but a stiff kick which had no force.

"Ugh!" The grunt was from the night watchman.

"Well, you with the distillery breath. I tried to tell you all night, didn't I? Oh, get alive! This is Bill Wolf, the private detective, talking to you."

"Ugh!" The cap moved, but the overcoat was still asleep.

"They stole the Flash. I say, they"—

"The Flash!" The overcoat straightened. It rose. The cap stiffened its angle. The combination scrambled to its feet.

"They stole the Flash!"

"Stole it! Who?"

"Oh, who?" The tone was one of infinite contempt. "Why, the little pink whiskered guy and the bony dame! Stole it! And now where did they go?"

"The yacht—what's her name?" The overcoat and cap were still hazy. The cap turned gropingly toward the hamper, on the adjoining dock, where the name stood out in blunt white letters, "Hilarity!" "The"—

"The Hilarity!" Bill Wolf stooped with his hands on his knees to stare at that information which had been in plain sight all night. "Me for a telephone. Gee, look at that boat go!"

Upon the swelling waves rode the Hilarity, and all on board of her, save the officers of the night and one other, were sound asleep.

That one was June Warner. She had noiselessly dressed herself in a yachting costume, and now she slowly removed a bar which held the sliding of a secret panel she had discovered in the wall of her cabin. Then she slipped it to one side until the opening was large enough to admit her lithe, slender figure. She found herself in a stateroom faintly illumined by the glowing of the dawn, and in that room, on a chair and still wearing the evening raiment of the night before, sat, his head bent upon his shoulder, Orin Cunningham.

With a shudder of aversion June sped to the door of Cunningham's cabin and opened it. She passed through the salon. There on the bench stretched Tommy Thomas, one tapering arm bent over her head and her dainty slippers crossed in slumbrous ease.

Swiftly, silently, June gained the deck. Creeping close to the cabins, she rounded the stern. The Hilarity had dropped anchor, and the landing stairs with their silken hand rail had been let down. At the platform bobbed the motor tender.

Swiftly, silently, the runaway bride crept out and down the side of the yacht and dropped as noiselessly as a cat into the motorboat while the long pink fingers of the dawn swept athwart the yellowing sky.

With a thumping heart June started the motor, and at the sound Gilbert Blye's dark, handsome face appeared above the rail.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Well, how was everything?" asked Nell as the last guest closed the door, and tired but happy she turned to Dick.

"All right!" came in hearty tones as her husband locked the door. "The dinner was fine."

"I thought so myself." A pleased smile was on Nell's face. "It really was my initiation into the social set here, and I was anxious to have things go extra well."

"How did you like Miss Rudolph?" Dick turned to ask this question, the clock key in his hand.

"I wasn't very much impressed with her. Why did the Parsons bring her? I forgot the reason they gave when they called you up."

"Why, she is the firm's new stenographer, and as she landed here a stranger, and is to be thrown with us so much, they thought it would be pleasant for her to come tonight."

"So that's a stenographer," said Nell meditatively. "She doesn't seem to have a bit of a business air about her. She seemed so quiet and dreamy."

"She is a stranger; that would account for her silence. Her eyes are fine, aren't they?"

"Her face has not enough expression to suit me. Who was doing the work before she came?"

"It's a new position. She will work for all of us. She has her desk in my office, and I am out of it much of the time. I don't believe she will get on my nerves much. I did not like the idea at first, but of course I could not say anything, being new."

"I am sorry you have to have her in your office." Nell was slowly taking down her hair and the face she saw in the glass was serious.

Dick caught a glimpse of the reflection and came up behind her. "Why so serious?" he asked, pinching her cheek.

She made no answer and he turned her face toward him by taking her chin in his hand.

"What is it?" he asked gravely.

"I suppose you will laugh at me, but I don't like the idea of that girl being poked into your office. You are there many more waking hours than you are at home, and such intimate associations are not right. They have made an endless amount of trouble."

"In nine cases out of ten the trouble was all imaginary. Here you have barely met this girl, and you are beginning to borrow trouble about her. Forget it, little girl. Let's not begin any such thing."

"Isn't there any other place for her to work?" persisted Nell.

"No; and if there was I wouldn't ask Parsons to change his plans. What excuse could I give? Would you want me to tell him that my wife objected to my working in the same room with a girl? Oh, that would be good! A pretty light it would show you in." Dick laughed.

"Well, ever since Cousin Ella's experience I have hated the name stenographer."

"You had just as much reason to hate the name husband; he cast enough odium on it."

"You know everything one does in a little village is discussed by everybody. Do be careful, Dick."

"Oh! I'll take out my words and look at them before speaking to her," said Dick with mock gravity.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

A half-worn whisk broom makes a good scrubbing brush for enameled ware. Trim it to a stub, scald with soapy water, then with clear warm water and finally rinse with cold water. When washing enamelware, if the food sticks you will find a few strokes with one of these brooms cleans without injury.

MEATLESS DINNER

Baked Potatoes.
Macaroni and Cheese.
Tomato Scalloped.
Corn Pone.

Parboil one box of macaroni in salt water; drain, put layer of macaroni in baking dish and layer of cheese, salt, pepper, dot with butter, and so on until dish is full, with macaroni on top.

Tomato Scalloped: Same as above, using bread in place of macaroni, and tomatoes in place of cheese.

Corn Pone: Two cups cornmeal, one cup wheat flour, half cup sugar, half teaspoon soda, two teaspoons baking powder, two eggs, pinch salt, two cups cold water, butter size of egg. Sift dry ingredients, add egg, water, butter; beat hard for a minute, pour in shallow pan and bake twenty minutes. Serve hot with butter.

Take notice that everything is baked, thereby using one fire.

THE TABLE

Coleslaw—A Thanksgiving dinner is not complete unless a dish of coleslaw accompanies the meat course. Cut the white stalks of the cabbage into shreds and let them lie in cold salt water for an hour. Drain and add white mustard seed and celery seed in a reasonable quantity. Put the cabbage in a glass bowl and pour over it the following dressing: Four tablespoons of butter, one tablespoon of flour, one tablespoon of sugar, one teaspoon of mustard, cayenne pepper, three eggs, one cupful of milk, one-half cupful vinegar, one-half teaspoon salt. Set the butter to melt in a sauce pan, then stir in the flour. Beat until smooth, then add the milk. Let it come to a boil. Beat the eggs and mix into them the other ingredients, adding the vinegar last. Stir the eggs into the boiling mixture and stir till of the consistency of thick custard.

Potato Soup, Without Meat or Milk—Cut four medium-sized potatoes into small squares; also one small onion; add one-fourth teaspoon pepper and salt to about three pints water. Boil until potatoes and onion are well done. Then brown two heaping tablespoons flour, mixing it with a little cold water, free from lump, and put into soup. Boil this five or ten minutes. Last of all put in one teaspoon butter. Serve with salted wafers. This is one of the inexpensive ways of having fine soup and cutting down expenses.

Collops in Batter—Use rare roast beef or cold veal. Cut into pieces one inch thick, two inches wide, three inches long. Put one tablespoon beef drippings or butter into a pan. Shred an onion and brown one tablespoon of it in the hot fat. If there is gravy left from a previous meal, add half a pint to onion in the pan. Should there be none, use instead half a pint of hot water thickened with one teaspoon flour rubbed smooth with cold water. Add saltspoon of salt and half as much pepper. When it boils, pour over meat in a baking dish and cover all with a batter made as follows: Mix one cup flour and pinch of salt with two-thirds cup milk; stir in one egg beaten light, one teaspoon baking powder. Bake until a delicate brown, which will be about twenty minutes.

Molasses Layer Cake—One-half cup molasses, one-half cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, one egg, two-thirds cup cold water, one teaspoon soda, dissolved in water. Mix very soft and bake in three layers. A raisin filling is fine with this cake and will keep a long time.

WOMEN AND THE WAR.

Now from one country, now from another, come accounts of women serving in the army, some times in disguise, among the Germans, sometimes openly, among the Cossacks and Serbs. Among the soldiers sent to the hospital the other day was a Russian girl of nineteen, who had been in nineteen battles.

It is not to be desired that women should go as soldiers; they can be more useful in other ways; but it is folly to say that they are incapable of military service. Ex-Secretary of the Navy Long says:

"Think of arguing with a sober face against a man whose brains are reduced to such a minimum that he solemnly asserts a woman should not vote because she cannot fight. In the first place, she can fight; in the second, men are largely exempt from military service; and in the third, there is not the remotest relation between firing a musket and casting a ballot."—A. S. B., The Woman's Journal.

In the course of his address at a Peace Conference in Chicago, Rabbi Wise said:

"I hold that the absence of women from the councils of State is partially, if not largely, responsible for the continuance of the plague of war upon earth. It is increditable that eight or nine nations are engaged in the greatest war that the world has ever known, and not a woman in all these lands has been consulted as to whether war or peace should be, though tens of thousands of men of women born have died, and the last great terrible cost of war in life-long sorrow and suffering will be by women borne."

GOOD NEWS.

Mayor Mitchel told 3,000 people assembled in the Brooklyn Academy of Music Sunday night that he would vote for Woman Suffrage at the polls next November.

WHAT'S IN A NAME.
(From the Woman's Journal.)

A little girl named her kitten "Anti-Suffragette." When her mother asked her why she gave the little thing such an awful name, she replied: "Oh, that's all right. She can change it when she gets her eyes open."

SPRING COAT SUIT.

Whatever else the critics may have to say of the designs created by American dressmakers certainly none can accuse them of over elaboration. "Plainness unadorned" seems to be the slogan of these designers especially in the tailored suits. The first showings for the spring trade seem to lean noticeably in that direction. The suit selected for illustration here is of gabardine with jaunty hip length coat, the front pleated under a broad belt and showing a distinct flare at the bottom. The sleeves and cuffs are cut in one much resembling those of a child's Russian suit and like the collar are button trimmed. The skirt is a skirt, only that and nothing more—no ornament, pleat or trimming being apportioned to it.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS
BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Adventures of Minnie Monkey.

When Minnie Monkey ran away from school she didn't think
Of getting into trouble right away.
But soon she found that what she thought would be great fun, was not
Which mostly happens when you disobey.

The Organ-Grinder's children took Miss Minnie in the house;
To them she was a very lucky find,
Because their father's monkey had just died the day before,
And he couldn't go around to grind.

But when he saw Miss Minnie Monk he said at once: "Run quick
And bring the little cap and coat to me;
We'll dress her up and teach her how to turn a somersault
And how to make a little bow," said he.

Poor Minnie was so frightened that she couldn't say a word;
And so they put a cap upon her head.
And next they put her in a thing she'd never seen before:
A tiny little monkey-coat of red.

And when the Organ-Grinder said: "Now turn a somersault!"
She didn't in the very least know how.
And so he said: "I'll teach you if it takes all afternoon,
To turn a somersault and make a bow."

And when she'd learned to do these things, the Organ-Grinder man
Said: "Now you'll have to take this little cup,
And every time that anybody throws a coin at you,
Just make a little bow and pick it up.

"And then tomorrow morning when we go on the street
You'd better not forget the things I've said."
By this time Minnie Monkey was so very, very tired
That she was glad enough to go to bed.

And just because she was so tired she went right off to sleep,
And didn't waken up till it was light.
I won't have time to tell you now the things that happen next;
I'll have to wait until tomorrow night.

LAST SAD RITES FOR MISS NELLIE VERMEULE

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, the funeral of Miss Nellie E. Vermeule, whose death occurred Sunday, was held at the home of her parents on Jackson avenue this afternoon. Rev. C. C. Cain, pastor of Grace M. E. church, was the officiating clergyman and during the service two solos, "Face to Face" and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," were sung by Mrs. E. D. Young. The floral tributes were unusually numerous and handsome and included set pieces from the official board of Grace M. E. church, the Epworth League and other organizations in the church of which Miss Vermeule was a member. There were also many magnificent pieces from friends and neighbors, the young woman having been a great favorite throughout the city and borough.

Burial was made in the North Plainfield cemetery, the pall bearers being: Alfred Thorn, Joseph Rutledge, Virgil P. Heath, J. Russell Harden, Benjamin Schuck and Louis Bullman.

COUNTY DOCTORS MET.

RIFLE CLUB MEET.

The monthly meeting of the Plainfield Rifle Club was held in the Company K Armory last night and a large number of the members were out. A short business meeting was held after which the members held a practice shoot.

Two Bills for Better Business

When an employer finds that the machines that he has provided for his employes hinder rather than help them in their work, he loses no time in throwing out those machines. His instant need is for other machines that will do the work better.

Such is the present situation in regard to the Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Laws. You citizens of New Jersey and Pennsylvania have found that the cumbersome machinery of these laws causes a waste of two million dollars a year in unearned wages and seriously impairs the efficiency of your employes, the railroads of your States. Agreed that it is high time to be rid of this wasteful machinery, your need now is for something to take its place that will do the work better.

In the Legislatures of both your States bills have been introduced putting the control of the proper manning of trains in the proper hands—those of the Public Service Commissions. If these bills are passed they will do all that the Full Crew Laws were intended to do—insure safe and efficient train operation—without the present huge waste.

As a straightaway business proposition, the immediate passing of these bills is a pressing public necessity. Write to your elected Representatives at Harrisburg and Trenton urging them to work and vote for these sorely needed bills.

WILL CELEBRATE LEE'S SURRENDER

Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., to Appropriately Observe Important Event.

PLAN CIVIC PROGRAM

Commander T. O. Doane Names Large Committee to Arrange Details for Affair to Be Held in Reform Hall April 9.

In keeping with a movement started by former Senator David J. Palmer, of Iowa, national commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, has plans under way for a big celebration to be held on April 9 to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox. In Grand Army circles the event is considered of national patriotic importance to be second only to the signing of the Declaration of Independence in 1776. Veterans of the Civil War in every state of the Union are planning to celebrate the day that meant so much to them at the time and which will remain with them as the happiest day of their martial career.

Chief T. O. Doane is commander of the local post and at the last meeting he appointed a large committee to arrange the details of the celebration. It will be held in Reform Hall and already a cordial invitation has been extended to the public to participate and make the affair a success. A feature of the program will be the addresses, given by some of the best speakers of the State. A large number have already volunteered and the committee will make the selection. There will also be music and a general patriotic display. The members of the post have determined to make the surrender jubilee the greatest demonstration the Civil War veterans have ever given Plainfield as all the big cities are taking the day up as a civic duty. It will not only instill greater love for the country in the hearts of the younger generation but will give the old soldiers an opportunity to review the day that meant so much to both armies.

General Robert E. Lee surrended at Appomattox Court House on April 9, 1865, bringing the four years strife between the North and South to a close. Peace had been hoped for long before the day and when it was finally proclaimed the entire world was filled with gladness. The veterans on both sides of the terrible struggle, returned to their homes bound in a greater fellowship than they ever felt before, and the fiftieth anniversary will give them an opportunity to renew the pledges of brotherhood recorded on the eventful day when Lee handed his sword to Grant.

MIDDLEBROOK CHAPTER HAD MEETING AND SOCIAL TIME

Camp Middlebrook Chapter, D. A. R., of Bound Brook, were the guests of Mrs. John K. Roundey at Trueli Court yesterday afternoon, about twenty being present. Following the usual business meeting a social hour was enjoyed during which the hostess served refreshments.

A feature of the afternoon was the reading of a paper by Mrs. Thomae, of Bound Brook, who was recently appointed State Historian of the order. Her subject dealt with a phase of work of interest to the chapter and was well presented.

MEXICAN SITUATION IS MORE REASSURING TODAY

Washington, March 18.—The situation in Mexico was more reassuring today. Mexico City was reported quiet and the State Department learned that rail and telegraphic communication from El Paso to the Mexican capital may be opened shortly. The disturbance at Progresso has practically ceased, the storm centre having shifted to Campeche.

GOSPEL ADDRESS.

A second address on "The Millennium," which will lead to a conclusion of that subject, will be given (D. V.) by Samuel Ridout, at the hall, 209 East Front street, at 8 o'clock this evening. Owing to the blessedness and solemnity of the truths relating to such a subject a special invitation is given to attend.

GREATER PLAINFIELD BILL PASSES SENATE

"Machinery" to Make Consolidation Legal Before the House.

Another step in providing the "machinery" to facilitate the consolidation of Plainfield and North Plainfield was passed by the State Senate yesterday in the form of bill No. 286, introduced by Senator W. W. Smalley, of Bound Brook. This provides for the establishment of a law making the consolidation of the two municipalities legal and will now have to be acted upon by the House. Inasmuch as the city and borough are located in different counties new legislation is needed before the combining of the two can be brought out.

The father of the bill, in commenting on it, said it was not the intention to change the county boundary which severs the two municipalities as it would deprive Somerset of considerable population.

On December 22, last, the voters of North Plainfield, at a special election, balloted to combine with Plainfield. A majority of thirty-nine was returned in favor of the proposition. It will now have to be acted upon by the voters of this city and in the event of it not being favorably received here the legislation, even if passed by the House, will be of no use. The bill does not effect the consolidation of the two places but gives the municipalities the right to combine.

In an interview with a Daily Press reporter this afternoon former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, who has been one of the active workers for annexation and is against consolidation, said: "In my opinion the provisions of this bill provide for conditions that will be detrimental to the best interests of both North Plainfield and Plainfield. It will mean that Plainfield will have to assume the support of the borough, take charge of its police and fire departments, public schools and other municipal features without receiving in return anything of value. It is argued that Plainfield merchants will receive the patronage of North Plainfield residents but that it is something they already have without having to bear the responsibility of conducting the government on the other side of the brook.

"The bill satisfies a few individuals and is decidedly against public welfare. There are other municipalities clamoring for admittance into Somerset or Union counties and in my opinion the best way to satisfy all demands is to get together with these places, as well as North Plainfield, and bring about legislation that will make possible one big county."

CHINA'S URGENT CALL FOR AMERICA'S HELP

Rev. Henry DePree Presents Vivid Picture of Republic's Needs.

"The Call of the Largest Republic to the Greatest," was the subject of an interesting talk given by Rev. Henry DePree, of Amoy, China, at Trinity Reformed church, last night. The speaker was introduced by Rev. Daniel Rapalje, of this city, who was formerly a missionary in Amoy. Mr. DePree said in part:

"The call that comes from China in an 'S. O. S.' call—Save, O Save. It comes from the largest republic in the world, a country whose population is given in Statesman's Year Book as 433,000,000. It comes to the greatest republic in the world—America. America is great in its history, institutions, ideals and wealth. China is poor. But America can help her.

"The call of this largest republic is a call of need in political life and social life. But only the church can give real help; for lack of love, honesty, and unselfishness are at the bottom of it. The Gospel of Christ satisfies this need. The President of China has said: 'Our greatest weakness is not in lack of material possessions, but lies in the hearts of the people.'

"Social conditions in a land where men are willing to be beasts of burden, women are virtually slaves, and children sold as chattels, call to richly blessed America to stretch out a helping hand.

"The plastic conditions of China today further emphasizes the urgency of the call. In large evangelistic meetings recently held most influential men enrolled their names for Bible classes."

ST. PATRICK IN SONG AND STORY

Patron Saint of Ireland Honored at St. Joseph's Church.

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM

Pleasing Musicale Under the Direction of Miss Mary O'Connor is Followed by An Address by Rev. Walter Drum, S. J., of Maryland.

St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, was commemorated and honored in song and story in St. Joseph's church last night. The edifice was taxed to its capacity by an appreciative audience, which evidenced great pleasure in the numbers offered. The program included a musicale and lecture. The former part of the program was in charge of Miss Mary O'Connor, who was assisted by Miss Mary Smith, organist of St. Mary's church, and Prof. Herman Jungman and orchestra. The success of the affair was due to the untiring efforts of Miss O'Connor, who had trained the chorus for the past several weeks and last night's rendition of the various selections reflected credit to the popular young woman.

The soloists taking part in the entertainment were at their best and each interpreted his song in a pleasing manner. The vocal solos and those who sang them are as follows: Tenor solo, "Killarney," Edward Harding, Jr.; baritone solo, "Belive Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms,' Howard Riley; contralto solo, 'The Last Rose of Summer," Mrs. Alfred Seidel; tenor solo, "Where the River Shannon Flows," Edward Harding, Jr.; bass solo, "Mother Machree," William G. Smith; soprano solo, "I Hear You Calling Me," Miss Myrtle Kipsey.

The chorus sang the following

TO BE REPRESENTED AT STATE MEETING

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk Will Be a Delegate to Organization Session.

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk, who is an officer in the New Jersey Poultry Improvement Association, was unanimously elected to represent that organization at the meeting of the New Jersey Association, during a business session in the Exempt Firemen's Hall, last night. It is proposed to have the new association act as the head of all of the other bodies of its kind in the State, among which is the Plainfield organization.

The local organization is making a canvas of poultry dealers in central New Jersey and the roster of members now totals 200, according to reports received last night.

Following the business meeting, Prof. Harry R. Lewis, of the College Farms, New Brunswick, delivered a lecture illustrated with stereopticon slides. His talk was thoroughly interesting and one that was appreciated by the members. He touched on housing, feeding, incubation and weaning chickens.

The next meeting of the Association will be held April 21. The resignation of William Trembath as secretary, was received last night, and Joseph R. Weiner, of Dunellen, was named to succeed him.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL FIRST IN BIG LIBRARY CONTEST

Representatives of the organizations entered in Plainfield's library contest gathered in Tepper's store this morning, when the final count of votes was made. An eleventh hour rally resulting in an avalanche of votes, sent St. Mary's School to the fore for first prize. The second went to the Jr. O. U. A. M. and the third to the Y. M. H. A.

The number of ballots soared into the millions and the committee in charge labored many hours getting out the decisions.

The contest was conducted by a number of leading merchants of this city and has proven itself a decided success.

LENTEN PREACHER.

Rev. Morgan Ashley, formerly of this city, but now of Bordentown, will conduct the special Lenten services at St. Stephen's church tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Rev. Ashley was formerly rector of St. Stephen's parish and has a large circle of friends in this city.

PUBLIC HEARING ON MUNICIPAL SURVEY

Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association Plans a Mass Meeting.

In order to satisfy the demands of the public for a hearing on the city survey to be conducted in Plainfield by the Municipal Bureau of Research, the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association has arranged for a mass meeting to be held in the Plainfield High School Auditorium next Thursday night. The exact nature of the undertaking has not been made entirely clear in preliminary announcements and with a view to giving out the necessary information the association has arranged to have several speakers acquainted with the topic to speak on that occasion.

Professor Austin Scott, mayor of New Brunswick; David Henney, chairman of the Councilmanic fire committee of Montclair, and Mayor Leighton Calkins will deliver addresses. A general discussion will follow when those in the audience will be given an opportunity to ask questions and have them answered. Music will be furnished by the municipal orchestra.

CHILDREN'S PLAY CAUSES FIRE IN WEST END HOUSE

Children playing with matches while their parents were away from home caused a slight blaze and a narrow escape from the loss of two lives in the home of William S. Watkins, 723 South Second street, yesterday afternoon. James Pope, an employe in the office of the Potter Machine Tool Works, which is almost directly across the street from the house, noticed flames issuing from the window and hurried to the scene.

When he made his way to the second floor of the building he found two small children, three and two years old, in a state of wild excitement. He carried both to safety and then notified fire headquarters. The blaze was extinguished with little damage resulting.

It later developed that although badly frightened the children were uninjured. They had been playing about the room with matches and they tossed one in a drawer of clothes which almost immediately caught fire.

ISAAC VAIL BURIED WITH SIMPLE FUNERAL SERVICE

The funeral of Isaac Vail, whose death accurred Monday afternoon after a brief illness, was held at his late home on Richmond street, this afternoon. The service was a very simple one and was conducted in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church. There were many handsome floral tributes contributed by friends.

Burial was made in the North Plainfield cemetery, the pall bearers being three brothers and a brother-in-law of Mrs. Vail. These were were Harris McMurterie, of Brooklyn; John Abrams, of Bernardsville; Henry Abrams, of Belle Mead, and Samuel Abrams, of Rocky Hill.

MISS EWART WAS HOST FOR TWO GIRLS' "FRATS"

Miss Margaret Ewart, of Fairview avenue, gave an elaborate St. Patrick's supper last evening at her home in honor of the Mu Eta and Sigma Beta, two girls "frats" of North Plainfield High School.

The affair had been carefully planned and proved a great success. The house was tastily decorated in green and white.

After the supper music and games were enjoyed until a late hour. Short after-dinner speeches were also made by the presidents of the two societies and several of the members.

Those present were the Misses Edna Green, Marion Avery, Theresa McCullough, Amelia Brizzie, Lillian Spencer, Bertha Keller, Elsie Debele, Marguerite Barkalew, Madeline Blair, Jubilee Rowley, B. Ewart, Dorothy Martin, Murielle Dunham, Ann Hull, Edith Dalley, Gladys Sullivan, Dorothy Lee, Lucy Douglas, Margaret Ewart and Marjorie Burtis.

NO LIGHT ON TAXI.

Arthur Moore, of this city, was arrested in the borough last night for driving a taxicab without a light. Arraigned before Recorder Hand in the city court this morning he was given a suspended sentence with a reprimand.

ROUSING TRIBUTE TO PATRON SAINT

St. Patrick's Memory Honored by Big Gathering in Columbus Club.

RUNYON GETS OVATION

Festivities Suspended for Several Minutes to Welcome Assemblyman When He Enters Hall—Addresses Dealt with Life of Nobleman.

Hundreds of years ago Irish patriots revered the name of Saint Patrick. Their humble, yet sincere religious worship of Erin's patron saint has resulted in Ireland being a contributor to the world's history. Now, in an era so far remote from that time that even historians never venture to name the time of birth and place of death of Ireland's supposed benefactor, men gather to pay their respects to the memory of the world's first nobleman, Saint Patrick.

Such was the case in Plainfield last night. Two hundred representative men, prominent in local and State politics, leading business men of the community, gathered in the auditorium of Columbus Hall to assist the Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, in celebrating the day dear to the heart of every Irishman. Ireland, the Irish and the relics of Ireland, together with men of many other nationalities, attended the function.

There was a universal demonstration of respect to Saint Patrick. Each of the speakers lauded the achievements and characteristics of the Americanized Irishmen and referred to them as the leaven of American vigor.

CHAS. DODD'S FUNERAL LARGELY ATTENDED

Many County Officials Present at Obsequies Held in Elizabeth Today.

Attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, which included many officials from Union county and other parts of the State, the funeral of Charles W. Dodd, warden of the Union county jail at the time of his sudden death on a New Jersey Central train Monday, was held at his late home, 15 South Union street, Elizabeth, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The service was in charge of Rev. Eben B. Cobb, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth, of which Mr. Dodd was a member. Rev. William Force Whitaker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth, which the late warden frequently attended, assisted in the obsequies and conducted the commitment service in Hillside cemetery, this city. The service in itself was quite simple.

The casket was almost hidden from sight by a mass of floral tributes, many of them coming from distant points. There was a magnificent set piece from the Court House officials, the Sheriff's office and an immense floral key from the keepers in the Union county jail. Eight constables who do duty in the Union county courts carried the body from the house to the hearse and also from the hearse to the grave at Hillside. Mrs. Dodd was at the service but is in a severe nervous condition, owing to the shock brought on by the news of her husband's sudden death.

The honorary pall bearers were as follows: Sheriff George C. Otto, former Sheriff Robert J. Kirkland, of Elizabeth, former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, County Register Frank H. Smith, former Sheriff B. Frank Corlell, Freeholder J. Hervey Doane, of Plainfield; Freeholder Joseph Perry, of Westfield, and George C. Johnson, of Fanwood. The pall bearers all have been intimately associated with Mr. Dodd for long periods. Surrogate George T. Parrot, of Elizabeth, another personal friend of the late warden, was compelled reluctantly to decline to serve because he was unable to attend the service.

MISS OLIVER A LAWYER.

Miss Eleanor Oliver, of Newark, sister of Paul Q. Oliver, of Westfield, was admitted to the New Jersey bar yesterday as a practicing attorney. She is the third Union county woman to have the honor conferred upon her.

MUHLENBERG WANTS AN AUTO AMBULANCE

Appeal Made to Purchase An Apparatus to Be Kept at the Hospital.

Comment has been made in the newspapers of the desire on the part of the Common Council to do away with the horse-drawn patrol wagon, and in its place secure an automobile vehicle for police and possibly for hospital purposes.

There are reasons to favor the latter plan, from the economical side, but from the practical side it seems to many of the city hospital authorities, that an ambulance and patrol combination automobile would not be satisfactory.

The hospital governors feel that Muhlenberg should have an automobile ambulance with a modest and inexpensive garage on the hospital grounds with a chauffeur always on hand to respond to ambulance calls and when not employed on the ambulance, to do various work about the hospital. This would be an ideal solution of the problem, which has confronted not only the hospital, but the city as well for an up-to-date and adequate ambulance service.

Many doctors located outside of the city limits in communities adjacent to Plainfield are directing their patients to Muhlenberg, increasing the need for an automobile ambulance, but it also needs to obtain the funds to purchase such an ambulance. The governors are not reconciled to an immediate purchase of an ambulance unless the money is given for it.

A committee composed of J. M. Whiton, Herman Schwed and James W. DeGraff has the matter in charge. They are looking into the various types of automobile ambulances, and find that a vehicle such as is needed can be purchased for less than $2,000, and therefore figure that $2,500 would pay for the automobile and a garage on the hospital grounds. It would always be possible to have an interne accompany it.

It is hoped that one or more generous Plainfield citizens will subscribe the necessary money to enable the hospital to purchase an ambulance.

ANNUAL ELECTION OF COLLEGE CLUB

Selection of New Roster Followed Addresses on Equal Suffrage Topics.

During a meeting of the College Club at the home of Mrs. Frank D. Warren, in Hillside avenue, Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Albert B. Meredith was elected president for the ensuing year. The other officers chosen to serve with her included. Vice-president, Miss Helen Besler; recording secretary, Miss Helen Joy, corresponding secretary, Miss Rae Harris, and treasurer, Miss Elsie Suffern.

Preceding the election, Mrs. Edwin Frost, of Yonkers, and Mrs. Grace Duffield Goodwin, of Westfield, delivered addresses. The former spoke on the ideals which underlie the suffrage and anti-suffrage movements as they are explained by evolution. She said that each issue was one of different types of minds and to understand these types it is necessary to delve into history. The conditions prevalent in remote times were explained and contrasted with those of today.

Mrs. Goodwin, who is a well-known anti-suffrage worker, told of the reasons why it would not be expedient to give the vote to women.

FOUND PEARL IN OYSTER AT ST. PATRICK BANQUET

LINEN SHOWER IN HONOR OF MISS STELLA SWAIN

Mrs. Clifford D. Manning, of Myrtle avenue, gave a delightful linen shower at her home yesterday afternoon, in honor of Miss Stella Swain, of Craig place, whose marriage engagement was recently announced. Sixteen friends were in attendance, a number of whom were from out of town. The rooms of the home were prettily decorated in pink and green, the latter color being in observance of St. Patrick's Day.

After luncheon had been served, the guests assembled in the library where Miss Swain was made the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. They were brought to her in a very novel way. Little Miss Louise Manning, dressed in green and white, came into the room drawing an express wagon, decorated with green and white and Cupid's emblems to denote affairs of the heart. The vehicle was piled high with the presents which Mrs. Manning presented the bride-to-be. The novel presentation was received with great favor by recipient and guests alike.

Those in attendance from out of town were Mrs. J. A. Meers and Mrs. Campbell, of Brooklyn; Mrs. H. J. Johnson, of New York, and Mrs. E. S. F. Randolph, of Westfield.

DARKTOWN MINSTRELS WAS GREAT SUCCESS

Fine Performance Given in the Local Theatre Last Evening.

The Darktown College Minstrels given last evening in the Dunellen Theatre was one of the best amateur performances ever presented in the borough. The theatre was comfortably filled and the enthusiastic reception which greeted every number on the program testified to the hearty appreciation of the audience. The eccentricities of various local merchants, prominent citizens and youthful swain were bared to the world without mercy. Even C. T. Voorhees' well-known, but unreadable chirography not being spared.

The hit of the evening was made by Messrs. Brakley and Cole, who as "Century Poets," sang home-made rhymes with great effect. The entire cast did exceptionally well and they together with the coaches, Ford Eckerson and Prof. Charles Kregar, deserve credit for the results achieved. The wish was expressed on all sides that having finally given a real local talent minstrel show in the borough, the Dunellen Dramatic Club would arrange to make it an annual affair and there is no question that such a move would receive the hearty support of the borough ites.

Following the minstrels a dance was given in which both young and old took part.

The cast of the minstrels was: The world's funniest end men, Lew Dockstader Dodwell, Al. G. Fields Kelly, Honey Boy Evans Ryan and George Primrose Kregar; the Caruso's of Song Land, John McCormick Leland, Eugene Coles Wickham, Al Jolson Kookogey and Chauncey Olcott Giddes; the Twentieth Century Poets, Longfellow Brakley and Tennyson Cole; flute soloists direct from Sousa's Band, Prof. Salvador Dix and George Cohan Giddes, and the chorus of Royal Greeks direct from the winter garden (Lincoln), Mush Martin, Levgar J. Logan, Beans Frederick, Malvoichaches Dealaman, Yoltzel Logan and Shaving Soap Williams.

The program: Grand opening march, entire company; ballad, "Caroline," E. B. Leland; end song, "My Dinah," R. B. Ryan; eccentric dance, Messrs. Kregar and Dodwell, the boys with the comical legs; bass solo, H. A. Wickham; end song, "Make This World Seem Bright," Charles Kregar; flute solo, J. E. Dix; Irish ballad, W. W. Giddes; end song, "Constantly," J. Z. Kelly; snatches from the great authors, R. Longfellow Brakley and Benjamin Cole; ballad, "One Night in June," S. M. Kookogey; musical recitation, "P. T. Barnum," Harry Giddes; end song, "Mosquito Rag," Benjamin Dodwell, and grand closing chorus composed by Mayor Ernest B. Latham.

Ford Eckerson, one of the two who coached the affair and who in addition was to have acted as special accompanist, was called to Gloversville, N. Y., yesterday morning, by a telegram conveying the sad intelligence that his mother was at the point of death. Later in the day it was reported that his mother had died.

The forepart of the evening was spent in playing "500." At 10:30 o'clock a collation was served. Favors were hand painted cards covered with some article appropriate to each one's business and the ladies' place cards with something of which they were fond. The caterer was Dempsey, of Plainfield.

At the conclusion of the musicale, Rev. Walter Drum, S. J., of Woodstock, Maryland, gave a highly interesting talk on "Our Saint and His Children." Father Drum is an orator of unusual charm and distinctiveness and his coming here was a rare treat for those who took the opportunity of hearing him. Father Drum is of Irish blood and was born in the army. His father was a commissioned officer for many years and was killed in the Spanish-American war while at Santiago, Cuba. His brother is also an army officer and is at present stationed along the Mexican border. Father Drum spoke in glowing terms of the glory of tenderness and loyalty in the Irishman. Tenderness had always appealed to him since his earliest boyhood days, and the fine trait was expressed in many stories of the Irishmen in the army, and his experiences with different men. The loyal bravery of the Sons of Erin, their attitude to England and the United States were all brought out in splendid manner. During the Civil War the undaunted loyalty of the Irishman for the land of his adoption will stand out as an everlasting tribute to him, he said. The speaker had two uncles in the war, one in the Irish Brigade at Fredericksburg fighting with the Union side and one on the Southern side, and brother shot brother and Irishman shot Irishman irrespective of their affiliations in the old country. The unswerving universal faith of the Irish was dwelt upon and Father Druum paid a beautiful tribute to his mother. In connection with his talk, Father Drum read two poems, "St. Patricks Day Morning" and "Machree."

At the conclusion of the address the audience sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

Last night's affair proved to be such a success from every point of view that similar events will take place from time to time.

CANDIDATES NOW HUSTLE TO WIN SPECIAL AWARDS

Offer of $175 in Extra Prizes Greates Enthusiasm Among Workers for Free Trips to Panama Fair Which Are Offered to Young Women of Plainfield and Vicinity.

The vote standing of candidates is revised again today. The vote as it stands today will have no bearing on the special prizes, as the votes included in today's count were issued prior to the start of this special contest.

The Special Prizes.

First Prize—$100 Solitaire Diamond Ring.

Second Prize—Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15 in gold.

Third Prize—$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

The diamond ring was purchased from and is on display at the jewelry store of Charles E. Vail, 236 Park avenue, and the wrist watch from The Reliable Jewelry Shop, 245 West Front street.

Mr. Vail is willing to repurchase the diamond ring offered as first prize from the winner any time within one year for $90 cash.

The announcement in Wednesday's Press that it would give away a $100 diamond ring, a $35 wrist watch, merchandise certificate and $15 in gold as extra prizes to the best workers during the next sixteen days, was received with expression of enthusiasm by contestants, their friends and several who were contemplating joining the contest, but had been hesitating on account of the apparent lead those already in the contest had.

Prizes Are Valuable.

The prizes offered are the best value for the purchase price, and those who are the fortunate winners are to be congratulated for coming into possession of such beautiful and valuable gifts. Every contestant has an equal chance now to win any of these extra prizes. Those who have become discouraged because some other candidates in their district were far ahead of them can now enter the race, knowing that they have an even start for winning one of these extra prizes, and have an equal chance to win. The rules have been made very clear regarding these extra prizes. The vote standing of each candidate as it appears today will not be considered in the winning of these special prizes, nor will the votes issued on subscriptions that have already been turned in and not voted. All ballots voted for these extra prizes must bear the date from Thursday, March 18. The special period will come to a close at 10 p. m. April 3. Remember that in addition to the diamond ring you have two other prizes offered, which make your chances just that many more to win one of the extra prizes.

All Have Equal Chance.

Even if the candidates are sure that others in their districts are too far ahead of them and that they cannot win a distinct trip, they should not despair. The time and effort which they have already put into the contest need not be lost. Bear in mind that winning one of the special prizes will mean a splendid award for your efforts and give you the honor of being one of the winners in the contest. You all start even on this, remember! and the votes that you get to count for extra prizes will not be affected in any way in counting for the trip prizes, but will count for them just the same as usual.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

One of the most notable picture offerings in this city in a long time will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow afternoon and night and Saturday afternoon only when the management will present B. A. Rolfe's production of "Rip Van Winkle." The screen version has been made from the immortal Joseph Jefferson's working script and the role made famous by the great actor is taken by his son, Thomas Jefferson. An original is used, wherein Mr. Jefferson is seen sitting in his library and idly picks up a copy of Irving's book, telling of "Rip Van Winkle" and the return after his long sleep. "Rip" appears to him as in a reverie and from this beginning the wonderful story is unraveled. A verbal description can in no wise do justice to the production and it is only necessary to say to moving picture devotees that to see it is to appreciate it. Although Messrs. Counihan and Shannon have entailed great expense in securing this "Rip Van Winkle" conception, popular prices will prevail at all the performances. Children attending the Saturday matinee and accompanied by parent or guardian will be admitted for a special price of five cents. The attraction at the theatre this afternoon and tonight is "Mrs. Black is Back," with May Irwin, America's foremost comedienne.

Fiske O'Hara is said to be at his best in his new romantic comedy, "Jack's Romance," which he will present at The Plainfield Theatre, Saturday night, March 20. The play furnishes him many excellent opportunities for the display of his versatile talents and he was never more happily placed than in the role of the rollicking Jack Connolly, who comes back from Canada to meet his heart's mate at last in his native place. His portrayal of the dashing young Irish gentleman is conceded by all who have seen it to be a delightful bit of dramatic artistry and it at once lifts him into the front rank of our young romantic actors. The play, itself, is a pretty love story of the middle of the eighteenth century, in which intrigue and hate play a prominent part. All the romantic atmosphere of the period, the native wit of the people, the quaint country characters and the life of the aristocracy are presented to the audience in the most attractive manner. The songs of Mr. O'Hara are said to be among the best he has yet had, and are sung as only he can sing them. Manager Pitou has organized a splendid supporting company and has equipped "Jack's Romance" with a lavish adornment in the way of scenery and costumes.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

In addition to an entire change of high class vaudeville, Proctor's Theatre today will offer the thrilling story of Jack London, "The Odyssey of the North," arranged for the screen by the World Corporation Film Company. It is easily worth the price of admission alone but is only one of the many features which makes the admission to the Front street playhouse the biggest bargain for the money the city has to offer. "The Exploits of Elaine" will be shown at the theatre tomorrow, and beginning with Saturday, the first of a series of absolutely new and original one-reel comedy pictures will be the picture feature. These have also been prepared by the World Film Corporation and will introduce the highest-priced comedy stars of the day. The initial production will be Richard Carl, well-known to Plainfield audiences, in the screaming production, "The Dancing Beetle." Those who have seen Mr. Carl in "The Tenderfoot," "The Mayor of Tokio," "Mary's Lamb" and his more recent successes know what to expect. On succeeding Saturdays without ommission there will be seen Lew Fields, Jefferson DeAngelus, Lulu Glazer, Thomas A. Wise and many other favorites.

FORMER LOCAL REPORTER GOES TO THE WAR ZONE

John Lloyd Balderston, formerly a local newspaper reporter, will leave for the war zone next month, where he will represent several American newspapers. Mr. Balderston claims there are too many journalists in the war zone at the present time and not enough reporters to get news that will interest American readers. He says he will not wear a wrist watch, cable descriptions of what he ate for breakfast, patronize the generals or try to run the war.

He says one of his pet schemes will be to land local stories for the various papers he is to represent. In his opinion there isn't a city of any size in America that hasn't sent nurses, doctors or soldiers to the war and he thinks he can gather a wealth of local material.

Mr. Balderston comes from an old Philadelphia Quaker family, has put in nine of his twenty-six years at newspaper work of all sorts, and found time to go through college out of office hours. A number of leading newspapers have agreed to run his stuff, and he is going over armed with a grip full of letters from persons in high station which are likely to help him in his announced determination to dig up interviews and special stories "that will keep warm while coming across in the mails, like a thermos bottle, you know."

For the past four years Mr. Balderston has been New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Record, with headquarters in the Pulitzer building. The Record has granted him an extensive leave of absence. His New York friends will not be surprised at his announced departure, for ever since the present unpleasantness started he has kept that part of his office not absolutely required for other work chuck full of maps, running around over half a dozen tables and likewise full of little pins. Visitors to Mr. Balderston's office around the dead line report that more than one war expert on Park Row, stuck with a fresh war bulletin, has surreptitiously called him up to find out what it really signified.

THE RIGHT WAY.

The first few months of Leighton Calkins' term as Mayor of Plainfield have been made conspicuous by the close relationship he has maintained with the numerous civic bodies in this city. In recent years attempts on the part of leaders of various organizations, formed for the primary purpose of promoting civic welfare, to interest the city executives in their work have not proven altogether satisfactory. Not so in the case of the present incumbent, however. He has already given up many evenings to attend sessions of different bodies and to those which he has been unable to attend in person he has sent communications which have played an important part in the routine of work at the gatherings.

An intimate knowledge of the activities of each association is his aim and by keeping in touch with various persons he expects to glean valuable pointers to assist him in his work as well as to inject new features into civic matters. Several of the city's organizations have already acted on suggestions made by him and have accepted his co-operation in a way that points only to a successful administration.

SUNDAY'S GOLDEN SHOWER.

As week after week has passed, with the announcements of the disposition of church and charity of the collections at the Billy Sunday revivals in Philadelphia, observers have wondered how the celebrated evangelist was paid. That he was paid and paid well nobody doubted. It was simply inconceivable that no "thought for the morrow" whatever would be taken by a man so famous, a man who worked so hard and displayed so much energy and intelligence in conducting his revivals. The accumulation of at least a small fortune was inevitable—but how?

The mystery was solved by the accounts in the Philadelphia papers of the golden shower that descended upon "Billy" last Sunday. The "last day offering" proved to be a gift to the revivalist in person, a reward for his ten weeks of labor, and a very generous one it was. We read of "tin pans heaped with envelopes containing money and loose notes, a big bucket loaded with cash, a purse filled with gold, and letters inclosing greenbacks and checks." To these gleanings at the three meetings on the last day were added the collections at the tabernacle during the whole final week as well as all the receipts from other sources and through the mails during the same time. The total week's offering was estimated at $100,000. With such returns possible for ten weeks, bookings in the different cities of the country for the entire year ought to secure something like half a million dollars annually. The times may be hard, but Billy Sunday will not starve.

The superficial and disparaging observer who imagines that the celebrated revivalist merely gets up to rant and repeat himself is vastly mistaken. Aside from the question of his earnest conviction, sense of duty, and desire to benefit his fellow man, it must be admitted that few men work harder than "Billy" Sunday. The daily record of his utterances has shown that he is a wide reader and untiring student. He takes the best thoughts wherever he can find them, translates them into the language of the diamond and the jargon of the street, clothes them in metaphor based on the latest modern inventions, and fires them at his hearers with all the force belonging to his own personality. Conservative people who are repelled by Sunday's shocking paraphrases of the Biblical stories told in the latest slang, who are disgusted by his methods of the vaudeville comedian and his antics of the circus clown, are nevertheless interested and pleased to hear him make such statements as that man lives in two worlds at the same time—the body realm and the soul realm—and that it is as needful to have a clean record in the second as in the first, or to see him point an accusing finger at his audience and shout: "The trouble with you people is that by your way of life you cut the wires between you and the power house.'

It has long been recognized that great good is accomplished through the tambourine and drum methods of the Salvation Army, and no doubt similar results may be achieved by Billy Sunday developments of the same idea. Whether this be admitted or not, it will be conceded that the laborer is worthy of his hire, and even the unsympathetic observer is perhaps inclined to think that the talented and hard-working Mr. Sunday is not undeserving of his great reward.

Explanation of the delay on the part of the local authorities in procuring a combination automobile police patrol and ambulance is made today in a statement issued by the governors of the hospital. They have decided that it would not be best to have such a combination apparatus, and are appealing for funds to buy an auto ambulance and put up a garage to house it. If such action is taken, it is a question whether there is any necessity for the city to buy an auto police patrol to do the small amount of work required of such a vehicle in Plainfield. The combination apparatus installed at police headquarters would be a fine thing, but an auto patrol to bring in drunks and for similar occasional uses would be a foolish extravagance. It would be much better to spend less money and buy an ordinary touring car for the uses of the department.

The Knights of Columbus are certainly to be congratiated upon the success of the St. Patrick's Day dinner which was held under their auspices last night. All arrangements were carefully completed and carried out without a hitch. The gathering was one of the most representative that the city has ever seen, and the speeches delighted everyone.

EDUCATION WORK ON A HIGH PLANE

Superintendent of Schools Issues Annual Report With Recommendations.

MANY NEW FEATURES

Accomplishments of Evening and Day Schools and Benefits Derived From Summer Courses—Increase in Attendance Figures.

Annual statistics compiled by the Plainfield Board of Education in pamphlet form made their appearance today, the year's survey being one of the most complete ever arranged. Included in the resume is the report of Superintendent of Schools Henry M. Maxson.

According to a statement made by Dr. Maxson the school enrollment is increasing faster than the population although the enrollment in the first grade today is smaller than it was twenty years ago. In 1893 it numbered 593 while last year it numbered 507; but the eighth grade, which numbered only 80 in 1893, numbered 279 last year.

In 1893, the class of beginners, which numbered 593, had in the next year, when this class became grade 2, dropped considerably, and so from year to year as the class advanced in grade, it decreased in number, until when it became grade 9, which was then the highest grammar grade, it numbered only 40. Ten years later, the class of beginners that entered the grade 1 in 1903, with 40 pupils less than the class of 1893, had 181 when it entered the grade below the High School, or 4½ times as many as the class that started ten years before.

Ten years ago, the High School constituted 9% of the total enrollment of the city; in 1915 it was 15%, an increase of nearly 80% in relative growth during the ten years.

In 1903, enrollment in the eighth grade (the highest grammar) was 20% of the size of the first grade (the lowest primary). In 1913, the eighth grade was 40% of the first grade, an increase in relative growth of 100% for the high grammar grade.

In ten years, the enrollment in the High School has increased 141% and the enrollment of the highest grammar grade has increased 70%, while the enrollment of the rest of the school system has increased but 32%.

These figures show that the attendance in the higher grades and in the High School increased out of all proportion to the lower grades in the last ten years. School work has been made so attractive, and the teachers have gotten hold of the pupils so effectively that very many are now staying to graduate from the grammar school and going on through the High School who formerly dropped out and went to work or did nothing. More pupils mean more teachers to teach them and more school rooms to house them.

The graded schools have had Manual Training added. The one course in the High School has been extended to six. Up to this time there has not been much to appeal to the boy who thinks with his hands. The completion of this building with its modern equipment makes it possible to meet the needs of the class children, and the Board has laid out a four years' course in which much of the work is of an industrial or technical nature, bench work, lathe work, metal work, machine work, mechanical drawing and other things appealing to the motor minded child.

For the girl, a four years' course with a very large measure of work appealing to the industrial side of her nature in connection with household arts, dressmaking, millinery, cooking, household mathematics, home management and the like has been planned.

The building as it now stands contains 25 class rooms with seats for 1,100 pupils; 7 recitation and lecture rooms; a commercial department of 5 rooms; a domestic arts department (sewing, cooking, etc.) with 4 rooms and a detached house on the rear of the lot; a manual training department of seven rooms for mechanical drawing, bench work, lathe work, machine work, metal work, etc.; and a science department, with 4 class rooms and lecture rooms for chemistry, physics, biology, and applied science; a physical training department with gymnasium, swimming pool, and other rooms necessary for this important work, and an auditorium seating 1,200 people. The stage of the auditorium is of such size as to make it suitable not only for the regular use of the school with its full quota of pupils, but also for the graduation exercises of the High School and of the Grammar School, and for the general civic uses of the city.

The evening classes that have been opened thus far have had the special aim of Americanizing those who come from foreign shores. They were started in the first instance several years ago to meet a special need, but the work has grown each year since until this year there were enrolled 345 pupils of 20 different nationalities.

The aim of these classes is to teach ability to read and write the English language and to give the rudiments of the three R's to those who have had no educational opportunities, also to train them in right ideas of citizenship. Beside the value which these classes give the pupils, public economy demands their continuance for the benefit they give indirectly to all classes of citizens.

The summer classes ran as usual with an enrollment of about 300. These classes are open six weeks for a four-hour session from eight to twelve. They are mainly for the purpose of helping children who have missed promotion in the regular classes, and to enable them to review their work so that they can pass on with their class in the fall, instead of being held back another year to do the work over again. They also take in children that have recently moved into the city and thus enable them to find their place better when the schools open in the fall. Some children take advantage of them to gain extra promotion, thus finishing their school course in a shorter time. Fifty or more children, each year, by means of these classes, are saved from losing a year by non-promotion.

Mr. Maxson says:

"Plainfield is very modest in the work it offers in this line. In fact, it is really behind the times in this matter. Other cities offer more than we do, such as manual training and bench work for the boys, cooking, sewing and other domestic arts for the girls, and in some places regular class work is offered in all grades, the same as in the ordinary classes during the school year. This is all very valuable in giving the children that have to remain in the city during the summer months, something profitable and worth while to occupy their time, instead of permitting them to run wild on the streets. The City Council has wisely followed the example of what is now the established custom in practically all progressive cities, and has appropriated money to open playgrounds and pay teachers to help children play during the summer months. The natural corrollary of this is for the Board of Education to open the school buildings and furnish teachers for those who wish to use a part of their time, during the summer months, for study or developing work."

Total payments to policyholders were $39,273,810.05, divided as follows: Death claims, $22,935,699.78; to living policyholders, $16,338,110.27.

The assets of the company on January 1 were $361,459,866.05, and the liabilities $324,978,566.51; the capital and surplus at that time being $36,481,299.54.

CARVED A LIVING FISH.

Part Was Cooked and the Other Part Swam Around Till Needed.

Not many years ago, being one of the few foreigners permitted to reside in the interior of Japan, I was favored with this interesting experience:

Living near a small fishing village and out of convenient reach of the treaty ports, I found it necessary to content myself to a great extent with native subsistence. However, a daily supply of delicious living fish went far to compensate for the absence of beefsteak and bread and butter.

The peddlers of fish carry their finny merchandise in shallow tubs filled with water, suspended from the ends of a yoke across the shoulders. In this fashion they trot along for miles on their rounds.

Having the advantage of first choice, I could usually select one of a size suitable for the day's needs, but one morning they were all entirely too large, and when it was pointed out that the smallest was double the size wanted he replied:

"Oh, but you can cut it in two; use half today, the other half tomorrow."

This suggestion would seem simple enough in American markets, but when he was told that stale fish was undesirable he explained that the remaining half would be as lively tomorrow or any day thereafter until used; that the operation would not hurt the fish in the slightest respect. At this point curiosity prompted me to direct the flip vivisectionist to proceed with his barbarous act.

He immediately laid one of the fish on a board and placed his long, keen edged knife just back of the gills and quickly sliced off all of one side down to the tail and so close to the ribs that you could almost see them. The part containing the vital organs was returned to the water, where, of course, owing to loss of equilibrium, it turned on its side. But to my astonishment it swam round lively as ever, seemingly undisturbed by the loss of so much flesh, and remained so until the next day when I was ready to cook it.

My native friends smiled at the suggestion of cruelty and related the story of a distinguished daimio who caught a fish sliced in this manner that had been placed in the river years before and lived this long time happy and lively as other fish. But the idea of carving a living fish made me shudder, and I never tried it again.—C. D. Weldon, in New York Tribune.

SYMBOLS AS SHOP SIGNS.

A Legacy From the Old Days When but Few Persons Could Read.

The man on the street, and especially the man on the street in Manhattan, does not realize that he is every day perpetuating in the signs that he uses the customs of a people who could not read. In the old days it was useless to put up the sign "apothecary," because few could read it. So the apothecary decorated his shop front with a mortar and pestle as a sign of his trade.

We can read now, most of us, but we cling to signs of this sort still. The symbol lingers.

Here and there a barber tries to throw off its yoke by painting a sign that reads "tonsorial parlor," but the normal barber shop proudly sets up its totem pole, which retains as a tradition the silent but eloquent testimony of the former practice on the part of the barber of blood letting.

Similarly the pawnbroker hangs up his trinity of golden balls because the original pawnbroking business was started by a Medici, whose coat of arms was charged with three golden balls on a field of silver.

The wooden Indian signifies a tobacco store because it was from the Indians that the idea of smoking originally came. The noble red man has thus been debased and doomed to hold forth in effigy a bunch of cigars to both the willing and the unwilling.

A boot that swings as a sign says plainly to every man, "This is a shoe shop." The shoes within will wear themselves out in the service of those who buy them. A large wooden watch can mean only one thing, and that is that the sign owner is a horologist.—New York Mail.

BISHOP BREWER TO PREACH.

Rt. Rev. Leigh Richmond Brewer, Bishop of Montana, will be the Lenten preacher at Holy Cross church tonight. The clergy from Grace and Heavenly Rest churches will take part in the service and it is expected that the well-known Bishop will be greeted by a large congregation. YOUNG PEOPLE TO ORGANIZE.

A meeting will be held in the basement of the German Reformed church, Craig place and Duer street, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. It is proposed to organize a Young People's Society, called the "Jugenbund," along social and educational lines. TRIBUTE TO PATRON SAINT time trod on Irish soil or whose antecedants once graced the Emerald Isle. On each side of the Americanized Irishman were men of every creed, nationality and standing in life. The City Council, past and present city executives, leaders in home trade, city boosters, State political factors and men who have gained great prominence, were conspicuous by their presence.

While the after-dinner speakers, all of whom are personally known to Plainfield citizens, took advantage of the opportunity to speak in a humorous vein, they also dealt with the Irish race, classing it as an important link in America's prominence. Treating with Irish wit and dwelling on historic facts the speakers proved themselves thoroughly qualified to keep an audience of this calibre interested and despite the fact that the festivities lasted until midnight rolled around keen attention featured each address.

George J. Tobin, chairman of the committee in charge of the arrangements, acted as toastmaster and in a short address of welcome he delivered a historic account of the Irish race, the policy it stood for and the position Saint Patrick occupies in the gallery of world's noblemen.

For only a few minutes during the entire evening was the name of Saint Patrick a secondary factor in the celebration. This was when Assemblyman William N. Runyon wended his way through the tables to the speakers' circle. Every individual in the hall added his might to swell the thunderous applause that was accorded the popular Plainfield legislator and the din lasted for over a minute. A second demonstration was occorded the Assemblyman when he was introduced by Toastmaster Tobin as the chief speaker of the evening.

In an eloquently impressive address on the subject of "American Patriotism" the speaker held his listeners spell-bound from start to finish and when the climax of his talk was reached he was accorded a third ovation. He said in part:

"America is the home for the oppressed of all nations. It is not only a refuge for the Irish, but persons from all quarters of the earth flock to its shores in the time of stress. Men, irrespective of antecedants, have been combined into one great race. It has weathered class distinction and in a large measure the true Irish spirit has been responsible. The Irishman has helped to make America what it is today and the presence of Irishmen here has meant the development of higher ideals and standards.

"The Irish have fallen in the wars that America might be better, and this is the greatest test of loyalty to a nation. Despite the trials and tribulations attending the many generations the old fighting Irish spirit has not been diluted. America, our country, should be glorified on this day and the part that Irishmen have played in its development should be emphasized. During the time that other nations are in a state of turmoil America stands forth resplendent and the attitude of our President and legislators will go a long way toward restoring peace. It shall remain for America to bring order out of chaos."

Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart gave a historic account of Ireland and her notables, dispersing much information which he has personally gathered during trips to England and the Emerald Isle.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, said in part:

"St. Patrick got 12,000 Irishmen to agree in harmony on one subject, but he never drove all the snakes from Ireland for I have been there twice and I almost thought I saw some, in fact had I remained another month in Dublin I surely would have seen them. In accepting the statement that St. Patrick drove the snakes out of Ireland we must either believe in an imaginary St. Patrick or in imaginary snakes.

"Of one thing we may be sure, and that is, that somewhere, at some time, some one now called St. Patrick, a man of piety and virtue, was sent from God to do good in Ireland and that he did it well, so well in fact that after one and a half thousand years the whole Christian world rises up and calls him blessed."

Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, said:

"Saint Patrick was one of those who labored in season and out of season for the Master. He was untiring in his zeal and devotion to his Master. History tells us that he founded 360 churches and baptised more than 12,000 converts."

Former State Senator John D. Prince, of Passaic, and Judge William H. Speer, of Jersey City, were unable to be present at the banquet owing to illness.

A most pleasing and enjoyable St. Patrick's Day dance was held under the auspices of Plainfield Lodge, No. 310, L. O. O. M., at its rooms in the Abram building, West Front street, last evening. Hydrant streams were laid in, but it was found that the chemical engines were sufficient to put out the blaze. There was practically no damage.

The department was called on a still alarm at 3:45 yesterday afternoon for a grass fire at Park avenue and Randolph road. In this instance also there was no especial damage.

BRUNSWICK HIGH BOYS DIED HARD

Local School Five Hung up Creditable Score on Rivals' Court.

The boys' basketball team of the Plainfield High School added one more victory to its string, yesterday afternoon, by defeating the team of New Brunswick High School. The final score was 28 to 20. It was played in the old New Brunswick Armory on a dance floor, which was so slippery that it made fast play impossible. Both teams passed well and shot well. The guarding for the most part was close. Throughout the first half the score see-sawed back and forth between the two teams until the whistle blew, with Plainfield leading by 11 to 10.

In the second half both teams played equally as well as in the first half but the Plainfield boys had become accustomed to the slippery floor, and this improved their team work, giving them more chances to shoot. New Brunswick got a slight jump on the Plainfield team at the beginning of the second half, and against a three-point lead Plainfield's team work soon began to show itself and they overcame the lead of their opponents. A goal by Rosenson put the Plainfield aggregation in the lead and a couple of foul goals by Peacock increased the lead. In the latter part of the second half the local boys gradually drew away from New Brunswick. They were increasing the score and gradually creeping away from their opponents when the whistle blew ending the game.

Another five-point dog show is the Charity Show at New York, on Friday and Saturday.

The fate of the Tri-State League will be settled Friday in Philadelphia. The outlook is gloomy, only four teams being prepared to enter.

Toledo is the latest to build a speedway for motor races. Inside the 2¼ mile auto course the promotors plan a track for horse racing.

Philadelphia's indoor horse show, which will be staged in April, has some classy judges. Reginald Vanderbilt, Joseph Widener and Langhorne Anderson will act.

Coast to coast on his bicycle, with his wrists chained to his wheel, our latest enthusiast is ploughing up the desert on his way to the Fair.

Pal Brown and Joe Mandot have been signed up for a bout at Superior, Wis. The badger fans are anxious to see the New Orleans baker boy again at work.

The Central League is in line for a good year, with Terre Haute retaining its charter. Season will open on April 21, with a schedule of 140 games.

The hockey clubs along the Great Lakes are arranging with the Canadian clubs to form an International Hockey League, which looks like a boom to this sport.

Some of the best athletic talent in the United States is expected to compete in the track and field events at the Frisco Fair this summer. The East will send its best performers.

A "coast to coast" bowling tournament will be staged April 24 for a trophy. Teams will bowl simultaneously in a chain of cities and telegraph the results to New York.

Fully 2,000 motorboats will gather on the Mississippi River at Hannibal, Mo., next July for the annual Mississippi Valley regatta. The races vary in length from 5 to 25 miles.

HIGH HONORS BESTOWED ON FORMER LOCAL ATHLETE

Russell Beatty, formerly of Plainfield, and the intercollegiate record holder for the shot-put, has just been awarded the highest honor in scholarship that any student can receive at Columbia.

He has been elected a member of the Sigma Xi Society. This is an honorary scientific society and is not secret. The performances of creditable scientific research in natural and applied sciences, together with a high standard of scholarship, constitutes the basis of membership. Women are elected as well as men. Madam Curie, of France, is a member, as well as noted people of the world known for scientific discoveries.

"Rus," as he is known to everyone, graduated from Leal School and won the Yale Cup for scholarship and athletics. He will graduate from the Columbia College of Mines in June.

FEMININE SPORT TIPS BY A FEMININE CRITIC

Considerable interest is being manifested in the outcome of the rubber match which will be played on the Y. M. C. A. court, Monday afternoon, between the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School feminine ball tossers. Odds are even on the contest as the city girls gave a good account of themselves in the second game with the boroughites last week, although the North Plainfield lassies have put up a far better article of the indoor sport this season than the Ninth street representatives.

Fortune favors the brave. How many of you remember the game last year? We recall certain borough players who went into the game last year fully confident of winning the contest while the city girls went into the fray with never a word, but with full determination to do their best. Deeds are fruits, words are but leaves. The city girls came home with the championship.

If you want to see some real feminine basketball go to the Columbus Club Saturday night. The Plainfield Y. W. C. A. girls will lineup against their annual court rivals, the Trenton representatives of the Y. W. C. A. A preliminary game with two local quintets has been arranged.

The battle between "Dot" Hayes and Clara Smith will well be worth seeing. The former is the versatile forward on the visiting team while the latter is classed among the best guards in the State.

If you think "Dot" is any better than "Helen" come and see which cages the most baskets. Each one of these star forwards will use all her ingenuity in the coming contest and many clever passes will undoubtedly figure in the contest.

To get them in good humor for the event, the local girls are preparing a tempting luncheon for the visitors and incidentally will give them a real good time while they are in Plainfield. Even though they did not receive such hospitable treatment while in Trenton, the Plainfielders will show there is no malice felt and good fellowship will reign during the presence of the Trentonians here.

In the art of tossing fouls, Helen Hummel stands in a place all by herself and many of the points will undoubtedly be made in that fashion.

Is there interest in the basketball games in Plainfield? Well, if enthusiasm counts for anything we would say yes.

Tonight is the night. Eight-fifteen is the time. Columbus Club is the place. Plainfield Five vs. Y. W. H. A., is the feature.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

ELEVENTH EPISODE.

In the Clutch of the River Thieves.

CHAPTER I.

THERE was a wild clanging of bells on the yacht Hilarity as the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of dawn. At the foot of the landing stairs beautiful June Warner, her big, lustrous eyes widened in terror, had cast off the swift little motor tender, and the dark, handsome face of the black Vandyked man, peering over the deck rail, was distorted with rage. He shouted again his impatient commands to the officer on the quarterdeck.

Sleepy sailors were on deck now fumbling with the davits on each side. From one swung a little covered cutter and from the other a long, narrow racer. Blythe sprang to assist the sailors lowering the racer.

On the dock as the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of the dawn stood the well known and justly famous private detective Bill Wolf, his short, thick body stiff with the chill of the long night, and by him stood an overcoat and cap. Bill Wolf's round face and the visor of the cap were turned toward the river, where in midstream streaked the speedy little motorboat Flash, which had been stolen from that dock while the overcoat and cap peacefully slumbered. In the boat at the wheel sat a natty little figure with a chauffeur's cap and a tiny mustache. Upon his face was a beatific smile, and his eyes sparkled and snapped with the exhilaration of this divine moment. Behind him sat, stiff as a ramrod, a woman with high cheek bones and an expression of grimly patient determination on her lips.

"Voila, Mlle. Marie!" cried the little chauffeur as he cut a long, graceful curve between two slow moving barges. "Did I not say we would swish?"

Marie's stiff lips worked for a moment, so that she could enunciate,

"Voila!" she hoarsely uttered. "Voila, Henri!"

For only a moment the well known and justly famous private detective Bill Wolf looked after the swiftly swishing Henri; then he turned and pounded up the dock, racing for the nearest telephone. First of all he called the Eagle Eye Detective agency and secured a report from its wireless department; then he roused out of slumber a sharp faced, long nosed woman with high arched brows, who caught up her bedside telephone with instant alertness in her beady eyes.

"Well, I got him!" came the hoarse voice of Bill Wolf. "He's on board the yacht Hilarity, and, say, with the girl!"

Immediately Honoria moved very swiftly.

The sleepy eyed steward stepped out upon the deck of the Hilarity with his uniformed jacket buttoned askew.

"Beg your pardon, sir," he said. "Don't lower the boats for a moment."

"What!" shouted Gilbert Blye.

"The gasoline sir. It did not arrive until an hour ago."

"And there's no gasoline in these tanks?" roared big T. P. Edwards, pushing forward.

"No, sir."

"You infernal idiot!" yelled Orin Cunningham.

"Lower those boats!" shouted Gilbert Blye. "Wilkins, get downstairs. You can fill those boats in the water." And he looked out across the waves. The escaping beauty was rounding the point.

In the pretty apartments which Ned and June Warner had fitted up to be their nest Ned rose from the couch where he had fallen asleep with the miniature of June in his hand and recognized the rasping voice of Honoria.

"Well, we've located your darling!" And there was a shrill cackle. "She's on board the Hilarity with my husband. And the yacht is anchored outside the bay. Good morning."

Ned wasted no time. Bobbie Blethering had a stanch little boat, and Bobbie was routed out of bed immediately, yawning and wondering why the world could never be at peace. But he was ready, though it took his agitated wife, Iris, seven minutes to make him comprehend that the Hilarity was a boat. She had to suppress all her ebullient emotions to do it, but she relieved herself somewhat by telephoning June's mother and father at their beautiful home in Brynport.

As the sun pushed its scarlet rim up into the edge of the dawn and stared in pleased surprise at the beautiful girl who was speeding toward the marshy shore a low, gray skiff with a portable motor attached to its stern skipped in and out of the dimness among the black hulls of the river's edge. In the skiff were three rough looking men and a roughly dressed woman, who sat huddled in the bow. All four were silent, but their furtive eyes roved constantly over every vessel around which they crept. In the bottom of the boat were a huge bundle of celery and a loosely piled tarpaulin.

Suddenly the woman leaned forward and touched the nearest man on the knee. He was a big, rawboned man with a bronzed face and a deep scar on his chin. The woman pointed, and the man turned his evil eyes in that direction. Surrounded by black coal barges was a shining houseboat with brass rails, mahogany cabin and all the fittings and appointments which extravagance could devise.

The man at the stern, a lean, wiry fellow with a hooked nose and a lean jaw which ended in a big knob on each cheek, slowed down the engine until it was noiseless. They completely circled the two adjoining docks before they came back to the slip where coal barges lay; then the skiff glided in beneath the overhang of the barges, and the big man with the scar on his chin knocked on the hull. No noise from within. The man picked up a club and pounded. No stirring.

There was not a living creature in sight except these four early morning birds of prey.

"All right, Babe," growled the man with the scar on his chin.

The woman looked up at the houseboat as if she were estimating for herself its plan, arrangement and all the mysteries which it might contain. She slowly rose and cast aside her shawl. She had been beautiful once. She still bore traces of it, would have shown more traces had she not been unkempt and in frowsy clothing.

"It's a wonder Jake wouldn't take a chance on the break-in once in awhile," she complained. "He's as light on his feet as I am."

"But I ain't so quick in the head," hastily complimented Jake.

"That'll do!" growled the leader of the party. "Up with you, Babe."

The woman shrugged her shoulders and put her roughly shod foot into the big man's outstretched palm. He raised slowly and lifted the woman straight up so that she could draw herself on board.

She disappeared. The three men sat silent.

"All right, Ben." The woman's face peered over the rail. "Say, it's a nesselrode!"

The lean Jake stepped forward promptly and climbed up over the big man's back, perfectly contented now that he knew the silken hung houseboat to be empty. The third man with little patches of half formed beard on his face took the rudder; then the huge Ben jumped up, caught the deck rail and drew himself upward.

For the hundredth time Ned put his head out of the window. At last they were coming! He seized his coat and hat, hurried down to the street and jumped into the mechanic's seat of Bobbie Blethering's roadster before it had come to a full stop; then they turned and whirled away toward the docks. Honoria Blye in her electric coupe was headed for that destination, too, and on the yacht Gilbert Blye was superintending with impatient energy the loading of the gasoline tanks in the two small boats.

The thoughts of all these people were bent upon the poor little runaway bride, who was at that moment skirting the marshy shore and hunting a place, no matter how desolate, in which to hide.

There was an inlet among the marshes. She ventured into it a short distance, but it led to nowhere, and she hurried out again to the open water. A small boat rounded the point, and for a moment June's eyes dilated. Involuntarily she crouched.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"I do wish Dick would come. The lunch is spoiling and the whistle blew a long time ago," worried Nell, going from one window to another to see if there was any sign of him.

"There he comes with that Miss Rudolph; I suppose she boards at Mrs. Brown's, down the street. Perhaps she went there purposely to have an excuse to walk back and forth with Dick." Nell's lips were pressed into a straight line. "I wonder if he waited for her and that made him late. It will make a nice subject for gossip if they keep that up every day."

Dick stood a moment or two at the gate before tipping his hat, and was laughing gaily as he turned away from her. Nell had said that the girl's face was expressionless, but it was full of happy life as she smiled back at him. Nell ran to the kitchen, hoping to have time to get the hateful look off her face before Dick saw it.

Should she say anything? Certainly not, her better judgment told her. Neither could she say anything on any subject, she found.

"What's the matter, Nell? Don't you feel well?" asked her husband as they ate their soup in silence.

"Oh, I'm all right," she replied with laborious calm. "How is work going? Do you find things any easier with Miss Rudolph there?"

"Oh, she hasn't done much for me as yet. Parsons has kept her busy a good deal of the time. She boards right down below us. I walked up with her. I find she has a cousin who is real intimate with Olive Drew."

Nell tried to show proper surprise and pleasure, but her voice was so colorless that Dick instinctively dropped the subject, only to find after all that Nell had a devouring curiosity to know everything about her. He felt that indefinable something that he called standoffishness. He felt it was useless to notice or protest against it, but it nettled him unreasonably. When they were first married Nell used to burst into tears and "have it out" when hurt or offended, but lately he had seldom seen her shed a tear. She could put him at a greater distance by shutting herself within a wall of seclusion which words could not affect. Dick had come to the point of saying nothing and giving the mood time to wear away.

Nell sat facing the street, and could see Miss Rudolph slowly leaving Mrs. Brown's house.

"Let me give you some more pudding," she suggested brightly, determined to keep him if possible till Miss Rudolph was well on her way to the office.

"I don't believe I ought to eat any more, but it's mighty good." She held out her hand for his dish. "Just a little," he consented.

She smiled, took his plate and was as long as possible in filling it.

"Hurry, dear; I must be going," Dick called.

Had he seen her from the window? Nell hastened in with the pudding and sat down while he ate it, putting forth every effort to be entertaining.

When Dick left the house she followed him to the door and noticed with relief that Miss Rudolph was out of sight.

"You fool!" she whispered to herself fiercely. "Are you going to keep this up all summer?"

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Adventures of Minnie Monkey.

Poor Minnie Monkey said: "Oh, dear! why did I run away?
That was a very wicked act of mine;
If ever I get safely home, as sure as I'm alive,
I'll never try another monkey-shine."

The boy who caught Miss Minnie said: "My folks will all be glad To see you," but the boy was wrong, it seemed,
For when he showed the monkey to his mother, that good dame
Just threw her hands up in the air and screamed.

"Of course I cannot let you keep the ugly little thing!
Just think of all the bother it would be.
So take it right away from here as quickly as you can,
And give it to somebody else," said she.

Although the boy coaxed very hard it did no good at all,
So after while he said: "I think I'll go
And give her to the circus that is showing here in town;
She'd like to live a circus life, I know."

Thought Minnie: "Now I wonder what is going to happen next,
And what a circus is I do not know."
And then before she knew it they were standing in a tent,
Beside the Circus Man who owned the show.

Said he: "Your monkey's nice enough, but has she any tricks?"
The boy said: "Yes, indeed, just watch her now."
And though poor Minnie Monkey was as frightened as could be,
She turned a somersault and made a bow.

The man said: "I will take her, but she'll have to learn more tricks;
I'm sure that she can manage that all right."
And so the boy went off and left Miss Minnie with the show;
What happened next I'll tell tomorrow night.

Household Hints

THREE MAPLE RECIPES

Maple Cake—One cup sugar, one or two eggs, half cup butter, one cup sour milk, half cup maple syrup, one teaspoon soda, cinnamon and cloves to taste, two cups flour.

Maple Cookies—One cup maple syrup, half cup butter, one egg, two cups flour, half teaspoon soda in water at the last; drop heaping teaspoonful in pans and bake.

Maple Taffy—One quart maple syrup, piece butter size hickorynut; boil until it will harden in water; pour into greased platter and pull when cool.

BREADMAKING HINTS

After your bread has been stiffened, remove every bit of dry flour; grease pan with lard; bread will not stick to pan, neither will there be any dry flour to stick to loaves.

When baking bread, trim off all burnt edges of stale bread, soak well in lukewarm water and beat it into your sponge. Proceed in usual way to bake bread. A good way to use all stale bread while flour is so high. You would never know you had rebaked stale bread.

In making light bread, after having first been mixed and kneaded, let it rise twice before molding in loaves to rise and bake. You will have much better luck with the bread.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Cheese Fritters—To use up old cheese: half pound cheese grated or cut in small pieces, one pint sour milk or water, half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon baking powder, flour to thicken like pancake batter. Have griddle hot.

Delicious Dumplings of Left-Over Mashed Potatoes—Chop fine one good-sized onion, one-half bunch parsely, same amount celery. Soak two good slices bread in water, squeeze out dry as you can; add egg, pepper, salt and a little nutmeg, two cups mashed potatoes; mix well, then put in lightly enough flour to make balls size of an English walnut. Boil fifteen minutes in salt water, then drain. Take good-sized tablespoon butter, some bread crumbs, let brown light brown, pour over dumplings and serve.

Michigan Ivory Cake—Whites of five eggs, one cup sugar, 2½ cups flour, half cup butter, half cup milk, one teaspoon cream of tartar and half teaspoon soda. Mix butter and sugar to a cream, add milk, then flour in which soda and cream of tartar have been sifted, then add beaten whites of eggs. Flavor to taste.

Baked Apple Sauce—Peel, core, quarter apples to fill one quart measure. Spread these over bottom of granite dripping pan. Sprinkle liberally with sugar and nutmeg, dot with small pieces butter. Then take one tablespoon cornstarch, dissolve in two tablespoons cold water, pouring over this one pint boiling water, stirring until it looks like a clear starch. Pour this over apples and place in oven until nicely brown, or apples are well cooked.

FISH DISHES

Crab Salad—Two cups Japanese crabmeat, two cups celery, one cup salad dressing, salt, pepper and garnish. Pick crabmeat over carefully, removing any particles of bone. Add celery cut into small dice. Season with salt and pepper and mix all together; add salad dressing (either mayonnaise or boiled), garnish with lettuce, peppers, beet root or any preferred garnish, as, for instance, hard-boiled eggs or stuffed olives. Pour a little extra dressing over top and serve very cold.

Deviled Lobster—Two tablespoons butter, one tablespoon dry mustard, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon Worcestershire or tomato sauce, one teaspoon lemon juice, one can lobster, one-third cup butter. Beat the two tablespoons of butter to a cream, add mustard, salt, sauce and lemon juice. Divide lobster into neat pieces, saute for about six minutes in one-third cup butter and, when nearly done, add creamed mixture. Heat whole thoroughly and serve on toast.

MOTHERS' WORK

Contributing Staff.

Mrs. H. E. Parker, chairman; Mrs. Joseph Smith and Mrs. J. L. Evans.

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

North Plainfield.

Last week the Parent-Teacher Association of North Plainfield, gave an entertainment called the "Hall of Fame," for the purpose of raising money for the prizes offered in the spelling contest. Six prizes of five dollars each had been offered and so well was the entertainment patronized that not only are the prizes secured, but their remains in the association's treasury a nice sum which will be set aside toward a fund for a gymnasium for the public schools.

Moorestown.

Dr. Calvin N. Kendall, New Jersey Commissioner of Education, will speak at the dedication of the new High School in Moorestown, on the evening of April 8.

State Congress of Mothers.

The annual spring council of presidents of the association which form the Mothers' Congress of New Jersey, is to be held at Princeton, in the public school building, on Saturday. It is an all day session. Delegates from the ten associations of Plainfield and vicinity will leave on the 8:12 a. m. train, going on the Pennsylvania Railroad by way of Elizabeth.

This meeting is as its name implies, a council—there is no program and no speakers. It offers the opportunity to the individual association to come in touch with other associations doing the same work and with the State departments of the Mothers' Congress under the auspices of which the meeting is held. The benefits to both the State and the individual associations through thus conferring is unmeasurable and the day is always rich with interest for delegates.

Prayer of the Modern Women.

Give us light, Oh, God! Give us light, that we may see our way. Long have we walked in patience and duty, bearing heavy burdens. Now is laid upon us a new burden—the burden of choice. Give us light that we may choose our new paths in wisdom and follow them in truth.

Long have we lived in loneliness with our children and husband to love; but knowing not one another. Now at last we come into the world of women, in to new relation and duties. Give us light that we may choose in wisdom.

Long have we fulfilled our obligations with enduring submission and fortitude, with tireless sacrifice of pouring love. Now we come to new knowledge, to new hope of larger fulfillment, that we, all women together may care for all together better than we have cared for our own alone.

But give us light! light! That we may see the way before us and go not astray.

Give us power, Oh God. Give us power that we may do right after we see it! Long, long have we lived helpless, timid and dependant, having to obey, but not to act alone; never were we free to do, ourselves and to gain strength by doing.

Now opens before us the whole world's need! and the new duty, clearer, to serve the large world as we have served the little; to make it clean; to make it safe; to make it beautiful; to make it good.

Give us power, Oh God! Power to do right.

Help us to see that our little cup of love, close held, must be filled till it runs over; filled till it pouds abroad to feed the world.

Enter into us, enlarge our hearts; fill them over and over with the spirit of love—the love of God and the love of man which is like unto it.

The light of truth and the power of love—give us, Oh God, that we may use them.

And we will serve! even as we have served in our loneliness, so a thousand fold will we serve in our new union. Women united—mothers united, standing together, working together, to care not only for these our husband, or these our little ones; but these, all these, our sisters and brothers—all children of God.

Help us to labor together in woman's inborn duty to teach and to inspire to higher living and in the duty of all human beings—to use our best powers for the widest service of all, all! Truly we have been faithful over a few things, help us now that we may be faithful over many.

Give us, O God, give us light, give us power, give us love!

THIS DANCE FROCK SUGGESTIVE OF A FLOWER.

Like a blossom rising from its calyx is the lace bodice of this dainty dance frock which is made of peach-blow pink satin and cream lace over flesh pink chiffon. The calyx-like bodice of pink satin is lined with leaf green and the green shade appears again in the sash and in a narrow edging on the cream lace bodice. The drapery of the skirt, lifted above a cream lace petticoat, is especially graceful.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure, and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water, and above all take a spoonful of salts to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousand of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.—Adv.

CHURCHMEN HOLD YEARLY BANQUET

Successful Affair Given by Dutch Arms of Trinity Reformed Church.

ENJOYABLE ADDRESSES

Former Senators J. S. Frelinghuysen and E. R. Ackerman and Rev. George Dougherty Among the Speakers.

Progress was the keynote of the sixth annual banquet of the Dutch Arms, men's organization, of Trinity Reformed church, held in the lecture room of the church last night. The affair was the largest and most pretentious in the history of the organization, more than two hundred guests, including women, enjoying the excellent dinner prepared and served by the Loyal Band Class of the Bible school and the speeches which followed.

Edgar F. Sheppard was the toastmaster of the evening, and the speakers included former State Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, president of the State Board of Education; Rev. George P. Dougherty, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, Newark; former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church; Rev. J. Y. Brook, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. The invocation was given by Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, chaplain of the State Senate.

After the dinner, Arthur B. Cole, as president of the Dutch Arms, welcomed the guests, and then introduced Mr. Sheppard as the toastmaster. The latter, who spoke in a particularly happy vein in presenting the various speakers, first briefly outlined what had been accomplished by the organization during the year, stating that the present membership is 200, forty-five additions being made and three lost by death. During the year the Dutch Arms Band has filled thirty-six engagements, for which it was paid, and ten free engagements. Mr. Cole, as president, was characterized as the right man in the right place. Mr. Frelinghuysen was then introduced as the first speaker, his subject being "The Charity Trust."

In speaking about the big foundations incorporated by John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie and Mrs. Russell Sage, Mr. Frelinghuysen said he believed it would be a mistake to take the administration of these splendid benevolent trusts out of the hands of men who have been selected because of their peculiar fitness to administer them to the best advantage, and place them under the State or Federal government.

Referring to the fact that it was difficult at times to get men of recognized ability to accept some of the governmental positions, the Senator spoke of the fact that public office

SAMUEL MANNING IS LAID TO REST

Prominent South Plainfielder Buried in First Plot Laid Out in Cemetery.

The funeral of Samuel Manning, who died suddenly Tuesday afternoon, through overexertion in fighting a grass fire on his farm, was held this afternoon in the South Plainfield Baptist church. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. J. Allen, and was attended by a gathering of relatives and friends from many surrounding places, a large number coming from Plainfield. Mr. Allen gave a sympathetic discourse, taking as his text, John, 1-2:25—"And this is the promise that He has promised unto us, even life eternal." Two selections, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee," were sung by a quartet composed of Mrs. Harry Tappen, Mrs. Lewis Randolph, Mrs. E. M. Ten Eyck and Mrs. J. J. Allen.

Burial was made in the Baptist cemetery, on Plainfield avenue, this city, in the first plot that was laid out in this burying ground. It was selected by William Williamson, Mr. Manning's father-in-law, and his was the first interment in what is now known as Evergreen cemetery. The bearers for Mr. Maning's casket were two brothers, Reune B. and William H. Manning, of South Plainfield, and four nephews, Arthur Tappen, Edgar Boice, Harry Manning and Fred Manning. The floral tributes were exceptionally numerous, and among them were many handsome set pieces from the family, relatives and friends.

The Women's Missionary Society, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, held an enthusiastic meeting in the church yesterday afternoon. Gratifying reports were read and there was much to look forward to in the coming twelve months. Mrs. F. St. John Fitch presided at the meeting, and after the reports were submitted the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. D. M. Runyon; first vice-president, Mrs. F. J. Fitch; secretary, Miss Bertha Nilis; treasurers, Mrs. B. Hadley, Mrs. F. L. Groff and Mrs. M. Mauger; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Frank Veil; financial secretary, Mrs. Charles Van Winkle.

Following the business meeting, Mrs. Hudson, wife of the pastor of the church, gave an instructive talk on The Indians in the West." Mrs. Hudson spent much time among the Indians of Oklahoma, and is fully conversant with the conditions, life and costumes of the red man. The work of the missions out West was also dwelt upon.

MANY FRIENDS AT FUNERAL OF WILLIAM M'INTOSH

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, the funeral of William McIntosh, for many years superintendent of the motive power department of the New Jerey Central, was held at his late home on Willow avenue this afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, which Mr. McIntosh attended. Two solos were rendered by James MacClymont, "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." The attendants included many officials of the New Jersey Central, delegations from Jerusalem Lodge of Masons, Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, and the Masonic Consistory of Jersey City. The motive power department of the railroad and the Masonic organization contributed handsome floral pieces.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the pallbearers being the following business associates and intimate friends of Mr. McIntosh: Jackson E. Reynolds, William S. McGowan and Robert L. Gordon, of New York; Frank L. Morse, of Yonkers, New York; George W. Wildin, New Haven, Conn., and Hugh Montgomery, Rutland, Vt.

ALFRED NOYES CHARMS AUDIENCE

English Poet Speaks Here Under Auspices of Monday Afternoon Club.

URGES WORLD PEACE

Declares That Power Above the State Brought on the Present European Conflict—Recites Some of His Better Known Poems.

The spacious auditorium of the Plainfield High School held one of the largest crowds this season, yesterday afternoon, and if attendance is taken as a criterion the Plainfield public appreciates poetry. The gathering was the occasion of hearing Alfred Noyes, the noted English poet who appeared personally at the school, under the auspices of the literary department of the Monday Afternoon Club.

Mr. Noyes was introduced by Mrs Allan Cowperthwaite and the young poet was given a splendid ovation by those present. The speaker gave a short address of criticism of modern poetry. Unlike others, Mr. Noyes is a poet of world peace and he typifies a revival of poetry in England in which he represents the present spirit of the race. Common humanity and the truth of life in their most modern phases are all brought out in his works.

Speaking of the present war, the speaker told of Bernard Shaw's answer to America, saying that if England found it convenient to ignore the Monroe Doctrine, she would do so, but that America in order to show her neutrality should drive the English out of Canada and the Russian out of Alaska. America's reply is looked forward to with much interest. "Private morality differs from political morality and the power above the State brought on the present conflict," said Mr. Noyes.

"The tendency of the present day poetry is to lose hold of all balance and sense of proportion," said the poet. "We are in danger of intellectual disintegration. We are sinking into a second unconsciousness and find ourselves wandering through a world of no meaning. In literature and arts this is especially true. The work of our forefathers should not be laid aside with the advent of the newer age. They should act as an inspiration. There should be a principal of unity in all poetry, for the future of poetry is immense and as Kipling sums it up, 'There will only be the survival of the fittest.' Poetry is today the strongest religion."

Mr. Noyes gave a short criticism of the writings of Wordsworth, Tennyson, Coleridge, Shelley and Robert Stevenson, comparing their swing melody, orthology and traditionalism. In conclusion the poet read several of his better known poems, in all the feeling that they should convey. The list included "The Barrel-organ," "The Admiral's Ghost," a tale of Devonshire, "The Origin of Life," an answer to a German scientist, who said this universe was composed by a futurist concourse of elements, "The Highwayman" and "The Lord Misrule," the latter a hitherto unpublished piece.

INTEREST EXHIBITED IN RECREATION CLUB'S AFFAIR

An uunsually interesting affair is to take place at Bryant School this evening, when the Italian Club entertains its guests with dramatics, music and dancing. This club was one of the first to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the Public Recreation Committee, and has been holding meetings regularly twice a week since last summer. The club is self-governing and self-supporting. The members have been resourceful and found many avenues of self-expression.

At first they came in large numbers to listen to the music provided by the many talented members of the club, which consisted of songs in Italian, and duets and trios, accompanied by guitars and mandolins. The Italian music has a charm and swing that is all its own, and is a delight to all who are privileged to hear it. Later in the year interests broadened, and gymnastic and dramatic groups became active. It looks as though the club would continue to grow in numbers and popularity. Those interested in seeing what the club has been doing should try to go to Bryant School this evening and enjoy the program with them. Dancing is to follow the entertainment, and a large crowd is expected. The general public will be made welcome. A small fee is charged to cover expenses.

Easter comes early this Spring and Van Arsdale is prepared to fit you out in shoes to your liking.—Adv.

CITY FATHERS ENTER PROTEST AGAINST BILL

Believe Act Now Before Legislature is Contrary to Home Rule Principles.

Members of the Common Council met in conference with Mayor Calkins last night to consider a bill now before the Legislature which was called to the Mayor's attention by the officials of Perth Amboy. The bill in question, were it to be passed, would place municipal lighting and water plants under the control of the State Public Utilities Commission in all communities, except those of the first class. Newark and Jersey City are the only ones in the State in the first class, so municipalities like Plainfield, which own such plants, would be affected by the bill.

After a thorough discussion of the matter, the councilmen and Mayor decided that were such an act to pass, although it does not affect Plainfield at the present time, it is another encroachment on the home rule principle, and Mayor Calkins was instructed to write a letter to the members of the Assembly from Union county, protesting against the measure.

FORMER LOCAL MAN DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Otto F. Mueck, Passes Away at His Home in Elizabeth, After a Week's Illness.

Otto F. Mueck, a former well known resident of the borough, died last night at his home on Madison avenue, Elizabeth, following a week's illness with pneumonia. Mr. Mueck was about seventy years old and was a veteran of the Civil War, having enlisted at the age of sixteen. He has been employed for many years in the customs department on Governor's Island. During his residence here Mr. Mueck lived on Watchung avenue, removing from there to Elizabeth about seven years ago. He was a member of the Plainfield Elks and Masonic organizations, but demitted after leaving the city.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, Otto and Emil, both living at the Elizabeth home. The funeral will be held at the late residence, Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, and burial will be in Evergreen cemetery, Elizabeth, on Monday morning.

ST MARY'S PUPILS TO HAVE PARADE TOMORROW

In celebration of having won the first prize in the library contest, which was concluded on Tuesday, the pupils of St. Mary's School were given a holiday today, and tomorrow they will have a celebration. Mayor Calkins has issued a permit for a parade, and the pupils will form at the school, from which they will march, headed by a fife and drum corps, to Tepper's store, where the books will be procured. A return march will be made to the school to deliver the books to the library.

ELEVEN APPLICANTS FOR JOB ON POLICE FORCE

A short meeting of the Police Board was held last night after the conference of the members of the Council, at which time eleven applications for the vacancy in the department caused by the retirement of Patolman Nicholas Meyers were received. After considering the names the Board decided to instruct Chief Kiely to make arrangements for the necessary physical and other examinations, after which the appointment will be made, and the other successful candidates will be held on an eligible list. Those who seek the place are: Samuel J. Kriney, Joseph Dunlap, Joseph G. Dever, Joseph Maguire, Henry L. Winter, Patrick Gulliney, John Parker Apgar, John M. Wurth, Thomas J. Lappin, J. CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS

Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association Adopts Novel Method of Raising Money for Work—Mass Meeting for Taxpayers.

As a means of raising funds to cover the cost of the proposed survey of city departments, to be financed by the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association, the latter organization has instituted a membership campaign, the fees received to be used for the work. According to present plans the Municipal Bureau of Research, of New York city, will carry on the department survey, and, while no figures have been given out, it has been estimated that the survey will entail an expenditure of several thousand dollars.

Voters of Plainfield this morning received communications from John M. Charles, secretary of the local civic organization, requesting them to add their name to the roster. All membership fees raised in this way will be placed in the survey fund.

The scientific investigation of the administration of the city has been authorized by the Common Council and the Board of Education, but there is apparently much that has not been made clear in the minds of taxpayers. To meet the demand for information the Taxpayers' Association has completed arrangements for a mass meeting to be held in the Plainfield High School Auditorium, next Thursday night. At that time Mayor Austin Scott, of New Brunswick; David Henney, of the Montclair Common Council, and Mayor Leighton Calkins, of Plainfield, will be the speakers. Both New Brunswick and Montclair have had partial surveys conducted during the past eighteen months, and the speakers are thoroughly acquainted with the topic.

One of the features that have not been made clear to the public in general is the exact extent of the survey and what departments it will include. When interviewed by a Plainfield Daily Press reporter on this question this morning Mayor Calkins said:

"The investigation will include all municipal departments. Contrary to the general expectation it will not include the Board of Health. This does not come under the head of municipal departments, and consequently the Bureau of Research has dropped educational work from its investigations. It will, therefore, be necessary to employ a different expert in the survey of the schools in Plainfield."

When asked if the survey in Plainfield would be similar to those in Montclair and New Brunswick, the Mayor said:

"In New Brunswick and Montclair the survey has been only a partial one, not all of the municipal departments being included in the investigation. The entire administration in Plainfield will be given a thorough examination, and the survey will be one of the most exhaustive carried on in New Jersey."

Queried concerning his knowledge of the means the Plainfield Taxpayers' Potective Association had adopted in raising funds for the proposed work, he said:

"The campaign for members has been brought to my attention, and the association deserves support in the undertaking. This is the means decided on by the body to acquire the hundreds of dollars needed in the work."

YOUNG FOLKS' LEAGUE TO GIVE BARN DANCE

See all the girlies flirtin' back, b'gosh.
Don't mind your clothes, anything will dew,

—you will know that it comes from the Young Folk's League of Temple Sholem, who are making arrangements for a barn dance to be given on Wednesday evening, April 14, in Debele's Hall. A jolly good old country time is assured all who attend.

SHOWN HANG-ROPE; TOLD TO "BEAT IT"

Negro Preacher Who Got in Trouble Has Another Close Call.

Chaos reigned in Fanwood's negro colony yesterday afternoon, news that a delegation of burly Alabama darkies had laid careful plans to "string up" one Nicholas Cavanzo, a religious "bug," having excited the community to action. One colored "gent" telephoned to Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein's office in Elizabeth and demanded that the State militia be dispatched post-haste to the scene of turmoil. Another in fear of his life "hoofed" it at a clip that would make the great Longboat envious, to the boundary line of Plainfield and besieged a bluecoat to accompany him back to the proposed killing.

The arrival of the detectives from the county prosecutor's office in a "deep-seagoing bus" armed to the teeth" to quell the disturbance soon lent added zest to the fracas in progress in Darktown.

It was learned that a Klu Klux Klan Committee" waited on Cavanzo Monday night and informed him that his presence in the neighborhood was no longer needed to assist in raising the moral standard of the inhabitants. 'Tis said he scoffed at the idea of retreat, adding that he "had been sent by God to bring Fanwood's colored population back to the fold."

Their displeasure at having to put up with him as a neighbor was increased when he flatly refused to leave the vicinity and the committee accordingly devised plans to "put him out of his misery." This admonition was made significant when Cavanzo was shown a rope and a formidable looking hickory tree limb which glittered grimly in the sunlight. Cavanzo's views on how to win immorality did not coincide with those of his neighbors, who are Baptists, and with the rope staring him in the face he was informed that if there is any better route to heaven than the water route, he might start over it on a personally conducted tour.

When the delegation from the prosecutor's office began to lay their trap for the capture of the wouldbe assailants they found little to occupy their attention. The turmoil was soon quieted and inasmuch as the rioters had not "gotten down to real business" when the detectives arrived, there was no cause for making arrests. Cavanzo is still camping at Fanwood, however, and people in that section are awaiting further developments.

His views on religion got him in trouble with a number of local colored Baptists several months ago and he was arraigned before Judge De Meza in the city police court. The differences were patched up by the city magistrate and the dusky-skinned defendant allowed to go merrily on his way.

EFFORTS TO IDENTIFY ONE WHO LEFT INFANT FUTILE

Somerset County Detective George Totten and members of the North Plainfield police force are running down a number of minor clues that have been revealed in the infant desertion mystery, but as yet nothing of a substantial nature has been revealed. The baby, which was a boy apparently about two months old, was found on the stoop of a vacant house at Grandview and DeLacy avenues yesterday afternoon by a delivery boy who was passing the place. The identity of the infant's parents remains a mystery despite the efforts of the authorities to get evidence about several meager clues.

Marshal Charles Keller was working in co-operation with Detective Totten this morning and it is their belief that the baby starved to death inasmuch as the corpse appeared to be greatly emaciated.

ANDREW SEZMAK.

Andrew Sezmak, aged twenty-four years, died last night in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he had been undergoing medical treatment for several days. He had previously been ill at his home on Johnson avenue. Mr. Sezmak was employed at the Spicer plant, and is survived by a wife and one child. The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church, Monday morning, at 9 o'clock, and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Hyndford Succeeds in Reaching Port After Torpedo Caused Damage—French Advances Continue, While Germans Claim Advantage.

London, March 19.—A despatch from Bucharest to the Times says that the Austrians have obtained reinforcements and have resumed a strong offensive against the Russians in Bukowina.

The Glasgow steamer Hyndford was torpedoed off East Bourne in the English channel last night by a German submarine. One member of the crew was lost, but the vessel managed to make port arriving at Deal today. The Hyndford is 4,286 tons registered.

The foreign office has announced that Mediterranean waters are regarded as European waters and that consequently the blockade will be maintained there just as in the North Sea. This statement was made because of confusion resulting from the varied interpretations of Foreign Secretary Grey's note as to the effect the British blockade would have on Mediterranean waters.

Paris, March 19.—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"At Notre Dame de Lorette we made ourselves masters of lines of communication running down to the village of Ablain from the ridge captured by our soldiers. We destroyed these after having killed, driven out or captured the defenders.

"In the Argonne between Bolante and Four de Paris we advanced about 150 yards after a very violent combat. In the forest of Consenvoye we repulsed a German counter attack last night and maintained our gain of March 18.

"At Eparges we captured a salient east of the position, in which the enemy had succeeded in maintaining himself since the conflicts of last month. We repulsed two counter attacks yesterday and a third in the course of the night."

A meeting of the heads of all the Chambers of Commerce of France will be held here next Monday to discuss the general commercial situation and to devise plans for obtaining markets which hitherto have been almost exclusively German. David Mannet, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Paris said: "Business is not stagnant except for the trade in luxuries. It may be said that trade now is showing a noticeable trend toward normal."

Amsterdam, March 19.—A report from Dunkirk states that Crown Prince Ruprecht of Bavaria has been severely wounded by the flying fragment of a shell.

Constantiople, March 19 (via Berlin and Amsterdam).—Bagdad despatches announce the capture of Korna at the junction of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers by Turkish troops.

The following official statement was issued here today:

"A portion of our fleet on Thursday morning bombarded the shipyards and torpedo boat depot west of Theodosia in the Crimea, firing them. Early on the same day the enemy's fleet heavily shelled the Dardanelles forts, which replied effectively. The French ship Bouvet was sunk.

"The French battleship Bouvet carried a complement of more than 600 men. No information has been received to whether any were saved but it is probable that most of them were picked up."

Berlin, March 19 (by wireless).—The following statement was given out at the German headquarters today:

"Western Theatre—In Champagne two partial attacks by the French north of Les Mesnil and north of Beausejour again failed. Two officers and 70 Frenchmen retreated under the successful German fire to their original positions.

"Southeast of Verdun the French made several advances yesterday in the Woevre Plain. They were repulsed on east edge of Meuse Heights. Fighting continues there.

"Eastern Theatre—The situation near Memel is not yet clear. The situation south of the Vistula is unchanged.

"Rumors of fresh occupation of parts of the province of East Prussia by Russians are untrue. The German Line in the east runs from the Pilica along the Rawka and Bzura to the Vistula. North of the Vistula it proceeds from east of Plock through Zurominek and Stuppsk, both south of Mlawa, then

CHAS. ELLIS AWARDED GRADING CONTRACT

Dunellen Council Transacts Much Business at Adjourned Meeting.

At an adjourned meeting of the Mayor and Common Council held in the borough hall last evening Charles Ellis, of Plainfield, the lowest of four bidders, was awarded the contract at a bid of $105 for the grading of Second street, between Washington and Jackson avenues. The other bidders in order were: Isaac V. Smalley, $119.00; J. S. Hawkyard, $123.00, and Goldson W. Smalley, $145.99.

A petition received from Secretary George W. Day, of the Dunellen Building and Loan Association asking permission to hold the annual meeting of the association in the Council chamber on April 15th brought up the question of whether the chamber had ought to be used for a general meeting room. Mayor Latham said that the room had been especially fixed up as a place for the Council to meet and he didn't think that it had ought to be used as a place to hold public meetings. Councilman Ryan viewed the matter from the same angle as did the Mayor and a motion made by a Councilman to the effect that all requests for the use of the borough hall in which to hold public meetings be confined hereafter to downstairs, was unanimously carried. The matter of loaning the chairs in the borough hall for public use was also discussed at this time and the Council decided to curtail its lenient policy in this regard.

The Council decided to join with the S. B. Q. R. Realty Company of Plainfield in the matter of petitioning the Board of Freeholders to erect a bridge across Bonegut brook at Chestnut street. The attention of the Council was called to the fact that a stone flagging opposite the Whittier School had been broken by a vehicle being driven across the sidewalk in violation of an ordinance. The offender will be written a letter of warning.

Thursday night of the coming week was decided upon as a night that the Councilmen should meet to work on the annual budget. Auditor Carpenter, who has been opening an up-to-date set of books for the borough and auditing the books of Treasurer Stites, will make his report at that time.

Chairman Castner, of the Street Committee, in his report stated that the S. B. Q. R. Realty Company had requested that the ditch south of South avenue and facing Chestnut street be abridged so that traffic can cross. Mr. Castner recommended that a culvert be placed at the point and the matter was placed in the hands of his committee with power to act.

In his report, Chairman H. D. Williams, of the collecting sewage committee called attention to the necessity of formally petitioning the Board of Freeholders for the privilege of opening New Market road for the laying of sewer pipe. Mr. Williams stated that the sewer work would start next week. The start will be made on Dunellen avenue west of Washington.

Chairman Craig, of the Fire and Water Committee, in his report called the attention of the Council to a complaint registered against the condition of the old barn on the Van Middlesworth property on Washington avenue. This barn is said to be in a tumble-down condition. It is located in the fire zone and was termed a fire trap by the party who complained to Mr. Craig, who also called attention to some supplies needed by the local fire department and his committee was authorized to make the necessary purchases.

Among those present at the meeting were Superintendent H. R. Cock, of the Watchung Water Company; H. Clifford Smith, of the Smith Auto Express; John P. Hill, of the Hill Drayage and Construction Company; Postmaster Henry S. Garretson and G. Sumner Smith, one of the candidates for the postmastership.

"WHITEE," CHECKER PLAYER, WINS TWENTY GAMES

J. P. Streeter, of Plainfield, and friend, "Whitee," the famous checker player, were visitors in the borough last evening. When these two are in the borough there is only one place to find them and that place is in the candy and fruit emporium of Paul Ratti. In other words, if the two can not be found in Ratti's, then they are not in the borough.

When J. P. Streeter brings his friend "Whitee" to the borough there is always a prospective checker victim. This victim last evening was E. R. Heilig, the German-American checker player. When the reporter left the Ratti establishment at 1 o'clock this morning "Whitee" had won 20 games and Heilig 4 and four games had resulted in draws.

Local checker fans are going to have the treat of witnessing a checker match either tonight or tomorrow night between "Whitee" and Charles Mattison, of 27 Summit avenue, North Plainfield, the champion checker player of Plainfield, and the former champion of New Jersey. The place will, of course, be the Ratti establishment.

Miss Anna Wiedenhaupt, of Madison avenue, is entertaining her cousin, Miss Gladys Heiling, of Elizabeth.

Cashier Arthur J. Hamley, of the local bank, has joined the rank of automobile owners. On Wednesday he purchased an Abbott-Detroit limousine from the Stryker Motor Car Company.

Samuel M. Kookogey and family, who have tenanted the Paul Reusch house on New Market road for the past several years, will move to Brooklyn the latter part of the month.

Mrs. William H. Snyder, of Penfield place, who has been ill for some little time back, does not seem to show any improvement. Her malady has been diagnosed as diabetes by Dr. M. J. Whitford, her attending physician.

William Hoff and family, who have resided for the past year or so on North avenue in the second house from Jefferson avenue, will move out of town in a few days.

MRS. McGARRIGLE'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary McGarrigle, which was to have been held from the late home at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning and at St. John's church for high mass at 9 o'clock, will instead be held from the house at 9 o'clock and at the church at 10 o'clock. The Knights of Columbus with their chaplain, Rev. B. M. Bogan, will visit the home of the deceased this evening.

Mrs. William Karnell, State superintendent of the Home Department of Sunday schools, gave a lecture on her work in the Baptist church last night. The speaker was introduced in a few words by the Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the church, and after a cordial greeting by the large audience, Mrs. Karnell delivered an excellent talk on the good work that is being done by the Home Departments in nearly every church in the country. She explained how the workers reached the mothers and children who live too far away from any place of worship to be regular attendants, and, for example, pointed out the great good that has been accomplished by the local Home Departments, that of the Baptist church alone having about eighty-five enrolled. Besides many residents of Scotch Plains, large numbers were present from Fanwood, Plainfield and Westfield.

The Fanwood Township Board of Education has announced that it is pleased with the reports coming from the Westfield High School and Plainfield in regard to the standings of the local pupils attending those institutions, which are in nearly all cases excellent. Especially is this so of those attending Westfield High, as this is the first year local graduates have been sent there, and it was not decided to do so until too late last year to make any change in the course of study to agree with the difference in the studies pursued at Plainfield and Westfield.

CHURCHMEN HOLD BANQUET

was apparently an opportunity to provide employment for some of their friends "If a man of Mr. Bryan's standing," said the speaker, "does not mind making use of the government service to take care of his friends, what may we expect if these benevolent institutions were put in the government service?"

Speaking of the efforts of Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the Commission on Industrial Relations, to get information relative to the big foundations and their administration, the former Senator said that he believed that the laws of this country and recent monopolies had given certain men opportunities unparalleled in the history of the world, and that as a result some men had amassed great wealth to the detriment of business and a menace to the opportunities of many poor men."

Referring to the work of the Russell Sage Foundation and what it has accomplished, Mr. Frelinghuysen said:

"Mrs. Sage might have this great fortune cashed into dollar bills and invite all of the unemployed to come and take a grab. How long would it last? The answer, of course, is plain, and little real good would be accomplished."

Senator Frelinghuysen commended Andrew Carnegie for his generous gift of fifteen millions to provide a permanent home for the Hague Peace Tribunal. He referred to the hobby of J. Pierepont Morgan in buying up the works of old masters, which rich and poor alike might enjoy at present. He referred to the immense wealth of Solomon, and then inquired where this great wealth was today. He suggested that, as with the great fortune of King Solomon, so the immense fortunes of Rockefeller, Carnegie, Sage and other multi-millionaires might ultimately return to its original source.

Mr. Frelinghuysen commended the Dutch Arms Club as an organization that was living up to its motto, "the other fellow," and said it was through co-operation that philanthropic work was done. In ending his address, he said:

"I believe in the "square deal" for everybody, rich and poor alike. If that is assured we need have no fear of the future, and perhaps, when some of my hearers have accumulated their millions, they will be guaranteed the right to dispose of their earnings in a manner that will be in accord with their own ideas. We may not all become men of wealth like Rockefeller or Carnegie, but it is our privilege to do our share towards lessening the burden of our fellow man, even in a small way, so that when the time comes for us to relinquish our activities here it may be said of us that we lived true to our heritage of honest toil and our lives were not lived in vain."

"A Man's Business" was the subject of Rev. Mr. Dougherty's talk, in which he declared that men are interested in religion, but that the church is not always able to reach them. He said that it was so often a case of preaching one thing and practicing another, of being long on piety and short on practice. The speaker said that it was not an unmanly thing to serve Christ.

Mr. Dougherty emphasized the increased opportunities for service in the church and the world, and he concluded by saying that he was glad to have lived now, for when the European War is ended and peace is declared there will be the greatest opportunity for the advancement of God's Kingdom."

Mr. Ackermann congratulated the Dutch Arms, especially for having such a man as Edgar F. Sheppard connected with it. He recalled some of the early days when he sat under the preaching of Rev. Dr. A. A. V Raymond and reported sermons for The Constitutionalist and the Central New Jersey Times. He also recalled a time when the church was on fire and he assisted, as an amateur fireman, in saving some of the property. He urged men's organizations to hunt up another Edgar Sheppard if they would succeed, adding that "you can't have this one."

Rev. Dr. Anderson, in commenting on the question, what right has any church to exist, answered it by saying that Trinity church is always able to show its credentials, thereby its right to exist. He congratulated the Dutch Arms for what it has done and is doing today. Rev. Edward S. Ralston, of the Netherwood Reformed church, spoke of the church as a power house, and its members as dynamos, declaring that Christianity is a strong thing. Rev. J. Y. Broek concluded the speechmaking by also congratulating the Dutch Arms for its great accomplishments.

Throughout the evening the women comprising the Loyal Band, which prepared and served the dinner, were frequently complimented. The young women appeared wearing Dutch caps. Attractive menu cards, representing Dutch girls, were very appropriate. The room was decorated appropriately with American flags and flowers. One of the features of the affair was the popular music by the Dutch Arms orchestra, one selection, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," arousing great enthusiasm. The officers of the Dutch Arms are: President, Arthur B. Cole; vice-presidents, F. S. Cutter, Lindlau M. Leek; financial secretary, Charles Beiter; corresponding secretary, Ralph P. Gay; treasurer, George E. Volk

Plainfield, N. J., March 19, 1915.

THE BURDENS OF NEUTRALITY.

The burdens of neutrality are not to be mentioned in the same breath with the calamities of war, but they are nevertheless exceedingly heavy. Americans of all classes or previous nationalities, in view of the problems and hazards faced by our State Department, ought to be sympathetic and helpful rather than captious in their attitude, offering only criticism that is really constructive.

More troublesome and embarrassing perhaps than all other things have been the activities of certain classes of German-Americans whose complaints against and attacks on the authorities at Washington indicate that they are more devoted to the alien aspiration of "Deutschland ueber alles" than to the patriotic sentiment supporting "America before all." Some of these misguided people have even gone to the extreme of pledging their organizations to seek to make Germany's cause the issue of the American political campaign of 1916, virtually serving notice on the party in power that it will be made to suffer if its course meanwhile should not be such as the protesters can heartily approve, and apparently being too highly wrought up to reflect that the Democrats are likely to gain more friends than enemies by refusing to be influenced by such threats. The attitude has not been that of sympathetic Americans of German birth or parentage, but of subjects of the Kaiser who happen to be living in the United States. Some of the utterances from these sources suggest that the persons quoted are victims of the vain imagination that they can prod our government into becoming a virtual ally of a foreign nation at war.

To the more or less inevitable burdens of neutrality is thus added a domestic disturbance due solely to the fact that our flag shelters large numbers of the blood kindred of one of the warring powers. For this reason the situation in which the United States finds itself is more difficult than that of any other neutral nation, with the possible exception of Italy. Hyphenated residents of our country who are really worthy of American citizenship ought to bear this in mind and exercise self-restraint accordingly.

There are many Americans who openly champion the cause of the Allies, but President Wilson and his associates are strictly and even anxiously neutral. To labor for the best interests of the United States, to be just to all nations and to favor none, to make no mistakes, and to keep from being drawn into the whirlpool of war—this, as is plain to every one except the violent partisan, is the earnest, watchful and sleepless endeavor of our heavily-burdened government.

ANOTHER REASON.

Add one more to the string of reasons for the re-establishment of Plainfield's old fire whistle. Public safety is once more placed at a premium. When the traffic post was ordered installed in the middle of the "two by four" square formed by the juncture of Park avenue and Second street, patrolmen doing duty on that beat were instructed to rush to that corner at the sound of the whistle and remove the obstruction. This was suggested as a precaution against collisions and the loss of life, the one-half division of the thoroughfare at this point being too narrow to allow the fire apparatus to pass without the possibility of an accident.

Several times recently while the patrolman at this post was several blocks distant an alarm has been sounded and he has known nothing about it until the engines have passed the point. Unless some thoughtful citizen has risked his life in an attempt to roll the heavy iron guide-post to one side of the street it has been necessary for the engine drivers to dodge the obstacle. As a result some narrow escapes have been recorded and on-lookers happening in that vicinity when a fire broke out have been treated to thrills.

The whistle when blown, aroused the minion of the law and nine times out of ten he had ample time to gain the spot before the apparatus passed. Of course, stil alarms have to be taken into consideration, but these are in the minority.

We will depart slightly from our usual custom with the contributed editorial for tomorrow night. Heretofore the writers have been Plainfielders, and we expect to have them in the future. Tomorrow's editorial, however, has been prepared by a former Plainfielder, at one time city editor of the Daily Press, who now holds a similar position with the Albuquerque, New Mexico, Daily Herald. Archibald Hacquer left Plainfield in 1913 to go to ElPaso, and was doing newspaper work there during the trouble at Juarez, so that he is fully conversant with the situation over the Rio Grande. Mr. Hacquer has written some of the impressions which he has gained of the present tangled conditions in Mexico, and what he has to say will undoubtedly be of vast interest to his hundreds of friends in this city.

ARGUMENT ON THAW WRIT PUT OFF UNTIL MARCH 29

New York, March 18.—Argument on the writ of habeas corpus, sued out on behalf of Harry K. Thaw, was this afternoon adjourned by Justice Bijur, of the Supreme Court, until Monday, March 29. It came up this morning, but was adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

This writ was obtained to prevent his return to Matteawan, and it is understood that there is a question as to the legality and wisdom of it.

MISS MARY A. VALENTINE DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Following an illness of more than six months, during which she was a patient sufferer, Miss Mary A. Valentine, died yesterday afternoon at the home of her brother, Frederick E. Valentine, of Grandview avenue. Death was due to anaemia.

Miss Valentine was a native of New York city, where she was born 75 years ago. Fifty years ago she and her brother removed to the farm at Road Ending, this city, where they resided continuously for forty-one years, removing to the Grandview avenue residence in 1907. The Valentine farm is one of the best known in this section. Miss Valentine was of a retiring disposition but had a host of friends throughout the city and borough. She was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Beside her brother, the only near relative is a nephew, Harry Valentine, of Florida.

The funeral will be held at Mr. Valentine's home, 76 Grandview avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. Burial will be at Jamaica, Long Island.

MOTORCYCLE CLUB HELD ITS ANNUAL RECEPTION

Members of the Plainfield Motorcycle Club held their annual banquet in Nelson's Hotel, New Market, last night, the affair being a thoroughly enjoyable one. A large delegation of riders from this city and the borough met at the Somerset street headquarters shortly after 6 o'clock and motored to the scene of the festivities.

Following a dinner the cyclists gathered in the parlors of the hostelry where a social time was enjoyed. A number of vocal selections were rendered by talented members and instrumental music and games were indulged in.

Y. W. C. A.

A charming birthday supper and St. Patrick's Day party was held in the association last night. Forty-five young women attended the affair and a general good time was enjoyed by everyone. Edmund Rushmore, gave an interesting talk on his grape friut farm in Porto Rico and illustrated with numerous views of the country. Miss Helen Besler, dressed in a typical Irish costume, rendered several Irish songs that were enthusiastically received.

The basketry class wil lend tonight. The class has been unusually successfu lthis year and much work has been accomplished by the members, under the supervion of Miss Laura Sydenham.

MASTER BUILDERS ELECT.

At a meeting of the Master Builders' Association last night, the following officers were re-elected: President, Charles Krausse; vice-president, L. B. Woolston; secretary, L. T. Titsworth; treasurer, Seaman Williams. Only routine business was transacted, no action being taken on the increase in pay asked for by the local carpenters.

SOCIAL POSTPONED.

The social which was to have been given tonight at the home of Mrs. J. A. Powlison, 203 Somerset street, under the auspices of the Brightside Circle of King's Daughters, has been indefinitely postponed because of the death of Miss Augusta Valentine, who was a member of the circle. Her death occurred last evening.

TO PAY THEIR RESPECTS.

The members of Watchung Council, No. 552, Knights of Columbus, will visit the home of the late Mrs. Mary A. McGarrigle, at Dunellen, this evening, leaving Plainfield on the 8 o'clock trolley. Mrs. McGarrigle's sons are members of the council.

Good Advice.

A man advertised recently in a London paper to forward on receipt of postage stamps "sound practical advice that would be applicable at any time and to all persons and conditions of life."

On receipt of the stamps he sent his numerous victims the following:

Washington, March 19.—Austria, through its Ambassador, Dr. Dumba, today asked the United States to call on Great Britain for a further explanation of the British order in council placing an embargo on all shipments from neutral countries to Germany, Austria and Turkey. HEAVING THE LEAD

How a Ship Feels Its Way Over the Bed of the Ocean.

TAKING SOUNDINGS AT SEA.

For Deep Water Work Machines That Carry 300 Fathoms of Wire and a Twenty-four Pound Weight Are Used. Casting by Hand in Bad Weather.

"By the d-e-e-p, nine!"

The peculiar, long drawn out cry of the leadsman in the chains echoes out as the cruiser gathers speed and begins to move through the water.

"By the m-a-r-k, ten!"

We watch the man as he twirls the lead in the air, and reels off the sounding with mathematical accuracy. He is standing in the port "chains"—a small platform, perhaps four feet square, jutting out from one end of the cruiser's bridge. To us his position seems rather precarious, for his perch overhangs the dark water thirty feet below, but the man himself—a seasoned petty officer—feels perfectly safe for he leans his body against a canvas "apron," waist high, while his feet are firmly placed against a wooden bar secured to the platform itself.

But let us watch him as he makes a cast. He first sees the end of the lead line is properly secured and then proceeds to coil it up in his right hand. The line itself, whitened by long use, has sundry little marks at various distances along it. At two fathoms (twelve feet) from the lead are two strips of leather, while at three fathoms there are three. At five fathoms and again at fifteen, is a piece of white bunting; at seven and seventeen fathoms, a piece of red bunting, and at ten a piece of leather with a hole in it. At thirteen fathoms comes a rag of blue bunting, while at twenty three is a small bit of line, with two knots tied in it, spliced into the lead line itself.

The lead line is twenty-five fathoms long, while the lead secured to its end is about fourteen pounds in weight. The bottom of it is hollowed out to receive the "arming" of tallow or soap and this allows the nature of the bottom to be ascertained, for the sticky substance will come to the surface with particles of mud or sand, etc., adhering to it.

"Heaving the lead" looks easy enough, and anybody who is accustomed to doing it will say that it is quite simple; but it takes a long time before a man becomes a proficient leadsman. A novice is apt to be frightened at the whirling fourteen pound weight on the end of its line, and if he loses heart and omits to give it that peculiar little jerk which brings it flying round in a circle it may fall perpendicularly in close proximity to his head.

Heaving the lead may be all right enough in good weather, but in the winter, when it is blowing hard, raining or snowing, it is anything but pleasant. The driving rain and snow search out every portion of the leadsman's anatomy, even though he may be wearing oilskins, while his hands get numb with cold until there is no feeling left in them.

The deep sea lead line, which was invariably used for deep water work before the introduction of patent sounding machines and would still be used if they broke down, consists of 100 fathoms of line and a twenty-eight pound lead. It is marked up to twenty fathoms in the same way as the hand lead line, and then at twenty-five, thirty-five, forty-five, etc., fathoms with one knot, and at thirty, forty, fifty, etc., with three, four or five knots, and so on, to the greatest depth of the line.

The ship is usually stopped when using the deep sea line, for it takes a considerable time for the lead to reach the bottom.

The patent sounding machine consists of 300 fathoms of thin piano wire wound on a drum, and to the end of the wire is secured a twenty-four pound lead, with, just above it, a perforated brass sheath fitted with a cap. Before sounding takes place a glass tube open at one end and coated on the inside with a red chemical compound, is placed in the brass sheath. The wire is then allowed to run out until the lead is on the bottom, and as it descends the pressure forces the water up the glass tube and turns the red chemical into a milky white color for a certain distance up.

The lead is then hauled in by hand, or by a motor, and the depth is ascertained by comparing the line of demarcation between the two colors in the glass tube with a wooden scale marked in fathoms.

With these simple but extremely reliable machines soundings can be obtained at greater depths, and with the ship traveling at a far greater speed, than with the hand lead and line, though as already stated, the older method is always held in reserve.—London Answers.

The Return of Common Sense

Experience, scientific management and conditions govern the operation of all railroad trains. No arbitrary rule can ever be substituted for common sense, the sum of these factors.

When the Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Law, which arbitrarily fixes a minimum number of men for all train crews, attempts to take the place of common sense this is the result:

One limited passenger train of seven cars is forced to carry a crew of eleven men, not counting the five in the diner.

The Metropolitan Limited of nine cars has fourteen men in the crew and ten in the diner.

The railroads are yearly forced to waste $2,000,000 in wages for such superfluous men.

But when experience, scientific management and conditions dictate, the railroads do not hesitate to man trains in excess of the number set by the Full Crew Law. Every day 480 freight trains in New Jersey and Pennsylvania are carrying more men than the law requires.

For example, one Lehigh Valley Railroad local freight train of about 15 cars is given a crew of seven men—the law requires only five—because there is work to be done.

Anxious to speed the return of common sense in train manning, the railroads favor giving the Public Service Commissioners full power over the manning of trains without any restriction as to the minimum or maximum number of men. This will do all that the Full Crew Law was intended to do, and will, in addition, broaden the power in the public's hands.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Some far-sighted Perth Amboy sport scribe got the following out of his system during the past week:

"New Brunswick, Plainfield, Elizabeth, Hackensack and other nearby cities will have an opportunity to show if they have any sporting blood when it comes time to reorganize the Atlantic League into two sections. Any of the above mentioned cities are welcome into the southern section of the Atlantic League for Saturday and Sunday games, Billy Pfan announces.

"Plainfield, which is strictly a Saturday town, would be a welcome addition to the league. There is a great local interest in Plainfield and there too the owners of a club could get better guarantees on the road on Sundays than if playing independent ball."

Now whaddayathinkabout that? They're even trying to throw the troubles of the much abused and dilapidated Atlantic League on our shoulders. We've got troubles enough of our own around this village without having to assist in blowing up a "bubble." It's another case of "hit the trail for Plainfield" when they spring illusion on the poor innocent public. No thanks, old scout, we'd rather be on the outside looking in. Next time there's a Federal League franchise floating around this part of the country we'll see that due consideration is accorded the "ducktown" qualifications. We are far-sighted enough to see a colored gent lurking in the wood-pile and we wouldn't be at all surprised if he turned out to be Dave Driscoll with a coat of charcoal over his countenance.

There's going to be one grand smash around this burg ere many more moons roll by. These basketball programs are clinging to life so long that there's bound to be a mix-up with a baseball menu sooner or later. If the baseball bug gets buzzing good and loud it will be a case of good-bye court frolics for another year. Better plan a graceful exit before the fanny gent makes his appearance at the wings.

By the way, we haven't heard from those promoters who started an agitation for a male-female basketball engagement in so long that we've begun to think we'll have to add someone else to the publicity club. We have a slight suspicion that somebody's got a severe case of "cold feet" and it's one safe bet that this individual isn't one of the variety who darns socks and cooks three squares a day.

Sporting Editor:

Query—What has been done in the mater of making a State park out of the land surrounding Washington Rock? K. L. P.

Answer—Nothing definite. A number of suggestions have been offered, but the State has done nothing. The matter of opening a road from the borough of North Plainfield to the rock has been authorized, and the work is now under way.

Sporting Editor:

Query—How should I go about it to bring the attention of the Common Council to poor lighting in the vicinity of my home? N. H.

Answer—If you want another light in that section you had better prepare a petition, with the signatures of the other residents in the immediate vicinity, and present it to the Council.

Sporting Editor:

Query—How many hours a day do local firemen work? Do they have any days off? G. T.

Answer—Members of the Plainfield Fire Department work twenty-four hours a day, and have one holiday in every six.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Do the local lodges having bars have to take out a liquor license in Plainfield? G. O. P.

Answer—The clubs having bar rights must take out a club license. This comes from Elizabeth. Only one club in Plainfield has this privilege, however.

WHEN ZIM CALLED SWEENEY.

Speaking of Heinie Zimmerman, which we were not, recalls an incident at the Cardinal park in St. Louis one day. It was early last season, and Sweeney, who went from Boston to Chicago in the famous Evers mess, was playing second. Sweeney made a brilliant stop of a ground ball, ran to second and then completed a snappy double by throwing to first. Zim was playing shortstop.

"Well, whatchathinkyerdoin'?" said Zimmerman to Sweeney as they came to the bench after the inning, and his voice carried a mean sound. "Why didn't yer let me in on the play?"

"Wasn't necessary. The play was completed all right, Zim," said Sweeney.

"Yes, you're pullin' some of that Boston stuff, ain't you?" replied the mighty Zim.

A little more of "that Boston stuff" on the Cubs team might have served them well at this time. Zim didn't know what "Boston stuff" was when he made that remark.

Y. M. C. A. MEMBERS ENJOY "STUNT NIGHT" IN THE GYM

"Stunt night" activities were indulged in by members of the Y. M. C. A. senior department at the class meeting last night. The program included a variety of events, in which the members take part during their regular classes.

Acrobatic stunts were performed by Erickson Van Norden and Gus Engler; Cedris Ostrom, Bert Newmiller, Benjamin Harris, Gus Engler, Rae Boice and Edickson Van Norden, members of the leaders' corps, constructed a number of human pyramids, and Bill Campbell and David Clarin gave an exhibition of boxing while blindfolded.

Following the exhibition General Secretary Estyes entertained the members with a short address, and later refreshments were served.

700 BIG LEAGUERS NOW AT TRAINING CAMPS

Right now there are more than 700 baseball players scattered through the south and southwest, training for the annual pennant races of the National, American and Federal leagues.

With the gathering of veterans and recruits, the baseball situation will pass through another stage of the progress which marks the annual seasons of the national sport. Magnates, league executives and legal authorities will give way to the player, so far as popular interest is concerned, and the coacher's cries silence the wrangling of rival combinations.

Georgia will quarter six clubs within her borders, while Florida will entertain five. Texas has been named by four clubs as the state wherein to prepare for the 1915 campaign.

NO QUITS FOR WAGNER.

Pittsburgh's Veteran Shortstop Laughs at Possibility of Retiring.

According to H. Wagner those persons who imagine for a moment that a certain German resident of Carnegie, Pa., won't be in the Pirate lineup next season are fit subjects for the brain factory. In an interview recently Wagner said:

"I wish those fellows who are trying to retire me would let up for awhile. They go after me every year, but just as long as I can stand on my feet and Mr. Dreyfuss is willing to give me a chance I'm going to play with the Pittsburgh club."

Honus vows that, despite the fact that he is forty-one years of age, he doesn't feel older than he did ten years ago. "I am not going to become an old man," he said. "Lots of younger fellows than your Uncle Dudley are older than I am, and, what's more, I'm going to stay young all the time.

"As for me not going to play with the Pirates this season, that's a joke. What else could I do in the summer? I can't fish all the time. In the winter I can play basketball and do other stunts, but the summer time was made for baseball."

SPORTS WEAKEN YOUTHS.

Gymnasium Director of University of Michigan Thinks They Do.

Dr. G. A. May, the University of Michigan gymnasium director, who will have charge of Michigan's first "strong man test," recently declared that for a decade the chest, shoulder and arm development of college students has been yearly decreasing.

He bases his assertion on observations extending over many years spent as a university gymnasium instructor. He holds the present craze for intercollegiate athletics is responsible for the decrease in the development.

"Enthusiasm for intercollegiate sports is actually weakening college men," says Dr. May. "They come to college with the sole intention of making a team. Their previous athletic training has been connected with teams.

"To my way of thinking, and I have been engaged in the physical development of college men for many years, every student should first prepare his whole body by constant apparatus and drill work of the right sort during the freshman year and when proportionately muscled give his attention to the games which are used for intercollegiate contests."

Dr. May already has a number of Michigan's huskies trying out their prowess, and one of his candidates has scored within 500 points of the record.

SOUND WALLOPING FOR COLUMBUS CLUB

Hebrew Reinforcements Prove Too Speedy for Local Club Team.

Reinforced by an importation of Jewish basketball talent, the Y. M. H. A. aggregation, supposedly representative of the local association walloped the Columbus Club Five on the latter's court last night to the tune of 71 to 13. The visitors, when not indulging in the rough-house playing, which was conspicuous in the work of both combinations, spent their time in ringing up easy field goals. A majority of the winners' points were mere gifts, the Plainfielders making no apparent effort to combat the offensive work of the rival forwards and center.

Steady shooting brought the winners' tally up to 25 to 6 in the first half, three fouls and a single field goal being the sum and substance of the Columbus Club's score. Cantor tossed eleven field goals for the winning side and Rosenson bagged ten and a quartet of field throws.

A TRAIN WITH BROKEN WHEEL

Ran Eleven Miles Before the Accident Was Noticed By Crew.

Wilkes-Barre, March 18.

How a train of forty-six coal cars ran eleven miles with one-third of one of the wheels on the fifteenth car from the rear end broken off and the fact not noticed by any of the crew, is the story told by F. N. Loughnan, Division Engineer of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. This affords an indication that the excess man, of which this particular train carried one, does not insure the detection of trouble in the train.

Mr. Loughnan reports that this train on Feb. 25 should have been fully inspected by the crew at Tannery. The wheel which had broken and caught in the brake rigging, slid for three and one-half miles before the train reached that point. Pulling out of the siding there, where it stopped, the train ran about seven and one-half miles before the crew discovered the broken wheel.

Fortunately, the wheel got entangled in the brake rigging, something which rarely happens, and so did not leave the track. Had it been otherwise, an accident would have been inevitable and no doubt would have entailed large expense in repairing both equipment and tracks. Investigation developed that the proper lookout was not maintained on this train.

A Lackawanna Railroad trainmaster, who was told of the above case, said: "Various occurrences prove beyond any question that the excess man on the freight train is a detriment. The company must pay his wages, notwithstanding that it gets no results in return. The additional man also adds considerable in the way of dividing responsibilities. He further creates liability by adding one more man to the risks that the company must be responsible for in the case of injuries."

I. Promenade dès Toilettes

One of the most impressive fashion promenades ever held at Gimbel Bros. was witnessed yesterday by a vast number of people who desired to see the very newest and smartest styles for the coming season.

To the strains of soft music, the mannequins promenaded along an Avenue of golden oaks; and the visitors had ample opportunity to view the many wonderful creations on exhibition. First came the suits, tailored and fancy, gabardine and whipcord being used almost exclusively for the former, and plain and checked taffetas for the latter. Several exceedingly smart linen suits were shown by Goupey, in white and pale gray. Bernard, Dousilett and Lanvin all favored the short full skirt which is so smart when worn with the new high boots. The coats, in most cases were inclined to be semi-fitted at the waist line. Most of these suits show a decidedly military cut, the hats worn with these were either very small or quite large.

Drecoll showed a most distinctive creation in navy taffeta with trimmings and drop skirt of black and white stripes; while Beer showed a very subdued bottle green taffeta dress of the early Victorian period, worn with a quaint little straw bonnet.

A very smart military costume shown by Goupey, the jacket of navy taffeta was worn very short and had collar and cuffs of white with gold braid trimmings, while the white accordion plaited skirt was worn quite long. This worn with a small toque made a wonderfully attractive model.

Premet was quite distinctive in his gowns, one of black taffeta, the bodice being of the Victorian period was laced up the back with wide black lacings and the skirt showed a two tier style, the upper one having a row of corded tucks around the bottom making it stand out from the underskirt which hung loosely from the waist. A white organdie was modeled very much on the same lines, and made a very charming summer dress.

An extremely smart motor coat was shown of black and white plaid and black taffeta, the skirt of which showed a very generous flare. Another very beautiful coat was of Dresden velvet, brocaded on chiffon, trimmed with black velvet, and made in the Russian Tunic style.

The gowns for evening wear were shown next and they came as a wonderful surprise to every one for they showed that the European trouble had not hampered the imaginative or creative power of the artists on the other side. Paquin's Desdemona, a gown of black net trimmed with double ruffles of the same material and bands of jet was most effective. Another in sky blue taffeta with black and white lace flouncings was extremely fascinating. Most of the evening gowns showed distinct waist lines and adhered to the full skirt, so popular in the street costumes.

On all sides it was heard that Gimbel Brothers' Promenade Des Toilettes this year far surpassed those of previous years, and this seems the more remarkable considering under what difficulty these beautiful models were obtained.

This promenade will take place every day at 11 A. M. and 2:30 P. M. until March 26th, on the sixth floor of Gimbel Bros. New York.

William Harris, Veteran Theatrical Manager, Has Discovered Long Sought Elixir of Youth

After Busy Life of Seventy-five Years He Looks and Acts Like a Man of Fifty.

[Special From Our Own Correspondent.]

NEW YORK, March 19.—You have heard of old Ponce de Leon and his unsuccessful quest of the fountain of perpetual youth, which led to the discovery and settlement of Florida. That fruitless search started centuries before and has been going on ever since. It has been man's ambition through all the ages of the world. None has discovered it and none ever will, but there is in New York today a man who has come as near it as would seem possible. He is William Harris, the veteran theatrical manager and the father of that other theatrical manager, Henry B. Harris, who went bravely down with Colonel John Jacob Astor, Isidor Straus, Major Archibald Butt, Jacques Futrelle and the other men of the Titanic while the women and children were being taken off in the too-few boats.

Mr. Harris is seventy-five years old and still very much in the harness. To meet him you would have to be supplied with ample proof to believe him more than fifty. His hair is black, his eye is bright, his step is springy and his grasp is strong. His son was forty at the time of his tragic death, and strangers being introduced to them invariably took father and son for brothers, although Henry B. Harris looked no more than his years. The youthfulness of the elder Harris, who has been more than just an ordinarily busy man for three score years and more, has been the puzzle of Broadway since some theatrical paper published the fact some years ago that he was a well known black-face comedian before the outbreak of the Civil War.

"Will you tell me the secret?" I made bold to ask when I was introduced to him in the midst of his average busy morning in his office in the Hudson Theater. I did not for a moment imagine there was one, but regarded him as a freak of nature. His smile revealed a set of teeth of which a youth of twenty might have been proud.

Literally Got Young Blood.

"There is a secret," he said, "but I'll let you in on it. For years back I have been having an elixir of youth infused into my veins. It is no patent medicine, no cure-all, but a solution arrived at after years of scientific research and experimentation by a physician in Trenton, N. J., who is one of the most ethical practitioners I know and who employs it in the treatment of many patients in his neighborhood practice. He is Dr. Eugene B. Witte. He is neither rich nor famous, but he ought to be both, for I consider that his discovery is the most important development in medicine in a couple of centuries. With it he has cured thousands of cases of diseases which had been regarded as incurable, but my own experience relates to its efficacy as a preventive. The theory is that pure blood is a better resistant against the commoner ailments than impure blood, and this solution in intervenal infusion is calculated to place the blood in a condition as nearly normal as possible."

"Will he tell me what he has done with it and how he arrived at it?" I asked.

"I doubt it," laughed Mr. Harris. "Dr. Witte has done so much thinking in his life that he isn't much on talking, and least of all about himself. He is the most modest man I ever met. However, you might try, and if he won't, just inquire around in Trenton among the big business men and the doctors, and—oh, yes, see Pauline Hall. She'll tell you what he did for her daughter."

I asked the first policeman I met in Trenton if he knew Dr. Witte and where he lived.

"Oh, yes," he grinned with enthusiasm, "I should say I do. We turned the city hall into a clinic for him awhile back. He's the man who gave us our big hospital, the McKinley. It's a beaut!"

DR. EUGENE B. WITTE.

WILLIAM HARRIS.

I found the doctor's home at 425 East State street a most modest and unpretentious residence, but no more so than the doctor himself. My first impression was one of hugeness, physically, mentally and in personality. My second was of geniality and benevolence. He is well over six feet and of massive physique. Everything about him is large from the great dome of thought, unburdened by top or front hirsute adornment, and the kind and thoughtful gray eyes looking quite directly at you from beneath shaggy black brows, to the keen, broad-nostrilled nose above the gigantic iron gray mustache.

Related to Russian Diplomat.

"Doctor," I began, "are you related to Count Sergius Witte, the great Russian minister of finance, who was Russia's chief representative at the Russo-Japanese peace conference at Portsmouth?"

"Yes," he said calmly, as though I had asked him if he had eaten breakfast that day, "I am, distantly. Are you a newspaper man?"

I must admit that I was momentarily disconcerted at his cool directness and before I could reply he asked in a very professional manner:

"What's the matter with you?"

"That's all," I replied, "then you're Russian?"

"No," he replied, just as evenly as before. "My people come from Germany and so do those of Sergius. What can I do for you?"

"Tell me about your infusion solution."

"That's a peculiar thing to call it," he smiled, "what do you wish to know about it and why?"

I admitted that I wanted to write about it for my paper. I wanted to know the most startling things it had accomplished.

He Used to Be a Printer.

"That's the trouble with you newspaper men," said the doctor. "You always want to be sensational. You see, I used to be a printer myself on a little weekly paper called 'The Apollo' in a little Jersey town called Belvidere about thirty-five years ago, before I went in for the study of medicine, and I know the failings as well as the merits of the craft. Now, we physicians, on the other hand, are quite the reverse. We do not like to talk of our method of treatment for publication in the secular press nor to speak of the patients we have saved nor"—and he smiled that genial smile again—"of those we have lost. It isn't ethical."

"Oh, then," I interrupted, my news sense getting the better of my courtesy, "you have lost patients. Your elixir of youth is not infallible?"

"There you go!" The smiling eyes grew serious. "How absurd! Elixir of youth! There is no such thing as a cure-all." And the doctor rose gravely to [illegible] as though my journey more than halfway to Philadelphia were to be in vain.

"Please, doctor," I pleaded in desperation, "tell me one thing. How did you happen to discover the solution and the method of administration?"

The doctor stood with his hand on the doorknob.

"I did not happen to discover it. It was the development of years of study, and the method of administering medicine direct to the blood did not originate with me by any means. But I have been using that method for years, long before I arrived at this solution, which was the result of my belief in the superiority of that method. Its remedial effects are surer and quicker, as the medicine thus administered does not have to combat possible toxic conditions in the stomach nor await the gradual communication to the blood. Pure blood safeguards health; impure blood is the certain forerunner of bodily troubles."

Endorsed by Other Doctors.

As the doctor persisted in refusing to talk about himself and his work, I sought out some of the leading men of Trenton, who were all quite differently inclined. My first choice was a health officer of Mercer county, Dr. Enos B. Allen of 144 Perry street.

"Dr. Witte's treatment comes home pretty closely to me," said Dr. Allen. "I have a beautiful and accomplished wife, who through nervous troubles became a mental wreck. She had to be confined in a private sanitarium. I investigated Witte's theory and, after having seen what it did when put into practice in similar cases, took Mrs. Allen to him as a patient. After a few treatments she was as sane and beautiful a woman as you have ever seen and is today in perfect health. She blesses the doctor's name, and so do I. He was his own first patient. He introduced the fluid into his own veins for a condition of eczema arising from improper functioning of the liver. Several treatments cured the condition entirely.

"Observing the harmlessness of the fluid, as well as its efficacy, Dr. Witte employed it in his general practice with rather amazing results. A wide variety of troubles succumbed to its remedial powers, and in some of them, where the results were expected to be certain, though not pronounced, the doctor had the pleasure of observing rapid cures. Convinced that here was an evidently valuable remedial agent from the administering of which there might result almost untold blessing, the doctor decided to prove its worth upon a still more extended scale. Therefore, with the permission of the commissioners of the city of Trenton, a public clinic was instituted by Dr. Witte in the new municipal building from July 1, 1913, until Jan. 10, 1914."

Public Clinic In City Hall.

Dr. Allen suggested another Alfred L. Parker, overseer of the poor, who had charge of the public clinic. Mr. Parker said:

"Dr. Witte and his assistants treated about a thousand cases and by personal observation I can say that in most cases cures were effected, and in all improvements were shown. It was a great success."

William Woodhouse, Jr., of the Woodhouse Chain works, was another enthusiastic endorser. He said:

Secret Is the Infusion of Blood-Adjusting Solution, a Disease Resistant, Into Veins.

"I have an intimate knowledge of the treatment and of Dr. Witte. I had the pleasure of taking to him for treatment a very dear friend of mine, who had been suffering for years from locomotor ataxia, generally supposed to be incurable. His was a very bad case, but after a few treatments he experienced such relief that he contemplated resuming work that had long been abandoned."

W. H. Young, a coal merchant of Trenton, said:

"We Trentonians are very proud of Dr. Witte. He is one of the best pathologists in this country and there are few as well up in materia medica as he is. He has been conspicuously honored by his profession, but he prefers not to accept the proffered positions, but to remain in his practice in this city of his adoption. He was elected to the chair of gynecology in the Cleveland Homeopathic college and was urged to take the chair of ophthalmology in the University of Minneapolis. He was also offered the superintendency of the largest homeopathic hospital in the world, which is in Boston."

Places His Name at the Top.

Others who attested to the results of the doctor's treatment were Everett Townsend, general manager of the Robertson Art Tile company of Trenton; Edward E. Grosscup, state treasurer of New Jersey; Kendrick C. Hill, assistant postmaster of Trenton, and Dr. S. S. Wetmore of Morrisville, Pa. Dr. J. A. Husik of 2559 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., is one of many physicians who have taken up the Witte method under the Trenton idol's tuition and is strong in its praises as demonstrated in his own practice. He had this to say:

"The name of Witte should be enrolled with those of Ehrlich, Wassermann, Carrel and Flexner—and at the top of the list. His theory is simple and clear. It reduces all disease to one single fundamental factor. This is a disturbance of the normal equilibrium between body waste and body repair. He holds that, as in the chemistry of the human body a great variety of poisons are generated, so when that living chemical laboratory is perfect and the vital organs of the body are therefore working in perfect harmony all these poisons are eliminated as quickly as they are produced. To accomplish this end it is necessary that the blood, the vital fluid of the body be maintained as nearly as possible in a condition of perfect purity. Then the person cannot fall ill, as pure blood will kill any extraneous poisons that may enter the body.

Quarter Century of Labor.

"Thus he came to the conclusion that if he could introduce into the human body an artificial agent, which had the power to neutralize toxines, a perfect purity of the blood would follow and all disease would be successfully resisted. To find this agent Dr. Witte has devoted a quarter of a century of his life. After years of experimentation he now has a fluid medium of which ten cubic centimeters are introduced directly into the blood by inserting a glass syringe filled with it into one of the veins.

"During his very successful public clinic in the Trenton city hall, he absolutely cured seven cases of chronic Bright's disease, seven cases of diabetes, 279 cases of rheumatism, many cases of varicose ulcer, one of which was of seventeen years' standing; nine cases of chronic hay fever, which had resisted all known treatments; thirty virulent cases of eczema, 119 cases of neurasthenia and several cases of erysipelas. Twenty thousand doses of the solution were administered during the six months of this clinic and the patients varied in age from four and one half years to ninety-five years.

"It is very valuable before an operation, as one can almost guarantee immunity from suppuration."

BATTLE FRONT IS HUGE CEMETERY

Everywhere "Still Gray Figures" Are Lying.

LEAGUES OF SCARRED SOIL.

Northern France Between the Lines of Contending Armies Is Mass of Graves and Trenches—In All Directions Can Be Seen Villages Swept by Withering Blasts of Battle Flame.

"All the ground near the front line is plowed up with shells and furrowed with the remains of old trenches and graves. The whole place is a vast cemetery, in which our trenches and those of the enemy wind in every direction."

This statement is made by the British official "eyewitness" at the front in a description given out of the recent battles southeast of Ypres and of the country in which the armies are fighting.

"In a sheltered spot," he continues, "there is a little graveyard where some of our own dead have been buried. Their graves have been carefully marked, and a rough square of bricks has been placed around them. In front of the trenches German bodies still lie thick. At one point of the brick fields recently some thirty men tried to rush our lines. At their head was a young German officer who came on gallantly, waving his sword. He almost reached the barbed wire and then fell dead, and he lies there yet, with his sword in his hand and all his thirty men about him.

"Still Gray Figures Lying."

"It is the same all along the front in this quarter. Everywhere still, gray figures can be seen lying, sometimes several rows together and sometimes singly or in twos or threes.

"This description might serve with a few minor alterations for many of the localities along our front where the fighting has centered around some wood, a village or line of trenches. It is as if each had been swept by a withering blast before which every object has crumbled into ruins or become twisted and deformed, and even the very ground itself looks as if it had been shaken by a violent convulsion of nature.

"Counterattacks have been carried out with such resolution that in nearly all cases the original line has been regained. On the night of Feb. 15, as our troops were advancing to drive the enemy out of one of these trenches, his guns suddenly opened a tremendous fire.

Pounding Through the Mud.

"Our men were in the open at some distance from the Germans at the time, and being thus taken at a disadvantage their chance of success looked small. Without a moment's hesitation, however, the attacking line broke into a double quick and, pounding through the mud, burst into the German trench.

"In one trench, which was more or less isolated, forty of our men continued to hold firm until every one of them had been either killed or wounded. Eventually there were only three left who were capable of firing, and these three continued to hold the enemy at bay. In the meantime word was brought to those in the rear that their ammunition was nearly exhausted, and seven men, the strongest available, were selected to bring up as much ammunition as they could carry.

"These latter found the three wounded survivors still standing amid the bodies of their dead and disabled comrades and still firing steadily. The support, slender as it was, came in the nick of time, for at that moment the Germans launched another assault, which, like the previous ones, was beaten off and the position was saved."

GERMS HIDE FIFTY YEARS.

Diphtheria Returns to House After Whitewash Is Removed From Walls.

A fatality which has strangely repeated itself after the passage of a half century in Raymond Miller's Fawn Grove house in Pennsylvania was attributed by health authorities and attending physicians to diphtheria germs which had lurked in the walls during the long interval.

Fifty years ago diphtheria broke out in a family which previously owned the property and had caused several deaths. Shortly before the present outbreak Miller decided to have the walls of the house papered, and a heavy coating of whitewash was scraped away and this refuse thrown in a heap outside. Warm, damp weather followed and supposedly revived germs from the previous epidemic, which had been imprisoned under the whitewash.

Twelve Tons of Milk From One Cow.

Tests made by the dairy department of the Ohio State university establish a new world's record in milk production. The new queen of the dairy world is Murne Cowan, a five-year-old Guernsey cow, which during the past year produced twelve tons of milk. According to the university figures, the cow's milk averaged 5 per cent in butter fat. During the year she produced butter fat enough to make 1,400 pounds of butter. Murne Cowan's home is a farm near Barberton, O.

MAN OF THE HOUR IN TROUBLED TURKEY

Enver Bey, Ambitious Dictator, Whom Sultan Fears.

There are two distinct and widely separated parties in Turkey, the Committee of Union and Progress, or the Young Turk, and the party of the Old Turks. The Young Turk is no longer the liberal party of 1908, while the Old Turk, formerly associated with the party of Hamid, has become liberal in contrast.

The Young Turk party became reactionary with its overthrow of Abdul Hamid. Its action in the interior is characterized by absolutism.

Enver Bey, Talaat, Djemal and Djavid constitute a veritable directory which the sultan has learned to fear.

Enver Bey, however, is the man of the hour and believes himself a man of destiny. He was born in Roumelia thirty-five years ago. Minister of war, he holds in his hands all the military and naval resources of Turkey. Enver is mad with ambition, and affects the genius of Napoleon. He dreams in secret of being able to convert the actual Ottoman directory into a consulate. In the role of first consul he would change the consulate into empire! His position as son-in-law of the sultan will help him in his aspirations.

Enver is the hero of the Tripolitan war. He assassinated Nazim Pasha, the generalissimo of the Turkish army. Nazim Pasha belonged to the Old Turk party. Honest, patriotic and brave, he represented the very best in the Turk. The atrocious assassination of Nazim was doubtless to open the way of empire to his assassin.

These ambitious dictators have spilled the blood of their adversaries and are known to be the authors of many murders, and the people follow them with terrible hatred. The directory may be assassinated at any moment. The friends and relatives of Nazim are many. Enver is the hero of the retaking and occupation of Adrianople, but even this act, which won him popularity among a few, was not enough to condone the murder of Nazim.

"WOOLEN WEEK" IN GERMANY

Collections of Soldier Comforts Made In Various Municipalities.

America has had its bundle day, and in Germany an institution somewhat similar was recently started under the name of "woolen week." The object of this was to collect woolen goods of all descriptions which might add to the comfort of the soldiers, especially blankets and knit goods.

question has been to get these products to the German armies. For this reason "woolen week" was inaugurated by the Red Cross society, depots were established in various municipalities and the goods were collected largely by school children and brought to the neutral depots, whence they were forwarded to the soldiers. In Berlin alone 500,000 packages varying from 5 to 500 pounds in weight were brought to the depots and forwarded to the armies.

HOW DIPLOMACY BROUGHT BACK PROSPERITY TO ONE INDUSTRY

THEY KEEP THEIR JOBS

Autoists may thank Providence that the European war is not to cause a rubber famine with consequent soaring prices for tires.

But it would be more to the point for them to thank B. G. Work, plain citizen of Akron, who went to England early in January, hobnobbed with the nobility in the British Foreign and Admiralty offices, and in a few hours did what American State Department diplomacy had been trying to do for weeks—paved the way for the release of crude rubber shipments to American ports.

Modestly Mr. Work disclaims the full credit for his feat. He protests that the work of our State Department had at last been successful and that on the day of his arrival in London it had been decided to raise the embargo, although the details were to be perfected later.

The situation for Akron and the rubber business in late December was rather desperate. Great Britain, realizing the vast importance of rubber in warfare—for transport tires, surgical supplies, Zeppelin fabric, as well as for footwear, blankets and clothing for the men in the trenches—had decided to prohibit the exportation of rubber from British colonies, so a supply of the precious stuff was on its way to Germany.

B. G. WORK

At one stroke half the world's crude rubber supply was [illegible] and Akron [illegible] negotiation, apparently could do nothing. Then the Rubber Club of America, which includes the leading rubber manufacturers and importers, decided to act on its own initiative. It looked about and selected Mr. Work to appeal in person to the lords of the British government.

How this Akron citizen took his blunt business methods into the great government offices of England, coupled his ability with the highest skilled diplomacy on earth, and [illegible] out a complete solution of the long problem, is too long to [illegible]. The upshot of it is that an American manufacturer may now export British rubber by giving [illegible] that he will not export it to Germany. The British consul-general at New York has appointed a special agent to aid small importers [illegible].

"I do not believe we need fear any further interruption in the rubber supply," says Work. "That supply will be taken by American manufacturers at the rate of $250,000 [illegible] of it a day."

The signing of this agreement on the American rubber market was instantaneous. Brazilian rubber dropped [illegible] cents a pound with a thud, and did [illegible] the rubber characteristic of [illegible]. Akron's thousands of [illegible] will go back to work, and [illegible] regard B. G. Work as the city's chief benefactor.

THE SECRET SERVICE AGENTS IN "THE WHITE FEATHER."

In William A. Brady's sensationally successful production at the Comedy Theater, New York, there is a warfare of wits between the secret service agents of England and Germany concerning certain momentous events in the European war. The chief of the Germans is a man, and opposed to him is a keen witted woman, instrument of the British war office. In this picture they have reached a crisis.

EVANGELISM TO BE THE KEYNOTE

Methodists to Hold 58th Session at Newark Beginning March 24.

MANY CHANGES LIKELY

Social Service and Pensions to Be Debated—"Billy" Sunday May Preach on March 29—Bishop Henderson to Preside.

Evangelism will be the keynote of the fifty-eighth annual session of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which convenes in St. Luke's church, Newark, Wednesday, March 24. The conference will be directed by Bishop Theodore S. Henderson, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who will officiate in place of Bishop Luther B. Wilson, thus maintaining the theory of the itinerancy of the episcopacy. Dr. Wilson, who presided at the 1914 session, will guide the deliberations of the conference assembly again next year.

In addition to the emphasis to be placed upon evangelistic work, a leading part in the consideration of which subject will be taken by Bishop Henderson, special interest in the conference has to do with the possible program for accentuating social service.

A feature of the conference program is the anticipated presence of Rev. William A. Sunday, the baseball player evangelist. Although it has not been definitely settled that he will visit Newark, negotiations to this end are being carried on by Rev. James H. MacDonald, pastor of St. Luke's.

As is usual with the approach of a conference session the question of pastoral appointments is the objective of much speculation on the part of the clergy and their friends. It is estimated that approximately one-quarter of the 20 ministers at work within the conference will be transferred during the session now at hand.

Of greatest importance among the prospective appointments is that of a successor to Rev. Dr. George W. Smith, formerly of this city, as superintendent or presiding elder of the Jersey City district. Dr. Smith has served the maximum term of six years and is not eligible to succeed himself in that office.

It is not beyond the range of possibilities, according to report, that Mr. MacDonald will be named for this post. It is known that he is being seriously considered. Others mentioned in this connection are Rev. Dr. John R. Wright, now pastor of Simpson church, Jersey City—if appointed he will return to a post which he occupied during the years from 1898 to 1903; Rev. Dr. Abel C. McCrea, a former pastor of the First M. E. church, but now pastor of Emory church, Jersey City, and Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Spencer, pastor of Ridgewood church.

Vailsburgh church has, it is understood, unanimously called Rev. C. S. Kemble, formerly of this city, but now of Trinity church, Rahway, to succeed Mr. Dickison.

Although it is expected that Rev. H. F. Randolph, formerly of Grace M. E. church, the borough, but now pastor of Montclair church, will be transferred to the New Jersey conference to become pastor of a Trenton church, this is by no means certain. The uncertainty hinges on the question of the transfer of a man out of the southern conference to the Erie conference, in order to permit the transfer of Rev. Thomas M. Thoburn, of Erie, to Newark, as successor of Mr. Randolph.

Among the other probable changes in pastorates outside of Newark is that of Rev. F. S. Simmons from Chatham church to Port Jervis. He will possibly be succeeded by Rev. A. G. Shatzman, of Linden. Rev. C. J. Hoyt will, it is understood, be replaced as pastor of Verona church by C. C. Cain, of Grace church this city.

The agitation for more adequate pensions for retired clergy and the widows and orphans of clergymen finds its origin in the local district, although men from the other districts have indicated their approval of the plan. The proposition to be submitted to conference is to increase the benefits in the case of retired ministers to ten dollars per year for each year of service in the conference. In event of this plan being adopted the benefits for the widows will be fixed at the rate of five dollars per pear for each year such widow served the conference.

At the presence time the ministerial pensions are paid at the rate of $7 per year for each year of service, the widows' pension being one-half that rate.

Those furthering this proposition recognize the impracticability of increasing these benefits in one year, and will suggest that the increase be on a progressive basis. That is, during 1915 the rate be $8 per year for each year of service for ministerial pension, with half that sum for the widows; the year following the rate to be $9 and $4.50 per year, with the maximum how desired in effect in 1917. It is ultimately hoped that the pensions will be definitely fixed

BROADWAY AND THIRTY-THIRD STREET

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"Jack's Romance," which will be presented at Plainfield Theatre next Saturday, March 20, is one of the best works that has ever been turned out by that veteran playwright, Augustus Pitou, who furnished Scanlan and Olcott with most of their great successes. The play has for its theme a story of love and intrigue that is filled with merry wit, fun and life. The skillful dramatist is seen in the many cleverly worked out situations and well drawn character work, and the atmosphere is said to be fascinating. Mr. O'Hara introduces a number of very catchy songs in the piece, all of which have the true Irish lilt and are introduced naturally, as they are part and parcel of the story. The magnificent tenor voice of Mr. O'Hara is too well known to theatregoers to make necessary any allusions to his singing. He is one of America's foremost ballad artists, and his rendition of "Killarney" and other songs is nothing less than a musical event. There is a fine supporting company, in which are many well-known players, and Manager Pitou has mounted the piece with rich costumes and handsome scenic effects in his usual lavish manner.

In Eugene Walter's dramatization of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," the widely read novel by John Fox Jr., the author of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," you see presented on the stage the typical mountain community of the Virginia hills. The primitiveness of the people is shown in all its picturesqueness and charm, and you will love June and her kinsfolk far more on the stage than you did when you wandered with her through the pages of Mr Fox's delightful story. In her characterization of June, Miss Dixie Compton emphasizes the wild mountain girl's longing for the knowledge of the world outside of her mountain environment, and which is, after all, the strongest motive of mankind. This dramatic success comes to the Plainfield Theatre, matinee and night Tuesday, March 23.

Washington Irving's immortal story of "Rip Van Winkle," produced in picture form from the original script of Joseph Jefferson, is the offering at the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight, and will be repeated tomorrow at the matinee only. Thomas Jefferson, son of the famous actor, who protrayed the role of the quaint old fellow who slept for twenty years, is seen in the part his father created on the legitimate stage. An excellent cast aids him in the five parts necessary to complete the tale. The Plainfield Theatre is making a specialty of presenting the picturization of America's best known plays, and next Monday will offer another almost equally as famous as "Rip Van Winkle." This will be "Shore Acres," the greatest of all New England comedy dramas, and one that will live forever. James A. Herne wrote the story, and Plainfielders well remember his acting in i when he appeared in this city years ago. Set aside either Monday afternoon or Monday night to see the familiar characters again, and it will be like a day in the forgotten past brought back to the present date.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Robert Warwick in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," founded on the Liebler production of that name, which was offered to the public five years ago, will be shown in four parts at Proctor's Theatre next Monday and Tuesday. Paul Armstrong wrote the play, appropriating the idea from a story by O. Henry entitled "A Retrieved Reputation."

The plot of this photodrama is plausible; it is so plausible that when the thrills come, the intensity of this effect upon you is not diminished by the fact of your having felt that they must come. You are placed in suspense from the very moment that the play starts. You are conscious that some awful things have got to happen before the film ends. You sit and wait and watch in one of those silences that "can be felt," the story is so strong and holding.

Lee Randall, who shielded a young lady from attack in a parlor railroad car, was identified by her three years afterwards in Sing Sing, where he averred he was wrongly detained. She was Rose Fay, daughter of Lieutenant Governor of the State, and the girl gratefully secured Lee Randall's (alias Jimmy Valentine's) release. Also she got a job in her father's bank; and he made good, keeping the detectives, who were after him at bay by the clever plea of an alibi, whenever it was called for.

Fate took a hand at a moment when Lee Randall's prospects were of the brightest and it seemed for a time that his reputation was never likely to be finally retrieved. In this emergency, Lee was called upon to demonstrate his marvellous skill as a safe opener simply by the power of his finger tips, and Lee did the job and released the child, only to fall into the arms of a waiting detective who thus got his man, literally, red-handed. However, said detective was very soft-hearted, and perceiving that Rose needed Lee more than the State of Massachusetts, allowed the thoroughly repentant Lee Randall to go free.

New Special Collection of Smart Hats at $6

For variety and attractiveness we are sure these new hats excel any we have shown this season—and our previous efforts have met an enthusiastic response. So "different" is every hat that there is a becoming one here for every woman.

A new style-note is conspicious. It is a clever combination of black-and-white. It was originated in our own workrooms.

Black straw is combined with all white or black-and-white wings; some smartly trimmed with broad-striped black-and-white ribbon; still others with black-and-white flowers.

Shapes of all kinds—sailors, large and small, and many close-fitting hats. Some we noted at random:

A large sailor of Milan hemp faced with satin and trimmed with ostrich band, flowers and velvet.

Lisere straw hat faced with satin and trimmed with black-and-white wings.

Rough straw sailor trimmed with white wings and velvet ribbon; another with large Georgette bow.

All ready—Saturday—$6.

CONTESTANTS HAVE EQUAL OPPORTUNITY ON SPECIAL PRIZES

Vote Standing in Press' Trans-Continental Contest Has No Effect on Standing in Sixteen Days Race for Extra Awards.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.

Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

The diamond ring was purchased from and is on display at the jewelry store of Charles E. Vail, 236 Park avenue, and the wrist watch from the Reliable Jewelry Shop, 254 West Front street.

Mr. Vail is willing to repurchase the diamond ring offered as first prize from the winner any time within one year for $90 cash.

The vote standing which appeared in the Press yesterday has no effect on the vote standings of the candidates for the extra prizes; therefore, anyone who may care to enter the contest since the extra prizes were offered has the same chance to win the diamond ring or one of the other two prizes.

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

Each day that passes brings the final stretch in the Press Trans-continental and Panama-Pacific International Exposition Tour contest nearer to view. Two days have passed of the special prize period, and the candidates must hustle to gather in all those "promises." That is just a little hint to be taken by those who really want to win one of these special prizes.

There are, undoubtedly, some candidates who have a good subscription reserve vote. As is understood, if any ballots on this reserve vote were issued before March 17 at midnight, they will not apply on the special prizes. Those who are holding back money on subscriptions, however, may turn it in any time now and have it count for both the special prize, and also the standing, which will count toward the winning of the district trips.

One candidate wrote the Contest Manager yesterday asking if it was true that the date of the closing of the contest had been changed from April 17 to April 3. There has been no change as to the closing date of the contest, nor will there be. Last Wednesday the Press made a special offer of special prizes, consisting of a list of prizes as shown at the head of this article, and the closing of the period for the winning of these prizes will be at 10 p. m., April 3. Another thing that the Contest Department wishes to make clear is that the winners of the extra prizes will be also eligible to win the district prizes at the end of the contest. In regard to the offer of 10 per cent. and 5 per cent., which has been announced to be paid as a commission to those who do not win the district trip prizes and remain active until the end of the contest, the condition of the 5 and 10 per cent. offer will not be affected one way or the other by the offer of these special prizes. The condition of the 5 per cent. and 10 per cent. commission offer will stand the same as though the special prizes had not been announced at all.

Not Limited to Districts.

The special prizes will be awarded as follows:

The first prize, the diamond ring, will be given to the candidate, regardless of district limitations, who turns in the greatest number of votes on paid-in-advance subscriptions between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., Saturday, April 3.

The second and third prizes will be awarded respectively to the candidates who have the second and third largest number of votes issued, as in the cast of the winner of the first prize.

The above are all extra prizes and will in no way interfere with the winning of the delightful tours across the continent; for, of course, all votes turned in for these special prizes will count also for the principal prizes—the tours.

The winners of the special prizes will be announced and the prizes will be awarded as soon after April 3 as the work of verification is complete.

This is your opportunity to win a $100 diamond ring or one of the other prizes, and at the same time boost your campaign for the principal prizes—the tours across the continent.

All Have Equal Chance.

These extra prizes afford an equal start and chance with all of those not in the contest who are desirous of entering, but feel that it is now too late, and those who are at present entered, and who may feel discouraged, feeling they cannot overcome the vote standing of those ahead of them in their district.

Yesterday's vote standing of all the candidates now entered will not be considered in the winning of these extra prizes, nor will the votes issued on subscriptions prior to midnight, March 17, that have already been turned in and not voted.

Remember that the vote coupons clipped from the Press do not count toward winning these extra prizes, but count the same as heretofore for the principal prizes.

All ballots issued on subscriptions and voted for the extra prizes must date from March 18. The close of the special prize period will come at 10 p. m., April 3.

EVANGELISM KEYNOTE

for the clergy at $15 per month and for the widows at $7.50 per month.

At the present time the pension fund endowment approximates $150,000. In order to put into effect the maximum now desired, this would have to be increased to $400,000, together with the continuance of the appropriations now levied upon the four districts. If the progressive plan of increase is adopted it will mean that the endowment must be raised immediately to $200,000.

Church extension is to receive considerable attention during the conference session. In this connection an effort will be made by Rev. Dr. George G. Vogel, superintendent of the Newark district, to bring about the organization of what is to be termed "The 500 Circle."

One of the features of the annual reports of the four district superintendents will be that portion relative to conversions secured during the past church year. The returns already in show that the number of accessions secured in 1913-1914 by confession of faith have already been greatly excelled. In the Newark district alone, only one-half of the churches reporting, the accessions total almost 700, as against 794 for all the churches of the district last year. This record will be shown by each of the contemporary districts, it is said.

Conference will open Wednesday morning, March 24, at 10 o'clock with the sacrament of the Lord's supper. Organization will be completed at 11 o'clock, to be followed by a memorial session will close with the presentation of the work of the Freedman's Aid Society by Corresponding Secretary Rev. Dr. P. J. Maveety.

The feature of the afternoon session, which will begin promptly at 2 o'clock, will be a "Conversation on the Work of God," in which Bishop Henderson will lead. The anniversary of the Woman's Home Missionary Society will take place at 3 o'clock, with an address by the bishop. In the evening a reception in honor of the bishop will be given by the congregation of St. Luke's church. On this occasion President James R. Rutan of the official board will preside.

On the succeeding days of conference the morning sessions will begin at 9 o'clock, followed at 10.30 o'clock by devotional services led by Bishop Henderson. Each of these sessions as well as those in the afternoon, will be marked by the addresses of special preachers, who will present the needs of the various benevolences and departments of the church.

Thursday morning Rev. Dr. Thomas Nicholson will tell of the work of the board of education; subsequently Rev. Dr. George C. Wilding will report on the centenary fund and the Preachers' Aid Society. The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society is scheduled for 2 o'clock of that day, with Mrs. J. H. Knowles presiding. The principal address will be by Rev. Dr. George Hebar Jones, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, on "The World Call to the Women of the Church." In the evening at 7:45 o'clock the anniversary of the centenary fund will be celebrated, when Rev. Dr. William H. Morgan will speak on "The Preacher and His Task."

The annual meeting of the Laymen's Association is scheduled for Friday, with sessions at 10 o'clock in the morning, 2 o'clock in the afternoon and 7.45 o'clock in the evening. Among those who will address this body are former Governor Edward C. Stokes, Rev. Dr. Wilding and Benjamin E. Edsall in the morning, who will speak on "The Centenary Fund;" John W. Galley, of the Gideon Society, J. E. Crofts, of the Newark Conference, Rev. Rufus K. Boyd, of Jersey City, and Rev. James K. Shields of the Anti-Saloon League, who will speak during the afternoon on "Where Can the Laymen Take Hold?" at the afternoon session, and Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, of Brooklyn, on "John Wesley and the Eighteenth Century."

Following the annual banquet at 6 o'clock the laymen will resume their deliberations and listen to reports of committees and an address on "Methodists on the Firing Line," by Bishop Henderson.

Only one session of conference will be held Friday, that in the morning, when Rev. Dr. Charles M. Boswell will speak on "Home Missions and Church Extension."

Bishop Henderson will preach his conference sermon at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Preceding this service a love feast will be conducted at 9:30 o'clock by Rev. Dr. Charles R. Barnes, formerly of this city. At 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon the ordination of deacons and elders will be administered by the bishop, who will preside in the evening at an evangelistic service, when Rev. Dr. Otho F. Bartholow, of First church, Mt. Vernon, N. Y., will preach.

If the program is carried through without change the conference will close with the announcement of appointments Monday night.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then get fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.—Adv.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! How good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffing, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—Adv.

STOPS HEADACHE, PAIN, NEURALGIA

Don't suffer! Get a dime pack-of Dr. James' Headache Powders.

You can clear your head and relieve a dull, splitting or violent throbbing headache in a moment with a Dr. James' Headache Powder. This old-time headache relief acts almost magically. Send some one to the drug store now for a dime package and a few moments after you take a powder you will wonder what became of the headache, neuralgia and pain. Stop suffering—it's needless. Be sure you get what you ask for.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

CHAPTER II.

THE three river thieves in the exquisitely furnished houseboat worked with deft rapidity. It was the woman's swift, intuitive part to discover hiding places; the lean Jake's to discriminate in values; Big Ben's, with nippers and hammer and screwdriver, to rip off brasswork, to open drawers, to rend and tear and splinter if need be. Within an incredibly short space of time they had the skiff piled high with the richest and the best which the houseboat had contained; then they spread the tarpaulin over their plunder and disposed their bunches of celery so that the green leaves protruded in a fringe from under the edge of the tarpaulin; then the heavily laden skiff, with its four passengers and its loot, wormed its way clumsily from amid the barges, looking like an innocent farmer boat.

The sun, now a golden ball in the eastern mist, looked down upon a harborage busy with the pursuers of the little runaway bride. Henri and Marie were swishing swiftly; Ned and Bobbie and Iris were leaving the dock in Bobbie's speedy little cruiser; Honoria Blye and the well known and justly famous private detective, Bill Wolf, were putting out into the river in the Eagle Eye Detective agency's steam yawl, its stovepipe stack rolling black smoke and cinders and hot sparks back over the already blackening passengers; Gilbert Blye and the heavy lidded Edwards were just leaving the Hilarity in the keen little racer; Cunningham had been slow and below decks when they put off, but he follow now in the cutter. The racer and the cutter speeded straight for the point around which June had disappeared. Tommy Thomas waved a scarf after them and shouted absurd instructions to them, but Mrs. Villard stood quietly by the rail, her eyes fixed somberly on that distant point.

"Well, Babe, you sliced me, all right."

Slowly June raised from her crouching position. The cling of the small boat which she had sighted seemed to be fainter rather than more distinct. It was fading into the distance when she looked, and from its red stern she knew that it was not one of the Hilarity's boats. Once more she breathed a sigh of relief, but even as she did so she heard a familiar sound—the siren whistle of the Hilarity's cutter! And it was near!

Frantically now she scanned the shore. There was another inlet just ahead of her, and in desperation she steered into it. It was a narrow but distinct channel, winding about amid a tangle of shrubbery and marsh grass and stunted trees, with here and there a larger tree rising from a mound of solid earth. There were high banks presently and then a tiny island, in the center of which was a decrepit hut. June was about to step ashore when she heard the low purring of a motor. The cutter! From the sudden shut-iness of the sound it had entered the inlet. In terror June jumped back into the boat. The hut seemed deserted. There was no smoke rising from the chimney and no one to protect her if she were found there alone. She was away in a flash, circling the island. From the other side she saw that the channel led away into the marshes, probably to another inlet, and she had started to dart down this lonely waterway when suddenly she spied a rope trailing out into the water from under some bushes matted with marsh weeds. The whir of the motor was rapidly advancing. She could scarcely hope to escape unseen. Her wits sharpened by her peril, she steered with swift decision toward the overhanging bushes. They parted as her prow ran into them, and, bending low, she found herself shot into entire concealment. The whir of the approaching motor grew loud. Quick as a flash June reached for the telltale rope which had betrayed this hiding place and drew it under cover of the matted bushes.

Louder and louder grew the whir. It was just upon her. With her heart beating so that her ears were full of the sound of it, June peered out through her leafy screen. Orin Cunningham! He circled the island in his swift little cutter, his keen eyes searching everywhere. He passed within ten feet of her. She held her breath lest he might hear it, and once as his eyes turned full in her direction and she thought he had certainly detected her hiding place she almost screamed.

He passed on, however, and, running his light little boat ashore, stepped out and went up to the hut, the only possible place of concealment on the island. June had a swift debate with herself. Should she leave her concealment and, running her motor at its quietest speed, slip away down that other channel while Cunningham was in the hut? That debate was settled in an instant, for up the other channel slipped the swift little speed boat carrying Edwards and Gilbert Blye!

Blye's dark, handsome face was without its usual suave smile, and it wore a look of concern as, making a quick landing, he hurried up to the hut, followed by the plodding Edwards.

It seemed ages before they came away, and they had apparently made a thorough search, for they even stooped down as they came outside to peer under the stilted foundation amid the rubbish which had accumulated there. When they had gone away June remained for a long time in her hiding place, but finally she stepped from her boat and crept from her concealment. Thirst, inspired by the fever of her excitement, had driven her forth in search of drinkable water.

There was a cask of water in the hut, brackish and stale, but it was water, and she drank of it from a rusty old tin cup which hung to it. She had just set down the cup when her quick ears detected a low, steady hum. She stepped to the door, ready to make a dash for her boat, but as she set her foot upon the threshold she saw the dark gray prow of a skiff protruding its point around the bend of the lower channel! She darted back out of sight and, looking through a crack in the board wall, saw in the skiff three rough looking men and a rough looking woman. The skiff rode low in the water, and from under its tarpaulin flaunted a fringe of celery leaves.

June laughed in relief. It was good to see human beings who were not in pursuit of her, who would befriend and protect her, and she had almost run down to meet them when suddenly loud, angry voices came from the frail little craft. There was a bitter quarrel, in which the woman took a shrill part, and as the boat landed the woman jumped out and stooped swiftly. The man with the scraggly mustache and the scattered tufts of beard on his face jumped ashore, cursing. The woman raised up swiftly and, with a shriek like a cat, jumped for the man with a long knife glittering in her hand. The knife flashed down, and the man staggered back. The gleaming blade was raised again, but before it could descend the huge, rawboned man, who had jumped from the boat, caught the woman's arm.

June saw no more. She ran wildly around the little hut, looking vainly for some place of concealment. A rusty stove, a rickety table, some rule benches, two straw pallets—that was all. There was no other room, not even a cupboard. In the ceiling June's frantically roving eyes found a trapdoor, one of its boards loose. On the wooden wall beneath it was a series of cross sticks, and without hesitation June ran up this rude ladder, shoved the trapdoor aside and scrambled into the attic.

There were voices below. The quarrel, whatever it had been about, had evidently been settled, for the woman was laughing, and so was the big, rawboned man. June peered down through a crack in the ceiling boards. These two and the lean fellow with the hook nose were loaded with all they could carry. The big man with the scar on his chin dropped his heavy bags on the floor with a clatter, and the brass stopcock of a washbasin rolled out of one of them. The woman carried silks and fine linens in her bundles, and the lean little fellow was loaded with silverware. As they deposited their burdens on the floor the other man came in and sat heavily on a bench.

"Well, Babe, you sliced me, all right," he grinned, and, throwing off his coat, he loosened his shirt at the neck and bared his left shoulder. There was an ugly wound near his armpit, and it was bleeding profusely.

June clapped her hand over her mouth to prevent a hysterical outcry, while her senses swam. She was seeing phases of life that she little dreamed existed.

The woman made a laughing reply and after the people exhibited different articles of jewelry, clothing, etc., they started cooking a meal.

The men were at the table an incredibly short time. They gulped their food, and then, tired and sleepy, they lay down on straw pallets for a few minutes of honest rest, while the cold and starved little runaway bride in the attic looked down with ravenous eyes on what they had left. The odor of the hot coffee made her feel faint. Only terror kept her on the alert.

The important thing to June in her predicament was to devise some mode of escape, but the opportunity to do so was terrifyingly remote.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

Library Notes.

Furnished by the Directors of Plainfield Public Library and Reading Room.

Immediately following the outbreak of the war in Europe, a host of books bearing more or less directly on that subject were published, and their numbers multiplied with a rapidity probably without a parallel in literature. Every conceivable phase of the war,—the historical, the controversial, the descriptive and the technical—received attention, and not only those who usually made a livelihood by their pens, but many others not so well qualified to write, were stimulated to authorship. Many of the books thus produced proved to be of genuine value and interest, but scores of others failed to interest or to pay for their publication, and it is this failure that has now brought about somewhat of a reaction and has turned the attention of authors and publishers to more usual fields.

Of course with this flood of war books, the number of new works of fiction was necessarily curtailed, but the immediate vogue of books on the war appears to have passed, or the public has become slightly weary of them, at least on this side of the water, and many new works of fiction are now beginning to appear. It is interesting to note also that these usually take for their themes the ordinary phases of life and ignore those subjects which have dominated public interest during the last six months.

Among the works of fiction recently added to the library are the following:

"Gods Are Athirst," A. France.
"Sight to the Blind," L. Furman.
"Guinea Gold," B. Grimshaw.
"Sorcerer's Stone," B. Grimshaw.
"Old Valentines," M. Havens.
"Two Magics," H. James.
"Legend of the Sacred Image," S. Lagerlof.
"Peacock Feather," L. Moore.
"Bellamy," E. Mordaunt.
"New Men for Old," H. V. O'Brien
"Ezekiel Expands," L. Platt.
"Elementary Jane," R. Pryce.
"House of the Dawn," M. E. Ryan.
"Mercy of the Lord," F. A. W Steel.
"They Who Question," F. A. W Steel.
"Looking After Sandy," M. Turnbull.
"And Then Came Jean," R. A. Wason.
"Strength of the Hills," F. Wilkinson.

An improvement recently added to the library is the installation of a semi-indirect system of lighting the auditorium in the basement. The glare of the unprotected lights is thus avoided and those who use the auditorium will find the change very grateful.

Arranged upon one of the tables in the reading room are the books constituting Dr. Elliott's five-foot shelf. These can be taken out upon cards as well as inspected.

In an old history of New Jersey published in 1834, it is stated that Plainfield contained a "Ladies' Library" and an "Apprentices' Library." Is there any one who knows anything about these libraries or what became of them?

He—I see they have unearthed a Greek library whose cornerstone was laid 2,000 B. C.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Oh, Mrs. Parsons, how glad I am to see you! And little Eleanore; how is she today?" Nell was stooping to untie the child's bonnet.

"The day was so lovely I couldn't resist the temptation to run away and leave my work a while before Robert came home from kindergarten. Then I wanted to talk to you about the theater party."

"I did not know we even boasted of a theater," said Nell, laughing.

"Oh, we don't," rejoined Mrs. Parsons, "but a special from Leavenworth goes through here to Kansas City on the fifteenth and if we can get a little crowd together the train will stop here."

"That would be a great lark," Nell was beginning to be excited. "I haven't seen a play in——"

"Oh, you'll get used to our quiet ways in time. A chance like this comes not more than once or twice a season. We went up to hear Melba before Christmas. I shouldn't have thought Roger would have forgotten to mention so important a thing as our semi-annual outing, but—you may have noticed that he is so devoted to business that he even leaves me to do most of the talking. Before the children came I used to tell him the silence was oppressive, but he only laughed and said he had not noticed any silence."

"How cruel," laughed Nell. "Since you are spokesman, tell me about the theater party. What shall I wear?"

"Oh, we get ourselves up with a good deal of glitter. You see we have only one or two occasions a season to wear our soft raiment. I shall wear an evening gown." Then as the child caught her attention: "No, Eleanore, dear, don't touch that."

"Let her go out and sit in our porch swing," said Nell, reaching for the little girl's bonnet and coat. "Dick put that up last night. Did you notice how fine our infant lawn looks?" she added when they reached the porch. "The grass is coming up through the mulching. This outdoor work is so good for Dick, shut indoors all day as he is.

"About how many evening excusions?" asked Nell, returning to the subject of discussion.

"Usually about eight or ten. We may get a dozen this time, as it's on Saturday night, and we can sleep the next day. The train doesn't get in here till nearly three in the morning and that makes it hard for the business men to go to work the next day."

"Who is going? Anyone that I have met?"

"You may know most of them. Dr. Ellson and his wife were out at our house last evening, and I don't think you have met them. The doctor is a great favorite, but his wife is so jealous of him that I feel like looking over my shoulder to see if her green eyes are upon me before I dare speak to him. Anything but a jealous woman." Mrs. Parsons made a gesture with her hands as if she were casting such a woman from her.

"So we can count on two members for our party here?" Mrs. Parsons rose to go.

"Oh, certainly, if Dick is willing. We couldn't lose such an opportunity." Nell followed her to the gate.

"I wonder if I am developing into a Mrs. Ellson," she mused meditatively as she returned to the house. "Nell Reeves Morton, you stop your silliness," and she gave herself a little shake.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Gold lace is very much in demand and makes a very pretty trimming, but is very expensive. Any kind of lace, no matter how cheap, will make the nicest gold lace. Simply buy a bottle of gold paint for 10 cents at the 5 and 10-cent store. Stretch the lace very smoothly over a newspaper, then apply paint the same as you would to any article, only brushing it thoroughly.

Raw Oysters are improved by sections of lemon or sprigs of mint among the cracked ice.

Nut Meats that are hard and dry can be made plump by soaking them over night in milk and water.

Dates and Peanuts or almonds run through food chopper make a delicious and wholesome spread for bread.

QUICK EGGLESS BREADS

Bachelor's Buttons—To a pint of flour add two level teaspoons baking powder and half teaspoon salt; mix; rub in two tablespoons shortening; add two tablespoons sugar and milk to just moisten. Roll into small pieces, brush with milk, dust with sugar, bake in quick oven twenty-five minutes.

Quick Cinnamon Buns—Sift a quart of flour into four teaspoons baking powder and half teaspoon salt; rub in two tablespoons shortening; add milk to just moisten. Mix, roll into a sheet, spread with butter, dust thickly with sugar, lightly with cinnamon, and sprinkle with dry, clean currants. Make into a roll, cut into two-inch lengths, stand these (cut side up) in greased pan, bake in moderate oven forty minutes. Serve warm.

When potatoes are cooked sufficiently, add half pint or more of milk (for a family of six there should be about two pints of liquid). Thicken with three crackers pulverized. Fry three or four thin slices of pork diced, turn over six or eight split crackers placed in a tureen, after which pour in the contents of the soup kettle. Serve at once.

Macaroni With Bread—Cook one 5-cent package macaroni about twenty-five minutes. Water should be boiling before putting in macaroni. When done, drain and pour cold water over to blanch. Brown two cups bread crumbs in four tablespoons butter. Add macaroni, season with salt and pepper to taste.

Apple and Cranberry Jelly—Pick over one cup cranberries; slice three medium-sized apples, put in one-fourth cup hot water. Stew until soft, add one-half cup sugar.

Animal Jingles FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CROSBY GALE

The Adventures of Minnie Monkey.

When Minnie Monkey found herself within the circus tent,
She said: "I know I'll never get away.
I wish that all the children in the whole wide world could know
How very bad it feels to disobey."

The Circus Man said: "Come along, I'm going to teach you tricks.
The first thing you will learn to walk a rope;
And next I'll teach you how to dance and how to beat a drum.
You won't be long in learning them, I hope."

So Minnie practiced very hard, and soon the Circus Man
Said: "That is all you'll need to do today.
Until it's time for you to eat I think that you may go
In with the other animals and play."

He took her to a smaller tent, and though she was so scared,
Miss Minnie Monkey had to stop and laugh.
She saw all sorts of animals she'd never seen before,
The striped zebra and the tall giraffe.

And as she stood and looked at them she heard somebody say:
"Good gracious, child, what are you doing here?
I'll bet a pint of peanuts you have run away from home;
You must get back there instantly, my dear."

And Minnie nearly died of joy to hear a voice she knew.
You see it was her Uncle Chimpanzee.
"I'm very sure your mother doesn't know that you are here.
I'll take you back at once to her," said he.

The animals all gathered round and said: "Oh, yes, but how?
The Circus Man will never let you go."
The plan that Minnie's uncle had for getting her away
I'll tell tomorrow if you care to know.

NEWARK

At Hahne's

—"Good morning, Mrs. Howland. Isn't this weather lovely? Makes one think of Spring, doesn't it? I'll wager you're on the same errand as I am—clothes for the children! How I used to dread this time of the year, when I had to sit in the house and sew, and I was simply crazy to be out of doors. And to what purpose? Certainly not economy, for I find that I can get both Edith's and Frank's little suits here at Hahne's for only a little more than the material alone used to cost me, not to speak of the time and nervous energy saved. Then, their children's styles are just adorable, don't you think?

—"I hear that your baby is doing splendidly since you have started feeding him with Imperial Granum. What a blessed relief to you! I know all about it, for I had practically the same experience with Edith. I couldn't nurse her. Didn't have common sense enough to take Imperial Granum myself to improve my milk. I've heard since that it's invaluable for that purpose. Consequently, Edith was in bad shape by the time I weaned her. Then I gave her modified milk. That was my second mistake, for the curd of fresh milk is almost impossible for a nervous, delicate child to digest, as you know. Dr. Jones recommended Imperial Granum as the best modifier of cow's milk. It breaks up the indigestible curd of the milk and forms a wholesome, nourishing food, which is acceptable to the most delicate stomach.

—"I know I sound like a lecturer, but you'll have to pardon my enthusiasm, for I know that I owe Edith's life to Imperial Granum, and wouldn't be a day without it in the house. The children love it. I must get some right now, too. Do come with me. I love to watch that little nurse weigh the babies. She is a graduate of the New York Hospital, and besides weighing the babies she gives the sanest advice to their mothers on feeding and clothing. I hear she's now giving the dearest little record book with each package of Imperial Granum—not that I need anything to induce me to buy Imperial Granum.

—"Don't you just love to shop in Hahne's? Such efficient service, with everything a baby could possibly require from safety pins to its food."

—IMPERIAL GRANUM, the Unsweetened Food for Nursing Mothers and Infants, is sold in four sizes at Hahne & Co.'s Infants' Wear Department, second floor; also at the Grocery Department, Basement, and the Drug Section, Main floor. Ask for a copy of "Our Baby's Own Book," given with each package of Imperial Granum.

Either white crepe de chine or batiste may be used for this chic blouse model. It has a shoulder yoke of the material hand-embroidered and joined to the shirred front and back of the bodice by a narrow lace insertion. The sleeve joins without fullness. The cuffs and collar are also hand-embroidered and a ruching of fine net trims the closing edge of the center pleat, the collar and the cuff.

NEW SPRING ARRIVALS IN WOMEN'S SHOES.

Easter comes early this Spring—April the Fourth, so we're prepared for it with early shipments.

And the new styles prove that the shoe business has been emancipated—that it has emerged from the realm of the prosaic into that of Real Art. For the women of today, who desires to express individuality in her footwear—has the same opportunity of indulging her fancy for frills and furbelows, as she does in her hats.

Needless to say, the fashions that will make the most decided appeal to aristocratic women this spring are right here at the VAN ARSDALE STORE.

TENTATIVE CITY BUDGET DRAFTED

Councilmanic Finance Committee Finished Work of Fixing Appropriations.

ECONOMY THE KEYNOTE

Co-operation Between Council and School Board in Evidence—The Sixth Conference Held Last Evening.

The councilmanic finance committee met with Mayor Calkins last night, and after a protracted session completed the first draft of the budget. The city treasurer and Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education, were also in attendance as were Councilmen George S. Clay, Abiel D. Edgar and John H. Cose. In accordance with the Mayor's recommendations for close co-operation between departments, members of the Board of Education have attended each of the five or six metings which have been devoted exclusively to budget-making. Chairman Claybrook and members of the Council have expressed themselves as gratified by the interest shown by the school Board.

It is felt that it will be of mutual help to have the city and school departments sit together when finances and budgets are in the making. Thus the needs of one department will be appreciated when another is estimating its requirements.

The tentative budget which was finished last evening, may be subjected to a few changes next week. It will then be published, and a date sometime in April will be fixed for a public hearing. It can be stated now, however, that economy has been the watchword in its preparation Absolutely all items of expense which can be deferred without actually crippling the service, have been ruthlessly cut out this year. In some cases appropriations will even be found to be a little lower than last year.

The Mayor and Chairman Claybrook and his committee are working together in holding back all plans for development, and betterments in the several departments, until the expert survey has pointed out the way. If expert suggestions are to be available to the city, without expense, it would violate every principle of economy not to take full advantage of them.

ELMER AUSTIN GETS SIX MONTHS IN COUNTY JAIL

Elizabeth, March 20—Elmer Austin, a Plainfield youth, who broke into the stores of Messrs. Mechanik, Friedman and Sharkey in Plainfield, as well as the Netherwood Hotel and Martin's barn, was committed to the county jail for six months by Judge Connolly, in the Court of Quarter Sessions, yesterday. He pleaded guilty last week. The prosecutor said that it would be difficult to convict Stephen Austin, a younger brother, who pleaded not guilty and was to be tried yesterday afternoon, so the case against him was dismissed. It was stated that he was the "lookout" for his brother. He was discharged and warned not to offend again.

LEWIS DRAKE GIVEN A FAREWELL PARTY

Is Honored by Twenty-five Friends on Eve of Departure for Trenton.

Lewis Drake, who has been assistant manager and salesman for the Commercial Mills and Elevator for the past nine years, was given a surprise farewell at his home on Somerset street, last night, by the members of a pinochle club to which he belongs. Mr. Drake will leave today for Trenton where he will associate himself in business with his brother, Philip Drake, who has been proprietor of the Trenton Garage since 1912. He will be joined by Mrs. Drake next week and they will make their future home in the capitol city.

The surprise last night was arraigned by Andrew Carney and Edward Fitzgerald. There were twenty five guests in attendance as in addition to the members of the club there were a number of Mr. Drake's intimate friends and business associates Pinochle was a feature of the evenings fun but there was also a general informal social time. Refreshments were served in conclusion. Mr. Drake is a native of the West End of the city and has resided locally all his life. He is the son of Charles Drake who has been connected with the Commercial Mills since the well-known plant was located on South Second street by the late Abram Cadmus more than twenty years ago. When the party came to a conclusion last night he was given rousing cheers and all manner of well wishes, although regrets at his leaving Plainfield were openly expressed.

WILLIAM C. PEARCE TO VISIT THIS CITY

Noted Sunday School Worker to Speak at First Baptist Church.

Unusual interest has been aroused in the announcement that William C. Pearce, the head of the Adult Bible Class work of the International Sunday-school Association, is to speak at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning, March 28, at 11 o'clock. He is recognized as an authority on Bible school work and will doubtless be heard by a large congregation. The Sunday-school Times has the following to say concerning Mr. Pearce:

"Mr. Pearce is a native of Illinois, a graduate of an Indiana college and trained as a lawyer. He early became interester in the organized Sunday-school work and was field worker for the Illinois association. One year of that time he was president of the State association. Cook County Sunday-school Association, which includes the city of Chicago, secured his services as general secretary in 1900 and the next three years he made a remarkable record. Teacher training was greatly stimulated. Mr. Pearce acting bath as a teacher of several classes and director of the work. He also discovered the most prosperous adult classes in the county and got them to working together, thus forming the nucleus for an international adult class organization. All branches of the work were stimulated, attendance at meetings increased and the budget was greatly enlarged.

"Mr. Pearce's ability both as a platform speaker and as a promoter of large movements attracted the attention of the International Association, and in 1903 he became a field worker for that organization. For five years he was a director of teacher training with great success and the latter part of this time for adult class work also. In 1908 he relinquished the teacher training department to give himself exclusively to adult class work and pushed it with great energy until now there are nearly 45,000 registered classes in the country.

"Since 1911 Mr. Pearce has been dean of the International Training School for secretaries and field workers which each year since that time has increased its attendance, the number this year being 250. In 1912 he became associate general secretary and his duties in this capacity have been heavy since Mr. Lawrence was obliged to give much of his time and effort to the world's work."

CAMPIAGN FOR FUND GAINING IN INTEREST

New Members Being Received by Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association.

Local taxpayers have begun to enlist their interest in the plan of the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association to raise funds for the employment of experts to investigate the departments of the city government with a view to bringing about maximum economy and efficiency in the municipal administration. The plan of the association is to conduct a membership campaign and use the membership fees to defray the expenses of hiring the experts needed.

A number of new names have already been added to the roster and every indication points to a successful campaign. The new members will be divided into the following classes: Sustaining member, $10; contributing member, $5; active member, $2; associate member, $1. All checks should be addressed to James M. Charles, 977 Belvidere avenue.

Letters have been sent out to all local taxpayers and a universal co-operation is anticipated. By raising a fund of this kind it will be unnecessary to add to the tax rate in gaining an appropriation for the proposed survey.

PATROLMAN INJURED WHEN STAIRS BROKE

Stretcher With Heavy Patient Fell on Policeman George Muir.

While carrying a stretcher with a heavy patient on it from a house on McCrea place to the ambulance at the curb at midnight, last night, Patrolman George Muir, of the local police force, had a narrow escape from serious injury, and as it was sustained a number of painful hurts that confine him to his bed. Muir and Patrol Driver Thomas O'Gorman, also of the local department, were despatched to the McCrea place house to get a patient to be taken to Muhlenberg Hospital and were coming down a flight of "rickety" stairs when the mishap occurred.

Muir, who weighs over 200 pounds, was handling the front end of the stretcher and when he put his foot on the top step it gave way. The patrolman fell to the bottom of the stairway and the patient and stretcher fell on top of him.

When rescued from the bottom of the heap the big patrolman appeared to be seriously hurt and he was removed to his home and the patient was taken to the hospital by Driver O'Gorman. It was feared that the fall and the weight of the man's body on him had fractured several of his ribs and caused internal injuries. At his home on Elmwood place, this morning, however, it was stated that he was resting comfortably and no bones had been broken, although he is seriously bruised. Dr. Norman W. Currie is in attendance.

FORMER DUNELLEN MAN HURT IN WAR

C. H. Humphreys, who up to the time of the breaking out of the European war, was a resident of Dunellen, is in the London Hospital with an eight-inch wound in his back. H. C. This letter stated that Mr. Humphrey was wounded while in a trench somewhere on the firing line in France by a Bottner shell which exploded directly overhead. Mr. Humphrey holds a commission as officer in one of the King's regiments of Royal Engineers.

W. A. Sale, a former employe of the Smith Auto Express, sailed for London at noon today on the Adriatic to bring his wife to this country. Upon his arrival in London he will proceed directly to the London Hospital and inquire into Mr. Humphrey's condition. He will then cable Mr. Smith.

ITALIAN E. AND C. CLUB ENTERTAIN WITH PLAYLET

An unusually large and appreciative audience attended the presentation of "The Marble Arch," under the auspices of the Recreation Committee's Italian Club in the auditorium of the Bryant School, last night. The entertainment was a unique affair and provided amusement of a high calibre for those present.

The playlet was given by the club talent exclusively and the smoothness with which it was run off indicated that the members of the cast had been subjected to some thorough coaching by those in charge. Dancing followed the show.

CONTINUE ATTACK ON DARDANELLES

Allied Fleet Commanders Decide to Keep up Work of Pounding Forts.

64 SAVED FROM BOUVET

On Inflexible 52 of Crew Were Killed — Airman Drops Bombs Over Deal, But All Land in Sea—Russian Squadron Approaches.

Athens (via London), March 20.—The council of British and French admirals and captains on the French Flagship "Suffern" yesterday decided to continue the attack by sea against the Dardanelles forts.

Fifty-two men, including several officers, were killed on board the British battleship "Inflexible" in Thursday's battle with the Dardanelles forts, according to advices received from Tonedos today.

Paris, March 20.—A statement issued by the Ministry of Marine today says information received by the Minister of Marine makes known the important and brilliant part taken by the French division in the battle of March 18 in the Dardanelles. It was our warships that had the honor of attacking the forts of the straits at short range. They performed this task with a vigor highly appreciated by the English sailors.

The number of actually known survivors of the "Bouvet" is 64. The number of killed and wounded on the other ships of the division is very small.

The French war office stated today that there was no announcement to make.

Constantinople (via Berlin and Amsterdam), March 20.—The following official statement was issued today with additional details of the fleet attacks on Thursday and its repulse:

"A fleet of sixteen ironclads including four British and three French battleships, cruisers and several torpedo boats and destroyers opened fire in the afternoon. A portion of the fleet retired at 3 p. m., but eight ironclads continued the bombardment until 6 o'clock, when all withdrew with the exception of the French battleshop "Bouvet," and British battleships "Irresistable" and "Africa," which were torpodeod. Other ships were also hit hard. The seven-hour fight ended with success for the forts, only slight damage being done to the earthworks."

(Turkish observers probably mistook the "Ocean" for the "Africa," the British admiralty admit the "Ocean" was sunk).

London, March 20.—A German airman dropped bombs over Deal today. No damage was done as all of them fell in the sea. The aviator escaped. Deal is on the eastern extremity of Kent, about twelve miles north of Dover.

New York, March 20.—A despatch to a London News Agency printed in the evening papers, says: "The official statement is made that a Russian squadron has approached the northern port of the Bosphorus. The appearance of the squadron caused a great panic in Constantinople."

Rome, March 20.—A despatch to the "Tribuna" from Salonica, states that trenches have been dug on all sides of Constantinople and that the garrison has been increased by 40,000 men.

A despatch from Berlin by way of Amsterdam, says that a statement issued today by the general staff places the total German losses in the fighting in the vicinity of Neuve Chapelle at about 6,000.

Berlin, March 20, (by wireless).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"On the road between Wytschaete and Ypres, near St. Eloi, the Germans yesterday took from the English a group of houses on the south slope of Lorette Heights in a position where the enemy has maintained himself until the French forces have been driven out.

"In Champagne the day was generally quiet after the German troops had taken some French trenches, north of Beausejours, at dawn in the morning. Partial French attacks, north of Verdun, in the Woevre plain and on the east edge of the Meuse Heights, near Combels, were repulsed. The enemy suffered heavy losses.

"The French attempted several advances against the German positions at Reichacker Kopf, and Hartmannsweiler Kopf, which broke down in the beginning because of heavy losses under the German fire.

"On the eastern front the day was comparatively quiet. Memel has been occupied by the Russians."

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloric Acid is Cause of Indigestion.

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hyrdochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

RAILROAD FOR MEXICAN REFUGEES OPEN IN FEW DAYS

Washington, March 20—The situation in Mexico City is unchanged, Secretary Bryan said today. The railroad through El Paso, by which route foreigners in Mexico City hope to get out of the Mexican capital is not yet open, but will be in a few days.

The Vicar General of Mexico, with fifteen priests who were sent under guard to Vera Cruz, by General Obregon, have been released. Consul Silliman cabled the State Department today that representations made to General Carranza on their behalf had proved successful and the First Chief ordered their release last night.

YOUNG PEOPLE ORGANIZE AT GERMAN REFORMED CHURCH

The young people of the German Reformed church held an enthusiastic meeting last night and completed the organization of a "Jugenbund" or Young People's Society. Twenty five names were signed to the charter roll and indications for a very active branch of the church work are promising.

Rev. George Hauser called the meeting to order and C. Edward Krausse was made temporary chairman. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, C. Edward Krausse; vice-president, Miss Clara Allen; secretary, Miss Anna Bach; treasurer, Miss Jennie Dresselt; organist, Miss Schemp. A committee composed of the officers and Adolph Hauck and Mr. Goess was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws.

The second and fourth Tuesday of each month was set aside as meeting nights for the society. There are a number of other young people connected with the church who will add their names to the charter role and it is hoped to start off with about fifty members.

Putting the K In Kant.

Kant, the Scoto-German, began his name with an alien "k" on the same principle that caused Murdoch, the Scottish coal gas discoverer, to bring his to an end with a "k." If you turn to Murdoch's biographers you find them explaining that Murdoch with a "k" is the English form of Murdoch with an "h." But the great gas man himself explained that he made the change in spelling "to oblige the English, among whom he lived." He found that they had a difficulty in giving "the full guttural pronunciation" to the last syllable, and so he made things easy.—London Chronicle.

The Retort Courteous.

Justice Day was a "hanging judge" and when on circuit expedited business in a summary manner. On one occasion the trial of a prisoner concluded at dusk, and the judge ordered candles to be lighted so that he could try another case that night.

O'Connor, a noted Irish barrister, defended and in protest against night work exclaimed, addressing the court: "What, my lord, try men by night! What will men say? That justice is not done by Day!"

He obtained his end, and at the next sitting the accused was acquitted.—London Mirror.

Billiard Tables on Solid Rock.

Billiard tables supported on solid rock are among the novel features of a thirty-six room concrete residence located on one of the islands of the San Juan archipelago in Puget sound. Each table rests on a massive concrete base, which extends through an opening in the floor and has its footing on bedrock and is therefore as solid and as free from vibration as if it were a part of the island itself.—Popular Mechanics.

Reaching a Conclusion.

Hotel Manager—I see you have given our finest suit of rooms to a man named Bilkins. Are you sure he can pay the charges? Clerk—Yes; he's rich enough. Manager—How do you know? Clerk—He is old and ugly, and his wife is young and pretty.—Exchange.

"How do you ever get on so well with your wife? Don't you ever have any differences of opinion?"

"Of course we do. But I don't let her know it."—Cleveland Leader.

RAILWAY ANSWER TO GOVERNOR

Ask Fielder to Re-Word Train Crew Bill to Make It Certain.

Trenton, N. J., March 19.

Replying to a public statement by Governor Fielder, of New Jersey, on the Full Crew—"Excess Man Crew"—Law, R. L. O'Donnel, Chairman of the Associated Railroads of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, said:

"Governor Fielder, in a letter issued at Trenton, March 15, said that the Stevens bill is defective in that it fails to definitely confer upon the Public Utility Commissioners power to compel railroads to man trains properly, for safety and efficiency.

"The purpose of this bill, as intended by the railroads, is to amend the statutes of New Jersey so as to put in the hands of the Public Utilities Commissioners the power to fix train crews.

"The railroads reiterate their perfect good faith in this matter. Their proposition as first publicly announced February 9, is that the Public Utilities Commissioners simultaneously with repeal of the Full Crew Law, be given power to determine and order the proper manning of trains.

"The railroads want a law which will carry into full effect this proposition.

"They will welcome any suggestions from Governor Fielder, which will result in making the terms of the bill clear and explicit.

"If Governor Fielder will suggest a better and fairer method than the one proposed, of giving the Public Utilities Commissioners jurisdiction over the manning of trains, so as to do justice between the public, the trainmen and those charged with the management of the roads, the railroads will also welcome that.

"Governor Fielder criticises the railroads for advertising their approval of the Stevens bill as introduced March 2. This they did to emphasize the fact that they stand for a measure to put the question of proper manning of trains under public control, and not for another bill introduced that day for absolute repeal of the Full Crew Law, the passage of which latter bill would leave the public shorn of power in the matter.

"The railroad proposition is to give the commissioners full power over the manning of trains without any restriction, either as to the minimum or maximum number of men. This power is broader than that of the Full Crew Law, which merely fixes an arbitrary minimum."

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, MARCH 20, 1915.

On Saturdays the editorial columns of the Daily Press are conducted by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is Archibald Hacquer, former city editor of the Daily Press, and now holding a similar position in the Albuquerque, N. M., Herald. Mr. Hacquer has spent much time in the last two years along the Rio Grande and over the border, and is thoroughly familiar with conditions in Mexico.

OUR GOVERNMENT AND MEXICO.

The conditions in Mexico having of late regressed from bad to worse, the President has once more been called upon to "intervene," and, while delivering to General Carranza a virtual ultimatum, Mr. Wilson has repeated his announcement that he does not intend to interfere in the Mexican "struggle for liberty."

It is true that during recent months there has been less interference from Washington than formerly, and it has looked as if the President had learned by unpleasant experience that it was better to let the Mexicans fight their own battles or stew in their own juice; but his record in this connection, as a whole, has been one of continuing "intervention" of a sort.

As a matter of fact, during more than a year President Wilson pursued a course that can hardly be made to agree with the policy he has been supposed to stand for latterly. He was not content to permit the Mexicans themselves to deal with President Huerta, but demanded the elimination of that disreputable official. He virtually called an election in Mexico and considered the qualifications of various candidates for President. He interested himself in the Mexican reform question, and at one time went almost as far as to announce that before his work was finished every peon should rejoice in the possession of "forty acres and a mule," although such land reforms as have been proposed would, in their ordinary course of events, require at least a generation for their development and execution with any due regard for justice to all concerned.

Following the Tampico incident last spring, he sent ships and men and, during many months, occupied the chief port of a friendly nation, whose sovereignty and complete independence had been ignored from the outset. This did not force the required salute to the American flag, but aided the insurgents, embarrassed Huerta, was largely instrumental in bringing about the latter's downfall, and thus achieved at least one of the objects of the State Department in Washington.

The coming of the great and tragical struggle in Europe filled all America with a horror and detestation of real war. The sobering effect was felt as sensibly at Washington as elsewhere, and there was a genuine thankfulness that we had escaped by the skin of our teeth from becoming involved in a long and costly conflict that could have ended only in the conquest of Mexico. The business of intermeddling in the affairs of a sovereign people separated from us by an international boundary became less interesting and appeared to have fewer reasons for its support. The only excuse for it at any time was the mistaken supposition that, under a vastly expanded Monroe doctrine, it was the duty of the United States to act as a sort of supervising overlord of all Spanish America.

The recent murder of an American by Mexican "bandits" is not just cause for armed intervention. Foreigners must incur risks in any country torn by civil war, and when Americans in Mexico voluntarily accept such risks after being repeatedly warned from Washington to leave that country, their home government can not be expected to guarantee their safety. Everybody wants our State Department to hold the Mexican authorities to strict accountability whenever they are justly accountable, but practically everybody in the United Sattes is no doubt heartily glad that we have escaped the consequences of armed intervention—except those continually active and vocal gentlemen who invested a part of their money south of the Rio Grande with their eyes open and at their own risk.

Mexico is still torn with warring factions and is no better off than it was before Huerta was banished with our State Department's active aid. Though that is to be regretted, it ought to be generally acknowledged that it is the business of the Mexicans to do their own "watching and waiting"—and fighting, if fight they must. As an independent people, surely they have as much right to engage in a war of factions or of sections as the American people had in 1861-65. And they have pretty nearly as complete a right to resent interference from Washington as the Americans of 1861-65 would have had to resent interference from London undertaken on the ground that our Civil War injured British commerce and caused a near-famine among the cotton-spinning operatives of Lancashire.

It is to be hoped that there will be no change in the present policy at Washington, that armed intervention can be honorably avoided until the end, and that the Mexicans—semi-civilized in great part though they are—will be permitted to work out their own destiny.

ELIZABETH WOMEN ORGANIZE A CHARTER

Endorsement of Movement to Build Catholic Shrine in Washington.

The first meeting in Elizabeth of the New Jersey Charter of the National Organization of Catholic Women of the United States, of which Mrs. David T. Kenney of North Plainfield, is the president, was held at the home of Mrs. R. T. Potts, on North Broad street, that place, on Thursday. Mrs. Francis Burrell Hoffman, vice-president of the New York Charter, was an honored guest.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one and all enjoyed a letter from Bishop O'Connor, in which he heartily endorsed the movement which has for its aim the erection of a Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Washington. At the organization meeting held at the home of Mrs. Kenney several months ago, a similar letter was received from Bishop McFaul, of the Trenton diocese. It is the purpose to organize branches in all cities throughout the diocese.

At yesterday's meeting these officers were elected: President, Mrs. R. T. Potts; vice-president, Mrs. A. A. Stein; secretary, Mrs. J. M. Moynihan; treasurer, Mrs. J. C. Reilly.

PLAN ENTERTAINMENT.

The Standard Bearers of the Monroe Avenue church are arranging for a "paper and old rubber" entertainment next Thursday evening. The program will consist of a farce, entitled "The Love of Bonnet," violin and vocal solos and a sketch entitled "The Last Day at School."

MADE OVER—IN THREE REELS

CANDIDATES HUSTLING FOR $175 PRIZES IN PANAMA CONTEST

Diamond Ring, Merchandise Certificate, Cash and Solid Gold Wrist Watch Are Awards Which Go to Hustlers During Next Two Weeks.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.

Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

Two weeks remains in which contestants can win any of the above special prizes. Every candidate should take advantage of this splendid opportunity to win one of these three prizes, as the votes that win the special prizes will also count toward winning the four trips to the Panama Exposition.

The vote standing which appeared in the Press Thursday has no effect on the vote standings of the candidates for the extra prizes; therefore, anyone who may care to enter the contest since the extra prizes were offered has the same chance to win the diamond ring or one of the other two prizes.

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

Each day that passes brings the final stretch in the Press Trans-continental and Panama-Pacific International Exposition Tour contest nearer to view. Three days have passed of the special prize period, and the candidates must hustle to gather in all these "promises." That is just a little hint to be taken by those who really want to win one of these special prizes.

There are, undoubtedly, some candidates who have a good subscription reserve vote. As is understood, if any ballots on this reserve vote were issued before March 17 at midnight, they will not apply on the special prizes. Those who are holding back money on subscriptions, however, may turn it in any time now and have it count for both the special prize, and also the standing, which will count toward the winning of the district trips.

Last Wednesday the Press made a special offer of special prizes, consisting of a list of prizes as shown at the head of this article, and the closing of the period for the winning of these prizes will be 10 p. m., April 3. Another thing that the Contest Department wishes to make clear is that the winners of the extra prizes will be also eligible to win the district prizes at the end of the contest.

In regard to the offer of 10 per cent. and 5 per cent., which has been announced to be paid as a commission to those who do not win the district trip prizes and remain active until the end of the contest, the condition of the 5 and 10 per cent. offer will not be affected one way or the other by the offer of these special prizes. The condition of the 5 per cent. and 10 per cent. commission offer will stand the same as though the special prizes had not been announced at all.

Not Limited to Districts.

The special prizes will be awarded as follows:

The first prize, the diamond ring, will be given to the candidate, regardless of district limitations, who turns in the greatest number of votes on paid-in-advance subscriptions between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., Saturday, April 3.

The second and third prizes will be awarded respectively to the candidates who have the second and third largest number of votes issued, as in the case of the winner of the first prize.

The above are all extra prizes and will in no way interfere with the winning of the delightful tours across the continent; for, of course, all votes turned in for these special prizes will count also for the principal prize—the tours.

The winners of the special prizes will be announced and the prizes will be awarded as soon after April 3 as the work of verification is complete.

This is your opportunity to win a $100 diamond ring or one of the other prizes, and at the same time boost your campaign for the principal prizes—the tours across the continent.

Remember that the vote coupons clipped from the Press do not count toward winning these extra prizes, but count the same as heretofore for the principal prizes.

All ballots issued on subscriptions and voted for the extra prizes must date from March 18. The close of the special prize period will come at 10 p. m., April 3.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" comes to the Plainfield Theatre, matinee and night, Tuesday, March 23. Eugene Walter, the dramatist of the novel, has followed the scenes laid in John Fox, Jr.'s, widely read book with fidelity, though he has written a new play rather than confined himself to a dramatization in its strictest sense. Of course he emphasizes June's great love for Jack Hale, the jealousy of her cousin, Dave, the rough yet sincere affection of her father, Judd Tolliver, the humorous simplicity of Uncle Billy and Old Hun, the quiet strength of Hale, and the genuine chumship of Berkley as well as the pictures of the mountaineer's household and the feudists which are all strikingly impressive by the mobility and breadth of their portrayal. Neither pains, expense nor artistic ability have been spared to give Mr. Walter's play a truly [illegible] production.

There are few players who have a larger following in this city than the popular Irish tenor, Fiske O'Hara, who comes here under the management of Augustus Pitou, Jr., to present his latest play, "Jack's Romance," at The Plainfield Theatre, tonight. His popularity is founded on a conscientious desire to give the best that is in him to his patrons at all times, and to surround himself with a company and production worthy of his clientele. He has succeeded in doing these things to an eminent degree and it is safe to say that no performance gives greater pleasure to theatre-goers than that of Mr. O'Hara. From all accounts he has in "Jack's Romance" a rattling Irish play of the old, virile type that makes the blood tingle at times, and yet teems with a leavening of genuine Irish comedy and sprightly humor that makes it sparkle from beginning to end. Mr. O'Hara's lilting Irish songs go far toward making a success of even a less meritorious play than that he brings here, and display the luscious qualities of his fine tenor voice to excellent advantage.

Three big Paramount feature pictures will be among the attractions at the Plainfield Theatre next week. Monday afternoon and night the management will offer James Hearn's famous New England comedy drama, "Shore Acres," posed for by a selected company, many of the characters having supported the late Mr. Hearn during the years he was on the legitimate stage. On both Wednesday and Thursday the offering will be David Belasco's production of "The Rose of the Rancho," featuring an all-star cast. The week will be concluded on Friday and Saturday with another comedy drama, "The Bargain," familiar to playgoers of the past few years. The Plainfield Theatre has the exclusive contract for the first run of Paramount pictures thus assuring photo-play fans of the very best to be had. The two serial films which have been running at the Plainfield Theatre for several months "The Master Key" and "The Trey o' Hearts," will be concluded during the coming week.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The high class vaudeville bill which attracted large crowds to Proctor's Theatre during the past three days, will be followed by another equally as good for the first half of next week commencing Monday. The numbers will include the following feature acts, all of which are included in the big time circuits: Gardner-Vincent and Company, a spectacular fantasy presenting a comedy novelty surprise in three scenes; Canfield and Carlton, in a comedy skit, "The Hoodoo," Holly Hollis, eccentric singing comedienne; Bell and Eva, acrobatic rebounding trampoline; and Harry Cutler, English comedian, with a fine line of "patter" and song.

The first comedy picture of the new series inaugurated at Proctor's Theatre will be shown this afternoon and tonight in the offering, "The Dancing Beetle," featuring Richard Carl. One of these one-reel comedies staring the highest-priced and best known comedians on the legitimate stage will be presented each succeeding Saturday. The World Corporation Film Company's latest dramatic sensation, "Jimmy Valentine," is scheduled for next Monday and Tuesday and continuing their policy of giving Proctor patrons the biggest money's worth in the city, the program on Wednesday will be augmented by the photo-play, "The Virginian," with Dustin Farnum, while on Thursday, "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch," will be displayed, introducing Henrietta Crosman to local audiences as a screen artist.

American-Made Printed Voiles 25c Yard

A splendid example of the ability of the American manufacturer is this exhibition of 25c yard printed voiles.

In spite of their little price, these dainty fabrics compare in charm and good taste with imported materials.

The voiles themselves are evenly woven, the printings are exquisite in color and original in design.

Just the sight of them will suggest the prettiest of summer frocks to your mind—frocks which, if made at home, will cost almost nothing.

We believe this to be the most attractive showing of 25c American-made materials in New York.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Present indications point to a victory for the local Y. M. C. A. girls in the encounter with the Trentonian Association quintet for the State title on the Columbus Club court next Saturday night. Not satisfied with claiming possession of the winners' odds the local feminine athletes are planning to take a little further revenge out on the capital city team by banqueting it after the match.

Baseball's jinx has invaded North Plainfield High School's spring training camp. With Captain Ralph Smalley on the sick list; Hymie Abrams on the shelf for the remainder of the season with a banged-up knee; and a couple of others nursing bad cases of "Charlie Horse," the schoolboys' training squad resembles that of a Federal League spring frolicing outfit.

Plainfield and North Plainfield High School girls will ring down the 1914-15 interscholastic basketball curtain Monday afternoon on the Y. M. C. A. court. Both aggregations are keyed up to a high pitch for the engagement and it goes without saying that there will be a battle royal for the rubber decision. Should Plainfield come out on the larger end it will mean one wide sweep for red and blue basketball forces this season. The boys already have their title tucked away and are now scrapping for the city flag.

The feminine match is not the last big encounter of the season, however. What promises to be the big finale will be staged when the Y. M. C. A. and Plainfield High School boys' forces meet in a contest for the city title. Each now has a verdict in safe keeping and considerable honor rests on the outcome of the last scrap.

While we're talking about city titles we might as well properly present that local championship for girls' to the Plainfield Five. In fact, we haven't seen a team that can even cause a shiver to trickle up and down their spines. It's a shame to take the money.

Haven't heard of any basketball star in Plainfield being offered a vaudeville contract this season. This precedent may be accounted for, however, by the increasing popularity of moving pictures. Most of the local notables move too fast for even the film takers to catch them. (Especially when a cop is racing them down the avenue.)

Joe Alberts has come through with his annual announcement to the effect that there will be no Sunday baseball in Scotch Plains this year. Ever since Joe brought that feminine baseball outfit to the 'Plains a couple of years ago Sunday fandom has placed little credence in his announcements.

Queries, Comment and Answers

Sporting Editor:

Query—Please give me the estimated number of languages or dialects in the world?—G. A. K.

Answer—There are said to be 3,424 spoken languages or dialects in the world, distributed as follows: America, 1,624; Asia, 937; Europe, 587; Africa, 276.

Sporting Editor:

Query—Will you please give me the birthplace of Alice Brown, the authoress?—C. M. N.

Answer—She was born at Hampton Falls, N. H., December 5, 1857.

Sporting Editor:

Query—What is the Yiddish language and what was its origin? What nation uses this language, having reference to the immigration bill?—C. G. P.

Answer—Yiddish is the Englishized form of German Jewish spoke by Jews of German origin, and is spoke throughout the world with slight variations. It is a dialect, not a language. About a third is derived from Slavic, Romanian and Hebrew sources.

Sporting Editor:

Query—What kind of a vehicle runs easier, a high wheel or low wheel? Please state and explain.—V. L.

Answer—With the provision of ball, or roller bearing, the size of the wheel is of small importance. If the wheel turns on the axle without a non-friction devise the high wheel runs easier, because of the greater difference in these diameters, the easier will the wheel turn.

Sporting Editor:

Query—What is the language of stamps?—K. Y.

Answer—This mode of expression of a more sentimental age was as follows: Upsidedown, left upper corner, I love you; crosswise, same corner, my heart is another's; upright, same corner, good-bye, sweetheart; upsidedown, right upper corner, write no more; in the middle of the right edge, write at once; in middle of upper edge, no; right-hand corner, crosswise, do you love me? top corner, right, I wish your acquaintance; bottom corner, left, I seek your friendship; on line with surname, accept my love; same place, upsidedown, I am engaged; crosswise at same place, I long to see you.

NEWARK A WINNER WITH 961.1 AVERAGE

Leick and Clauss the Individual Stars of Roll-off Last Night.

With two tallies over the 900 mark and one that soared to 1,041, the Newark Elks' team of the Senior Bowling League, copped two out of three games in the play-off with Elizabeth on the local alleys, last night. Good pinning featured the contests, all of which were keenly contested and interesting to the large gallery of visitors who "rooted" for their favorites.

In the opening tussle Newark gained the lead by four pins, a 226 recorded by Leick being largely responsible for this achievement. The second tilt went to Elizabeth with an eight-pin advantage, Clauss coming through with a 222 and Blythe accounting for 201. Speary, of the Newarks, set up a tally of 223 in this match, and Erler, a team-mate, scored 202.

The final roll was marked by a reversal of form on the part of the Elizabethans, the latter team falling to 877 while their rivals climbed to 1,041. In this final encounter phenomenal pinning featured the work of the visitors, both VanNess and Leick recording 236. Hinton got 214. Nolte upheld the standard of the losing side with a 219. By virtue of their bowling in the last game VanNess and Leick copped the high individual score honors of the evening. The scores:

DATE FOR THIRD GIRLS' GAME AGAIN PUT AHEAD

The date of the third interscholastic feminine basketball game has again been changed, owing to the fact that the Y. M. C. A. court could not be secured for Monday afternoon. The North Plainfield manager, after much hustling, secured the association court for Tuesday afternoon and the contest between the Plainfield and North Plainfield girls will be staged on the association floor, at 4:30 o'clock.

Bill Leimer, of South Orange, who refereed the third boys' game, will probably officiate at the girls' rubber match Tuesday afternoon. A record crowd of rooters is expected. Both teams are in the pink of condition having practiced faithfully for the third meeting and each will go into the fray with full intentions of winning. North Plainfield anticipates her chief scoring to be done by the Misses Lillian Spencer and Marjorie Burtis, while Plainfield has the star forward, Ruth Morris, who with her quick playing and crack foul shooting has won former games for the Ninth street school.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIFLD

MARKED CHANGE FOR THE BETTER

Cement Industry Begins to Show Considerable Activity Throughout Country.

QUOTATIONS IMPROVE

Dealers Are Anxious for a Stable Market as Existing Conditions Have Upset Purchasing Calculations—Brick Manufacturing Busy.

New York, March 20.—Builders contemplating construction this spring are finding a stiffening tendency in quotations. One of the leading Portland cement manufacturers this week made a quotation of eighty cents mill for cement deliveries later than July 1 while another equally large concern quoted seventy-five cents, mill, to consumers on present day business. The existing mill price in the Lehigh Valley district is fifty-eight cents base, to dealer.

In this commodity there is a marked change for the better in demand. The Atlas Company's Lehigh plant was using thirty-two kilns this week as against eighteen last. The Nazareth Company was operating six kilns, the Alpha Company was using extra capacity, the Lehigh Company was employing one hundred per cent. capacity, the Vulcanite Company was shipping the average twenty carloads of material a day, the Alsen's Company in the Hudson district was using four kilns and will throw in two more at least next week and other companies now closed for repairs are preparing to get under way as soon as possible.

Users of Portland cement as well as dealers will do well to prepare for a continued advancement in price just as soon as the five cent advance made this week by the Allentown Company has had time to show the strength of the move. The prediction is freely made by those whose opinion is worth knowing, that by the first of August the mill price of Portland cement in the Valley will be around a dollar a barrel, making the price here in this market around $1.65 whereas it is being quoted on spot delivery to dealers today at $1.23 to $1.28.

Dealers themselves are anxious for the market to become stable as the existing condition of things has seriously upset purchasing calculations and has disturbed consumers who are holding off for lower prices and are thus delaying the building season. It is still a question regarding whether the purposes of the late price war have been achieved, but dealers are freely assuring their customers that advances in prices are much more likely to occur than cuts and they point to the quotation this week of the Allentown Company to prove it.

Perth Amboy, Matawan and Sayreville brick districts are geting ready for brick manufacture. The frost is not yet entirely out of the ground so that the yards cannot be worked, but they are mining clay in large quantities and are preparing for approximately a 60 per cent output for 1915, based upon present building calculations and the amount of unsold brick still in sheds. The Hudson river district where there are 119 plants supplying the requirements of the New York market still has a large supply unsold in sheds. The dealers in New York have been giving every inch of available spaceement and so brick riding has been from barge direct to jobs, according to requirements. This has kept the wholesale price down to $5.75 a thousand. This price is extremely low and if anything the quotations will move upward rather than down as demand improves. Hackensack brick manufacturers are doing a big local business so far this spring. Prices are low, however, in order to encourage small building operations to go ahead. Spring delivery prices are about fifty cents higher than the $6.50 now ruling.

Other materials and supplies are steady, but reporting a stiffening undertone. Linseed oil has moved up one cent, making the present wholesale quotation 62 and 63 cents a gallon, New York structural beams, tees, zees and bars are quoted at tidewater at $25.20 a ton, although there is a tendency to stiffen. This quotation is being given on current business. March will have a higher unfilled order tonnage than any month so far this year, even exceeding the first three months in 1914, according to first half orders.

Copper flashing is advancing fast. Builders will do well to buy this material if they can anticipate specifications at present prices because the are scheduled to move higher at any time.

Plan filings everywhere in the district show a gain for the week just closed of approximately 4.8 per cent over the week before and a gain of 2.1 per cent. over the same week last year. This is a computation of New York, the five eastern counties of New Jersey and Westchester county

A QUAINT COTTAGE HOME

DESIGNED BY CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

HERE is a very pretty cottage design with a frontage of 34 and a depth of 27 ft. There is a liberal porch entrance and vestibule, opening into the end of a long living room that is 13 ft. wide by 18 ft. 6 in. There is also an extended recess or hall 4 ft. 6 in. wide giving a total length of living room 23 ft. At the right of this recess or hall is a wide columned archway opening into a music room from which the main stairs lead up into the second story with combination feature and a short section of stairs from kitchen reaching the main stair platform. The dining room at the rear of living room is separate and connected with a single door opening from the side hall. At the left of the dining room is a glazed porch connected with living and dining room by wide French windows, making an attractive feature to the cottage.

There are two chimneys, the one main chimney provides for a wide fireplace in center of living room and corner fireplace in dining room and the second chimney is for kitchen use. There is a convenient pantry between kitchen and dining room and a recess sideboard in dining room. The two main rooms finished with beam ceilings. This main floor is designed to be finished mission oak with oak floor. There is a full basement under the house with laundry, store rooms, heating and fuel rooms, etc., and outside grade entrance.

The second floor has three good sized chambers with square angle ceilings. There are spacious closets and large linen closet and ample sized bath room over the kitchen. Over the first story porch in the rear left-hand angle of the house is a sleeping porch connected with two chambers and coming under the main roof of house. It is designed to finish the woodwork in second floor with white enamel with red mahogany doors and birch floor. The roof is low pitched and there is only small space in the attic. but this could be used for storage if desired.

The exterior of the house is covered with wide drop siding stained mission brown and all of the trimmings, casings, cornices, etc., painted white, the roof shingles stained dark red. The design as indicated by the title is quaint and homelike in its appearance. It is estimated that the cost, exclusive of heating and plumbing, would be from $3,000 to $3,600. The projected dutch window in the music room and living room add to the pleasantness of the interior and the look of the exterior.

REALTY TRANSFERS

The following realty transfers from the surrounding towns have been recorded at the Middlesex county seat during the past week.

William B. McLain Realty Co. has transferred to Gustav. F. A. Vieghaueser and wife, two lots in Lincoln Estates.

William B. McLain Realty Co. has transferred to Fred Schmidt and wife, a plot in Lincoln Estates, and to Morris Orlick and wife, two lots in South Plainfield Heights.

The Aberdare Co., Inc., has transferred to Clarence M. Haight, two tracts containing 73 4-5 acres on the Landing road, corner of School House road, Piscataway Township.

The Metuchen Realty and Improvement Co. has transferred to John G. Hummeli, two lots, and to Maria Surini, four lots in Metuchen Estates.

The inhabitants of Piscataway Township have transferred to Joseph Pasquale, six lots in New Era Park, Piscataway Township.

George E. Loeffler Land and Improvement Co. has transferred to Louis Henry Denher two lots in Park avenue Estates in Piscataway Township.

STRICTLY UNION HELP.

For the first time in the history of local school building, the new Evergreen avenue structure will be erected by absolutely all union help as recognized by the Plainfield Building Trades Council. There will be no so-called "handy men" and every carpenter, mason, hod-carrier, painter, plumber, electrician and other mechanics will be in good standing with his respective trade unions. In addition, this condition of affairs will apply to the men employed in laying cement walks within the fence line.

IMPROVING RESIDENCE.

The residence at the northwest corner of East Second and Berckman streets, owned by George McCusker, and occupied by F. J. Melvin, is undergoing general improvements. The plans include the addition of a bay window four feet wide and eleven and half feet high, also a modern upright cellar entrance. The work is being done by William Leititheusser.

MASTER BUILDERS WITHHOLD REPLY

No Action Yet on Carpenters' Request for Increase of Fifty Cents.

Failure on the part of the Master Builders' Association to discuss at the annual meeting, Thursday night, the request of the carpenters for an increase of wages beginning May 1, is a topic for general comment among the building mechanics. The original notice that an additional fifty cents per day would be required from the date mentioned was served on November 7 last, but so far no answer has been returned. A popular belief exists that the contractors are of the opinion that industrial conditions now or in the immediate future do not warrant any further expense for labor in figuring contracts.

It is possible that prospects may be brighter on or about April 15, and if a favorable answer is to be received at all it will not come before then. As one contractor remarked yesterday:

"I certainly appreciate the fact that the carpenters are not any too well paid, but with such a slump as building has had, any announcement of higher wages at this time will only serve to make prospective builders all the more reluctant to get busy."

The carpenters at the present time receive $4 per day and the increase asked would make their daily wage $4.50. On some classes of work the masons receive $5 a day and other trades also have a slight advantage. The requet for a raise is not confined to the local carpenters, as the order issued by the State council makes it compulsory to all unions, in Hudson, Essex and Union counties. As the Plainfield district includes part of Somerset and Middlesex counties, this territory will be affected by any action taken in regards to the notification of November 7.

ERECTING OFFICE BUILDING.

The Spicer Manufacturing Company is having a two-story office building erected on its South Plainfield property adjoining the present big plant. The structure will be a frame affair, measuring about twenty by forty feet.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFER.

James Hurley, of Belmont avenue, has transferred a newly-built residence to Frank Leivers, of the same avenue. Mr. Hurley recently purchased it of Mrs. Cadmus, of Philadelphia.

FOUR PERMITS BY INSPECTOR DOANE

Building Operations in This City Continue at Even Pace.

The erection of two garages and two alteration jobs constitute the sum and substance of the movements in the local construction field during the course of the past week, as indicated by the permits by Inspector T. O. Doane. The four permits as issued during the week call for the expenditure of $2,035.

While the awarding of new contracts appear to be somewhat slow in becoming realized facts, there is hopeful aspects of the 1915 construction season. Contracts for several buildings of no mean dimensions on which bids have been asked are still held in abeyance pending with the possibility of better bids, while one or two of these are expected to be awarded before the present month passes out. Already, the permits as issued this month compare favorably with those issued during March of last year, and with January and February already on record as showing improvements over 1914, there is no reason for any pessimistic view of the coming months.

The permits as issued during the past week are as noted below.

First Ward.

George Femleip is to erect a 16 by 18-foot frame garage at 336 Emerson avenue at a cost of $200. The owner will care for the work.

Second Ward.

Samuel Seay has been granted a permit for the construction of a 14 by 21-foot frame extension to the side of the dwelling located at 833 Richmond street. The addition will be two stories high and will cost $800. J. W. Brooke is the contractor.

Fourth Ward.

The second permit calling for alterations was granted to I. Riess for the erection of an extension in the front of the dwelling at 454 West Fourth street on the property adjoining the St. Mary T. A. B. Association. The addition, which is to be used for business purposes, will measure twenty-four by thirty feet. The cost has been estimated at $1,000. F. C. Lancaster is the architect of the building improvements, and Nathan Eskovitch the general contractor.

An eight by fourteen-foot frame garage is to be erected at 412 Clinton avenue by the Church of the Heavenly Rest at a cost of $55. Michael Rimmer will accomplish the work.

THOMPSON GARAGE TO BE ENLARGED

Park Avenue Building Partially Destroyed by Fire Will be Bigger.

Planning for the replacing of his garage on Park avenue, which was partially destroyed by fire a few weeks ago, A. C. Thompson is now receiving bids for the work of the erection of an entirely fire-proof two-story building at 413-15-17 Park avenue. The one story portion of the garage which formerly occupied the property number 413 on this thoroughfare has been completely torn down that the two-story addition to the remaining building may be erected.

The addition will have a frontage of twenty-five feet, giving the garage a total frontage of seventy-five feet, with a depth of 125 feet. The front and partition walls will be of hollow cement blocks. In order to carry the fire-proofing idea out to the finest detail, the floor of the first story will be of concrete, while that of the second story will be of re-enforced concrete. The light shaft in the center of the building will have a hollow tile wall. The combined floor space on the two stories will be as great, if not greater than any other in the city and, upon completion, will be as modern and up-to-date as is possible, all of the latest improvement being provided for by the plans on which bids are being asked. The architecture of this addition conforms with that of the structure, now standing.

The building in which occurred the major portion of the damage from the fire is at present being overhauled and repaired throughout, with an entire new front with large plate windows being a feature of the improvements being provided. The labor on this part of the work is now going on, while the work on the addition will be started next week. From present indications, the repair work, together with the cost of the new building, will aggregate considerably over the $5,000 mark. Fred C. Lancaster is the architect of the improvements.

IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN.

Development is starting already on Cevgar avenue, which is the name of the most southwesterly of the streets in the new tract being brought into the market between South avenue and Center street. McDonough and Titus, contractors from Plainfield, started work this week on the erection of two new houses of the more modest type, known generally as "workingmen's houses" and retailing in the neighborhood of $1,600. They are being built for speculation.

Contractor George F. Giles has been awarded the contract for installing the plumbing and steam heating systems for the new house being erected for investment by Contractor Herman B. Eckert on Third street.

The contract for the erection of a new dwelling house on Greenbrook road next to the residence of Joseph Tetlow, which is to be built for a New York party has been secured by Contractor Samuel M. Titus. The mason work contract has been awarded to Contractor Firman H. Gise.

A new roof was put on the Clawson house on Front street on Monday, the entire job being finished in one day.

Rapid work is being done this week by Contractor Frank Broshar on the installing of plumbing fixtures in the new house of Charles D. Noneaker.

The office in the First National Bank building recently vacated by John Fedderman has been rented by William W. Giddes, the local attorney. Alterations are being made to the apartment now to make the place suitable for Mr. Giddes. He will then have a suite of two offices and a door will be cut through the partition between the two rooms giving communication between them.

E. W. Lincoln, of Yarmouthport, Mass., who recently purchased a house and two acres of land of Ludwig Wild at Greenbrook, expects to take possession in a few days. Mr. Lincoln and family are staying for the present at Bound Brook.

Work was resumed with energy on Tuesday on the new building to be built on the Ratti property, North avenue. It was originally planned to have the building made of concrete blocks, but Mr. Ratti has changed his mind in that respect and it is to be built of brick, which he believes will make a far preferable building.

Some much needed repairs in the plumbing line were made the first of the week at the borough hall, the work being done by Cantractor Frank Broshart.

MIDDLESEX BOROUGH.

The contract for installing the plumbing in the two new houses at Dewey Park being built by Contractor Wrage, has been awarded to Contractor Frank Broshart.

The Garden Day By Day

by Tarkington Baker

Next Week's Work In Brief

Remove the winter covering from beds of bulbs, perennials and roses. Protection provided for tender trees and shrubs should also be removed. Withdraw it gradually, however, hastening or retarding the work as the weather is warm or cold.

See that all hardy herbaceous plants wanted for early planting are ordered.

Transplant and set out new shrubs. The earlier this is done the better.

Fertilize, re-seed and roll the lawn.

Apply coarse bone dust to the rose beds. If they were mulched with manure during the winter, dig it in deeply.

Sow seeds of the annual poppies outdoors. Indoors, sow seed of asters, cosmos, lobelia, heliotrope, petunia, alyssum, calendula, phlox, scabiosa and zinnia and of other annuals that may be wanted for early bloom.

Re-pot ornamental plants, such as palms and other window garden and conservatory plants.

Advantage should be taken of every favorable day to hasten the removal of the winter protection from beds and borders, roses and tender shrubs and trees. The covering, however, in all cases should be withdrawn gradually, so that the tender growth springing up beneath will be hardened. A fork rather than a rake is the tool to use; it does less damage. Removal must be governed by weather conditions—hastened if the season is unduly early, or retarded if the temperature remains low. The material lifted from the beds, in most instances, and always where leaves have been used for the purpose, should be saved and thrown in a heap to rot. It makes an excellent summer mulch and a good fertilizer.

Catalogues should be searched carefully for new plants to add to the hardy herbaceous beds and borders. Try some novelties and experience the real thrill that comes only to the bold and adventuring gardener. Some perennials, it is likely, have not survived the winter. Their places must be taken by other plants, either of the same variety or entirely different, and these should be ordered from the nurseryman now. At the same time, orders should be placed for shrubs and trees, and the dealer instructed to ship these as soon as they can be dug—the earlier they are planted the better. In setting out the new stock or transplanting the old, remember that the hole to receive either tree or shrub must be generously large. The roots should never be cramped nor exposed to sun, wind or frost. A glance through the pages of the catalogues of some of the larger nurseries will acquaint the amateur with dozens of desirable species and varieties to plant. Nothing is better for the small yard than shrubs and the dwarf, flowering trees, such as the dogwood.

Work done now on the lawn will count for more than twice as much as work done later. Go over it with a steel-tooth rake, tearing out the crab grass and, if manure was scattered over it last fall, raking this into piles for removal to the compost heap. Scatter re-cleaned seed if no further fertilizing is necessary and roll. If no fertilizer was applied in the autumn, make a mixture of equal parts of bone dust and wood ashes and apply at the rate of one pound to each square rod. Roll with the heaviest roller obtainable and, for the first rolling of the season, go over it twice, first north and south and next east and west.

When ordering fertilizer for the lawn, purchase also some coarser bone meal for the rose beds. Roses are strong feeders. If a manure mulch has lain on the beds during the winter, dig this in, working it down to a good depth even at the risk of severing some of the roots. Cutting a root here and there will do little harm; indeed, a little, mild root pruning is oftentimes a benefit. The perennials, too, will be grateful for a dressing of bone dust. It should be fine, however, like that used on the lawn.

Start the bed of annual poppies now. Fine the top soil and sow the seed carefully, taking pains to avoid scattering it too thickly. Press the seed into the soil with a smooth board, but do not cover. As the plants come up, thin them. Poppies resent transplanting and should be grown where the seeds are sewn. Indoors, continue the work of planting seeds of flowers and vegetables in flats. If the vegetables mentioned last week have not yet been planted in flats, the work should be attended to at once. If seed of them is already sown, add pepper to the list so that these will be ready for setting out early in June. The list of annuals that can be planted indoors and so forced into earlier bloom in the garden is a long one, most of this class, in fact, adapting itself to the treatment excellently.

All ornamental plants grown in pots or tubs in the window garden or the conservatory should be looked over carefully to determine whether re-potting is necessary. Palms, probably, will demand it more than other plants of this character. Use care in the operation and avoid damaging the roots. In making the shift, use only a pot of the next largest size—amateurs are generally guilty of shifting into pots two or three sizes larger. When re-potting, pack the soil firmly and make sure that ample drainage has been provided.

TARKINGTON BAKER.

Ellis Ross has purchased a couple of lots on Drake avenue from O. A. LaPointe. Lots are being offered for sale by Mr. LaPointe at such an exeremely low price that they are quite a temptation to the investor, and Mr. Ross expects to erect a bungalow or dwelling house upon his property a little later.

NEW MARKET.

A new front porch has been erected at the residence of William K. Hartpence, on New Market road.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

O. A. LaPointe has this week completed a six-room cottage at South Plainfield. A party from Brooklyn expects to move into it the twentieth of next month.

STARTS IN BUSINESS.

Robert Broadway, of New Market, has purchased from Mrs. Gretchen J. Winges the fifty foot lot of land with building thereon, located on North avenue, Dunellen, next to the Kupfenberg building and once part of the Giddes property. He has started in the general contracting and jobbing business and is engaged in fixing up the structure on the lot to meet his requirements. The building was used for quite a long time by Firman H. Gise as headquarters for his concrete block business, and Charles Adams was associated with him there at one time. Mr. Broadway will install wood turning machinery and be ready to undertake any work that comes along.

IMPROVEMENTS COMPLETED.

The improvements authorized for the courtroom in the borough building, Dunellen, have been completed by the employes of Contractor Samuel Titus. They include the placing of a closed fence around the desk of the judge, the building of a railing across the room shutting off the spectators seats from the enclosure for lawyers and witnesses and the making of other minor improvements. When a better chair is provided for the judge the courtroom will be furnished in a style better in keeping with the present status of the borough.

BUILDING IN THE COUNTY.

Construction work throughout the county at the present time appears to be on the increase, with all parts of the county having their share of the work now in the course of construction. During the week ending last Saturday, nine contracts were filed with the county clerk calling for the expenditure of $25,309. The largest of the contracts call for the erection of an addition to the Kenilwarth School at a cost of $13,841.

LINBARGER AGENCY ACTIVE; BUSY SEASON IN PROSPECT

Among the recent sales and rentals made by the Linbarger Real Estate Agency are the following:

Bayard Hawthorne, of Truell Court, has taken the new house built by the Plainfield Construction Company, on Serman avenue, near Grant avenue.

Ralph E. Hallock, of Willow avenue, has rented the Robert property at 1121 Martine avenue, on which extensive improvements are being made.

Ludwig Schueler, of New York city, has purchased the large farm formerly owned by the Highland Park Realty Company, of which Mr. Linbarger is one of the officers.

Ernest L. Ransome, president of the Ransome Concrete Machinery Company, has taken a suite of offices in the Courier-News Building.

Miss Agnes F. Daly, of this city, has rented the property at No. 93 Grandview avenue, the borough.

Miss Florence H. Butler, formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, has purchased the beautiful residential property on Stelle avenue formerly owned by Leonidas Dennis, and after making a number of additions and improvements, will make her residence there.

Mr. Linbarger predicts a great improvement in real estate conditions this year over last, and looks for a busy season for the brokers in this city.

RUNAWAY JUNE

BY GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER AND LILLIAN CHESTER

Copyright, 1915, by Serial Publication Corporation

CHAPTER III.

THE woman below was acting strangely as she cleared away the remains of the breakfast and washed the dishes. From time to time she passed near her husband, bending over slightly, and finally she stopped beside him and listened to his breathing, but she shook her head and went away. Big Ben was quite plainly fast asleep, sprawled in complete relaxation, while lean Jake was snoring with great energy. The woman stooped and touched her husband's shoulder. He moved slightly, and she went back to her dishes. The next time she came he did not even twitch at the touch, and with deft fingers she reached into his vest pocket and extracted a little chamois bag.

So that was how one woman solved her money problem, and her burning eyes told with what bitterness she had resorted to this bold step. Of more value than her husband, even in his low profession, she was still his supine inferior in the rights of possession.

Down the Channel Sped the Little Cutter.

What she had was a gift from him, and, as June had heard him put it himself, he gave her what was good for her.

The woman! She was coming up the ladder! The fugitive hidden in the attic was stunned by this unexpected action.

Nearer and nearer came the woman's head, and nearer and nearer to the edge of the trapdoor extended June's strong young hands!

"Babe?" Flub stirred uneasily.

The woman was down the ladder like a cat.

"What?"

No answer. The man was still sound asleep. The woman stood over him for awhile to make sure of this and started for the ladder again. Halfway across the room she hesitated, turned, walked swiftly to the end of the hut and hid the little chamois bag beneath a loose stone behind the stove.

She was putting away the last of the dishes when suddenly she stopped, turned, and a slow smile spread upon her lips. Her eyes burned with a somber fire. She went over to Big Ben and deftly secured a long, slender cigarette holder. She crossed swiftly to her husband and inserted the holder in his top vest pocket, so that its shining tip protruded. The water cask stood by Big Ben's head. With a gleam in her eye the woman went over, filled the rusty tin cup and deliberately poured a fourth of its contents over Big Ben's face.

"Excuse me," she laughed as he jumped up and with the same motion jerked a revolver from his pocket.

He grinned at her sheepishly as he saw the sparkle of mischief in her eye, and he wiped his face with his sleeve.

"You done it o' purpose," he speculated, chuckling.

"Think so?" she dimpled.

Big Ben's eyes brightened.

"I believe you're after that shawl."

"Flub'd sell it." And she glanced across at the sleeping man with vindictive hatred.

"Take it," urged Big Ben, "and if Flub sells it tell me." He picked up the shawl and clumsily threw it around the woman's shoulders. She looked down at the shawl and toyed with its long, delicate fringe. She took it off slowly and gave it back to the man.

"Nothing doing," she sadly decided; then she slowly turned and looked at her husband and walked away. There was a softening in Big Ben's eyes as she walked away, and then he, too, glanced at the sleeping Flub! He strolled to the door and came back. Suddenly he stopped. The gleam of something yellow had caught his gaze. He walked close and bent low. He pulled the cigarette holder out far enough to identify it and pushed it back; then he gave the sleeper a kick.

"Get up, you thief!" he roared.

Flub sprang up, dazed.

"What's that?"

"I said get up, you thief!" roared Big Ben as lean Jake abruptly stopped snoring and jumped up. He was halfway to the ladder before he realized that this was not a raid, and June, divining his intention, rose swiftly and put her hands on the loose clapboards of the roof. Ben jerked the cigarette holder from Flub's pocket. "You stole it!"

Flub seemed dazed by the accusation, but suddenly he let out a yell. Mechanically he had reached in his vest pocket, as was his habit when the chamois bag was there, and had discovered his loss.

"My diamond!" he yelled. "It's gone!" And his face turned white as he looked around the tense group. Slowly comprehension came to him. "You framed me!" he suddenly shouted, pointing a trembling finger at Big June Rescued.

Ben. "You copped my diamond; then you planted this cigarette holder so you could"—

"You're a liar!" bellowed Big Ben and sprang for his accuser.

A knife gleamed in Flub's hand, and he slashed savagely at his onrushing opponent. With a roar of rage Big Ben caught the descending wrist, wrested the weapon from it and plunged it to the hilt in Flub's breast.

There was a piercing shriek from the attic and a tearing of boards. The woman, quick of mind as she was of body, was the first to comprehend what that might mean. She sprang to the ladder, but as she went she cast a backward glance at the lifeless man on the floor. There was no shudder in her, only cold triumph.

"It's a girl! She's on the roof!" cried the woman as she gained the attic.

Lean Jake was the first out of the door, and Big Ben just after him. They rounded the corner of the hut just in time to see June jump from the roof and dart for her boat. It was the woman who caught her.

"Let me go!" implored June. "I won't tell!"

Those last three words would seal her fate in the mind of any murderous thief. Big Ben had caught her roughly by the arm, and now he looked inquiringly at the others.

"Drown her," advised Lean Jake, who was more full of fear than a thief should be. "She knows too much."

All three of them looked at the water. It spread far into the marshes, and it held its secrets well and long. Without a work Big Ben swung June up in his arms and started with her to the water's edge, while she uttered shriek upon shriek.

A shot and then another answered June's piercing shrieks, and down the channel from the inlet swiftly sped the little cutter, with Orin Cunningham at the wheel, revolver in hand.

"Hands up!" yelled a strong voice, and another shot startled the air of the marshes. Gilbert Blye! He stood up in his racer, and over the wheel bent heavy Edwards, his eyes narrowed and his thick lips firmly set.

Big Ben had dropped June at the first shot and had reached for his revolver. Lean Jake had dropped flat on the ground behind a bowlder, but before Big Ben could return the fire of the oncoming boats from the Hilarity he was confused by a shot from another quarter, and through the reeds of the marsh there pushed a narrow steel gray motorboat, in which stood a tall man with a soft hat and a loosely knotted cravat.

A stranger! And he was nearer to the helpless June than her pursuers from the Hilarity! She ran toward him like a deer, and as his driver drew close inshore June sprang into the boat.

"Hurry!" she cried. "Please hurry!"

The man, evidently an artist, from the canvases and folding easel in his boat, followed her terrified gaze as she glanced back, her terror divided between the murderers on the island and the men in the boats. The artist lowered June to a seat beside him, and, with a word to the driver, they darted away toward the channel. A shot whizzed over their heads as they started, and shot after shot resounded from the upper channel.

The man with the white mustache paid no attention to Big Ben as he steered his swift little cutter around the island and struck into the lower channel after the artist and the beautiful young girl who had escaped from the attic. Nor did the man with the black Vandyke waste any time upon the astonished thieves as his boat, too, whizzed around the curve. Lean Jake raised up from behind his bowlder as the boat shot by, and the three—Babe, Big Ben and Jake—looked at each other in bewilderment. Another boat came swishing down past the island. It was driven by a blazing eyed little chauffeur with a tiny mustache, and he was shouting at the top of his voice. Behind him sat stiffly a woman with high cheek bones and a wilderness of gums, and she, too, was shouting:

"Voila! Voila! Voila!"

Another boat! In it were two men and a woman, the driver a plump faced little man with deep concern upon his brow, the woman hysterical and the other man with his teeth and fists clinched.

For ten minutes Babe and Big Ben and Lean Jake stood there in dumb stupefaction, waiting for another boat.

(To be continued.)

The next instalment of "Runaway June" will appear Monday, March 29.

UNDENIABLE SMARTNESS IN THE NEW BELL COAT.

New flare effects in coatwear make the old-style, narrow coat look very passe; and undoubtedly, the new coat with its swaggering smartness, has a distinct charm of its own. The coat pictured here is of mixed tan and green Irish frieze in soft, open weave and collar and buttons are of green velvet.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

"I wonder who that can be! You go to the door, Dick, and don't be too cordial, for we must eat at once if we are to dress and make that train." Nell was just finishing the preparations for dinner. She heard a joyous "Hello! Where did you drop from? My, it's good to see you."

She tiptoed into the living room to reconnoiter, and saw Dick standing in front of a gray-bearded man slightly shorter than himself. He had one arm on his shoulder and was beaming into his face as only Dick knew how to beam. "Nell! Come here. It's father."

The ring of joy must have warmed the old man's heart.

"I'm so glad to see you. Dick has told me so much about you that I feel as if I had known you a long time."

He took her face between his hands and kissed both cheeks. "So this is my little daughter," he said with Dick's own smile.

"Now take father to his room. Dinner is all ready and we will sit down at once."

"Why didn't you tell us you were coming so we could meet you?" asked Dick as they went up the stairs.

"I wasn't sure I could get a man to do the work until the last minute. I knew I could find you all right."

"Now, father, we are going to take you to Kansas City to a play tonight," announced Dick at the table. "You see, we have tickets and the train leaves in an hour."

"But you hadn't planned on my going. I can stay——"

"No, indeed, you can't," chorused the young people. We can easily get another seat. The play is good; you'll enjoy it."

The old gentleman looked very much interested, but a doleful look crossed his face as he said, "I'm afraid your mother——"

"Mother is out of this and will stay out. You're our guest and are not responsible for what we do with you. Mum's the word."

The kindly old man was carried along in the stream of gaiety and abandoned himself to enjoying everything to the full. He and Nell sat side by side all the way to Kansas City and visited so hard that Dick, as he said, could not get a word in edgewise. Dick gave his father his seat and got another a little distance from the rest of the party for himself, and his pleasure was doubled by seeing how happy and ideally congenial the two were.

"Oh, I love him so; I can see just what you will be like at his age," whispered Nell on the way home.

They slept late the next morning, and as they loitered over the cheery breakfast table the old man said: "Dick, you're a lucky boy. I shall take solid comfort thinking about you in your cozy home. Do you know, I don't believe I ever ate breakfast as late as this in my life; this visit is like a dream."

They examined the garden spot and he advised about the garden and admired Nell's flower beds with the budding daffodils and jonquils.

"I suppose I really ought to go to church tonight," he said uneasily as evening drew on. Mother will want to know about the sermon tomorrow."

"You are not going tomorrow, are you," protested Nell.

"Yes, I must, for the boy I got to do the chores is going away."

"Let me see," mused Dick, "we'll go to church with you tonight and I'll show you over the works in the morning before your train goes. Mother enjoyed seeing the different processes.

So it was arranged, and every trace of worry vanished from the placid face.

Household Hints

PUDDINGS

Rice Meringue—Cook in double boiler one teacup rice until very soft and dry. Beat yolks of four eggs very light, a pint of milk, piece of butter size of an egg. Grate rind of one lemon into rice, add one teacup sugar and a little salt. Bake half hour. Beat whites of four eggs very stiff, add three tablespoons sugar and the juice of one lemon. Spread this on top and return to oven until a light brown. This is nice for Sunday dinner, as it can be prepared the day before.

Snow Pudding — One teaspoon granulated gelatin, one-fourth cup boiling water, 1½ tablespoons lemon juice, white of one egg. Soak gelatin in cold water and dissolve in boiling water. Add lemon juice, strain and set bowl containing mixture in pan of ice water. Occasionally stir until quite thick; beat until frothy. Add white of egg beaten stiff and continue beating until stiff enough to hold shape. Mold or drop by spoonful on glass dish and serve.

Marshmallow Pudding — Two-thirds teaspoon granulated gelatin, one-third cup boiling water, one-fourth cup sugar, white of one egg, one-fourth teaspoon vanilla, few grains salt and dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Put sugar in bowl, add white of egg well beaten and pour over strained gelatin, then add salt and vanilla. Beat mixture fifteen minutes, chill and cut in pieces the size and shape of marshmallows. Serve alone.

Suet Pudding—One cup of suet chopped fine, one cup seeded raisins, one cup brown sugar, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon soda dissolved in the milk, pinch of salt, flour enough to make a stiff batter. Steam until done. Serve warm with a sauce made of the following: One pint hot water, one cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon flour beaten smooth in a little cold water. Stir in and let come to boil; add one tablespoon vinegar and use any kind of flavoring.

BREADS AND CAKES

Coffee Cake—Mix together one cup granulated sugar, one tablespoon each of melted lard and butter; beat to a creamy consistency, add one cup black coffee in which has been added one teaspoon soda and one teaspoon vanilla. Sift in flour with one-fourth teaspoon baking powder and one teaspoon cornstarch, adding half cup raisins or jam.

Slow Rising Biscuits—Two cups yeast, one cup lard, one cup sugar, two cups lukewarm water, pinch of salt. Mix stiff in morning and let set in cool place all day; in evening put in tins and let them raise until morning, then bake.

Parker House Rolls—When baking bread and your bread is kneaded into a firm loaf, pinch off as much as would fill a tin cup. Take one-half cup lard, one-half cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one teacup warm water. Mix all together and knead into a loaf. Set in cool place until morning, then roll out half inch thick, cut with biscuit cutter and spread with butter. Press edge of your hand on center of each biscuit and fold one-half over the other. Let rise and bake.

Graham Bread—Two and one-half cups graham flour, one cup white flour, two cups sweet milk, one-half cup molasses, one teaspoon each soda and salt; steam one hour.

Emergency Cupcakes—One cup sugar (scant), one-half cup shortening, one cup milk (scant), one teaspoon cinnamon, flour to make medium batter; a few raisins.

Apple Cake—One cup grated apples, one-half cup butter, one cup sugar, yolks of two eggs well beaten. Then add one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon cloves, one-half teaspon allspice, two teaspoons cocoa, two cups flour, one cup milk, one teaspoon baking soda dissolved in a little boiling water. Bake in layers about twenty-five minutes. Frosting: Three-fourths cup grated apples, one cup powdered sugar, whites of two eggs. Beat apples and sugar, then add whites of two eggs and whip until thick. It will become nice and fluffy by beating.

White Rose Cake—Bake a white cake in three layers. Turn cake pans upside down and let lie ten minutes, when the brown crust can all be removed with a sharp knife, leaving the cake perfectly white. For filling, use whipped cream flavored with rose water. Spread this thickly between layers. If you want something unusually delicate, bake an angel cake in layers and use above filling.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

The Adventures of Minnie Monkey.

Now Minnie Monkey felt that all her trials were at an end.
She said: "Oh, dear, kind Uncle Chimpanzee,
If you will get me out of here and take me safely home
I'll never run away again," said she.

"Oh, that is very easy," said her uncle, "come along!"
And then he climbed right up the center pole.
Miss Minnie followed after him as closely as she could,
Then at the top they went out through a hole.

They sat upon the big tent roof until it got quite dark,
And then they scrambled quickly to the earth.
The Zebra waited for them, and they jumped upon his back.
"Now run," said they to him, "as all you're worth."

The Zebra ran like anything for miles and miles and miles;
He ran as he had never run before,
Till by and by they found themselves beside Miss Minnie's house,
And saw her mother sitting by the door.

When Minnie saw her mother she began to cry for joy,
She was so glad to be at home again.
"Good gracious me!" her mother said, "you've given me a fright;
You'll have to have a spanking, that is plain."

But good old Uncle Chimpanzee said: "Do not spank her, please,
For she is just as sorry as can be;
If you will let her off this time I know that she'll be good;
She has been punished quite enough," said he.

So Mrs. Monkey said: "All right, but won't you both step in
And have a bite to eat before we part?"
"Oh, no," said Uncle Chimpanzee, "we must be getting back,
The night performance is about to start."

The Zebra and the Chimpanzee went back to join the show,
And Minnie's mother tucked her safe in bed.
And since that time you could not find a more obedient child
Than Minnie Monkey, so I have heard said.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

THE SUFFRAGIST DOCTRINE OF IRRESPONSIBILITY.

For fear that what we are about to quote may appear inconceivable to people of common sense, we wish to say that it appeared in the "Special Suffrage Campaign Issue" of the Evening Post, New York, Thursday, February 25, 1915, column one, section two, and was signed in capital letters: "By Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association."

Perhaps Dr. Shaw did not write it.

Perhaps she did not mean it.

Perhaps she may, upon second though, wish to deny it.

But the facts are as stated.

And this precious and biggest figure in the woman suffrage agitation declared over her signature in public print:

"I believe in woman suffrage whether all women vote or no women vote; whether all women vote right or all women vote wrong; whether women will love their husbands after they vote or forsake them; whether they will neglect their children or never have any children."

In introducing this astonishing statement, Dr. Shaw declared: "I believe I speak for the thousands of women belonging to the National Association."

The principal upon which the Suffragists appeal is thus reduced to its simplest elements. In effect, they say: "It is nothing to us what effect the vote will have upon society or democracy if the State enfranchises a thousand people when only a hundred desire the privilege.

"We do not care what becomes of [illegible] unwieldly mass of voters unfamiliar with political fundamentals.

"It is a matter of complete indifference to us if the majority, or all, of the new electorate votes against the best interests of the people as a whole.

"We are entirely irresponsible. What if whole families are disrupted and the social fabric shattered by the social revolution of which the vote is the entering wedge.

"What of the fact that women will vainly seek to accomplish through legislation what can only be brought about through thoughtful and constant home training? What care we if women abandon home life for the public spotlight? Why should we trouble ourselves about what becomes of the neglected children?

"Give us the Vote!"

—From "The Woman's Protest," for March, 1915.

A WYOMING WARNING.

New York, Feb. 17, 1915.

To the Editor of The N. Y. Times:

I am a citizen of Wyoming, and have lived for forty years with and under female suffrage.

It is customary to point to Wyoming as a shining example of the success of female suffrage and to predicate upon that the same success in other regions—New York, for instance. In doing this they willfully, or carelessly, omit any reference to the totally different make-up of the population of the two. The "slums" in Wyoming are entirely a negligible quantity, the population is scattered, the towns are small, the percentage of illiteracy is wonderfully small, the people are very largely on the same level as to intelligence and as to interests. To compare such a condition with the City of New York, with its east side, its "slums," its various foreign quarters, etc., and to expect the same results from both, would be simply ridiculous were it not so dangerous.

This brings up another point. Old New Yorkers know well how difficult it is to bring out the educated vote and how easy to produce and manage is the other kind. This being the case with male voters only, one shudders to think of the result of extending the suffrage to women, which must inevitably mean the increase of the uneducated, ignorant voters ten to one what it could increase the desirables. We may be residing in the frying pan, but that would mean moving into the fire with considerable of a vengeance.

The class of voters which we want least will be constantly in evidence, (I write from experience). It brings a small excitement into their prosaic lives, but the others will, as now, only much more so, be conspicuous by their absence.

As an example, allow me to give two instances from my own personal experience. At one time, in a closely contested election, we bought and voted 1,250 votes for about $2,500. This is not to say that we bribed anybody—we paid their poll taxes, (which go to the school fund in Wyoming), gave them a ride to the polls, and furnished them with our tickets, neatly folded, which they voted.

Believe me, there is one serious danger but little counted on. When it is all new and interesting the ladies may turn out, but how many think you, will continue to go and stand, perhaps in a long line, on a stormy day to cast their votes? All the same, that would make little difference to the denizens of the Five Points, (as it used to be). A stormy day has before now changed the result of an election in New York city, and it is very safe to prophesy on the basis of the women's vote under like circumstances.

They claim that women voting will surely purify our elections, but the last but one election in Wyoming was one of our worst, and in Colorado, with women voting, they have had the vilest politics they have ever had. It is my strong belief that if one could poll the vote of every woman in Wyoming honestly, woman suffrage would be voted down to day.

I was in Boston a number of years ago, when this question was before the Legislature, and both sides called on me. That dear and wonderful woman, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, sent for me but when she divined my bias the subject was gracefully changed; and I had a meeting, also, with the legislative committee. The antis were really in a desperate scare, and no wonder. Take a town like Lowell, with its thousands of factory operatives, largely women. There was fear, and with reason, for the result should a clever demagogue or the I. W. W. gain that vote, when they could—and would—run the whole town to perdition.

The most dangerous "rock ahead" of our ship of State today is our universal male suffrage in ignorant hands, and it is clear to me that to extend the suffrage as proposed must of necessity greatly increase that danger. This, and this alone, is to me an all-sufficient argument against "female suffrage" as asked for today. I write from experience.

DURING 1914 The Prudential paid 431 claims on policyholders who died outside of the United States or Canada.

Among the countries represented were Palestine, Cape Verde Islands, India, Russia, South Sea Islands, Turkey and Wales.

These policyholders appreciated their policies so well they were willing to assume the little extra difficulty in paying premiums that living abroad entailed.

Everybody is invited to visit the Prudential Exhibit on Life Insurance and Public Welfare at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.—Adv.

DEATH SUMMONS G. L. VAN EMBURGH

Pioneer Dry Goods Merchant Passes Away at His Home on E. Second Street.

WAS ILL MANY YEARS

One of the Founders of Trinity Reformed Church of Which He Was An Official for Nearly 35 Years—Two Sons Survive.

George L. VanEmburgh, one of the founders of Trinity Reformed church, and for many years a leading local business man, died yesterday morning at his home on East Second street, following a long illness. He had been in ill health for the past eight years, and for nearly three years had been confined to the house. The fact that he was eighty-four years old worked against medical aid, and during the last two weeks his death had been expected almost hourly. During his long invalidism he bore his sufferings patiently, exhibiting the same Christian fortitude that had characterized his whole life.

George L. VanEmburgh was born at Newark on December 9, 1831, his father being Christopher VanEmburgh, of Gravesend, Long Island, and his mother, Miss Marie King, of Belleville. After completing his education in the Newark schools Mr. Van Emburgh entered the employ of A. T. Stewart, in New York, the most famous merchant prince of his day. When he had acquired a full working knowledge of the dry goods business, he opened a store at Ferry and Conger streets, Newark, which he conducted successfully for several years. Thirty-six years ago he came to Plainfield, with the firm of Lawrence & Price, which bought out Jas. White, father of the late Edward White, who had a small dry goods store at East Front street and Watchung avenue, where T. P. Neilson's antique shop is located at the present time. Later the firm moved to the store now occupied by Morris C. Van Arsdale. While at this location the firm underwent a change, the late Seeley Edsall succeeding Mr. Lawrence under the firm name of Edsall and Price. Mr. VanEmburgh resigned his position and opened a store at Westfield, which he conducted for four years. He gave this up to become the partner of the late Edward White, and they established what is now the A. E. Force store, under the name of VanEmburgh and White. The business prospered, and the concern was known throughout the county and beyond Somerville.

After being with Mr. White for a number of years, the latter purchased the business outright, and the senior partner associated himself with his son, Frederick M. VanEmburgh. They purchased the business of Miss Clark, who had a store in the basement of the old First National Bank building, previous to the remodeling as it stands today. From there the firm of VanEmburgh & Son moved to the corner store of the Babcock building, and, after continuing for a number of years, the business was sold to Woodhull & Martin. The elder VanEmburgh entered the employ of Woodhull & Martin and continued in charge of one of the departments until his health failed.

Mr. VanEmburgh had been in Plainfield less than a year when he broached the subject of organizing a Reformed congregation, and Trinity church stands today as a monument to his Christian zeal. His project secured the support of the late Charles Lindsley and the late Daniel VanWinkle, with the result that a congregation was formed. The first consistory meeting was held at his home, and oddly enough, as a coincidence, the last meeting of the present consistory also took place at his home. Mr. VanEmburgh held an official position in the church until his illness prevented, at which time he was made elder-emeritus. The church celebrated its thirty-fifth anniversary yesterday. Mr. VanEmburgh was devoted to his home, taking little or no part in civic affairs. His only fraternal affiliation was with Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias.

On Sepember 15, 1853, Mr. VanEmburgh married Miss Sophronia Colfax, of West Milford, this State, who died on March 13, 1906. By this union there are two sons living, Frederick M. VanEmburgh, of 83 Westervelt avenue, the borough, and Harry C. VanEmburgh, of East Second street, the well known civil engineer and surveyor.

The funeral will be held at the late home at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and a further service will take place in Trinity Reformed church at 3:30. Burial will be in Mt. Pleasant cemetery, Newark.

A. M. Smith and family, of 19 Somerset street, have removed to 622 West Front street.

MASONIC BRETHREN ATTENDED FUNERAL

Large Delegation Gathered at the Bier of Otto Mueck at Elizabeth.

A delegation of sixty members of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., and the affiliated Masonic organizations from this city, attended the funeral of Otto Mueck at his late home on Madison avenue, Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon. Former Sheriff B. Frank Corielli acted as marshall and Fred W. Soper officiated as master during the service. The latter was assisted by Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church of the borough. The Masonic quartet composed of H. S. Davis, W. G. Smith, J. W. Daub and George Smith, rendered three selections, "Nearer Mq God, to Thee," "Abide with Me" and "Asleep in Jesus," in addition to the Masonic Funeral Dirge.

The many handsome floral tributes included set pieces from the Masonic organizations, Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, and Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., having been a member at the time of his death or during his residence in the borough. The gathering at the funeral also included several representatives from the Plainfield Elks. The Masonic Brethren made the trip to and from Elizabeth by special trolley.

Burial was made this morning in Evergreen cemetery, Elizabeth, Rev. George Hauser conducting the commitment service at the grave. The pall bearers were four members of Jerusalem lodge, B. Frank Corielli, C. W. Krausse, Henry Lietke and Christian Gloekler.

Mrs. Stephen G. VanHoesen, of Fanwood, special agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, this morning was officially notified of her appointment as New Jersey chairman for the newly organized American Humane Association. Local clergymen have promised their support in the Sunday work, and Mrs. VanHoesen is now perfecting plans for the affair. It is proposed to make it an interdenominational function in each State.

Mrs. VanHoesen has the power to name a committee of six to assist her in the work. This latter body will be representative of the entire State, and will comprise persons of influence and responsibility. Inasmuch as she has just been acquainted with the details of her appointment, Mrs. VanHoesen has as yet made no selections.

PROBATE WILL OF ALBERT L. FORCE

Miss Lillian A. Force Only Daughter, is Made Executrix and Sole Heir.

NO PUBLIC BEQUESTS

Estimated Worth of Personal Property is $20,000—Value of Realty Not Given—Codicil Added to Document in 1893.

Somerville, March 22—The will of Albert L. Force, founder and editor of The Daily Press for twenty-five years, was offered for probate in the office of Surrogate Calvin McMurtry, this place, on Saturday, by Assemblyman William N. Runyon, and testamentary letters were granted to Miss Lillian A. Force, who is named as executrix and sole heir of the estate. There are no public or other bequests of any kind, all of the real and personal property being left to the daughter.

The original will was made on July 20, 1893, the witnesses being the late George W. DeMeza and George W. Bird. In this document Mrs. Albert L. Force and Miss Lillian A. Force were made the beneficiaries and executrixes, but Oct. 10, 1893, a codicil was added, making Miss Force the executrix. Mrs. Force died in 1910.

Miss Force in her declaration estimated the personal property to be worth $20,000, but no value of the real estate is given in the will or by Miss Force. Assemblyman William N. Runyon and his father, Nelson Runyon, were the witneses to the codicil.

Mr. Force left considerable real estate, including property in the city and borough. He was also a part owner of the property at Watchung avenue and East Second street, which was purchased by the Government and upon which a Federal building is to be erected this summer.

Conforming with a Papal order for Catholic people throughout the world, yesterday was observed in both St. Mary's and St. Joseph's churches as Peace Day. Prayers were offered at all services and continued until last night that the influence of the Heavenly Father be used in bringing about a cessation of hostilities in Europe. A regulation program was observed at the main mass in each church. At St. Mary's it was in charge of Rev. A BABY SAVING SHOW IS PLANNED

Latest Phase of Social Work to Be Demonstrated in This City.

ORGANIZATION MEETING

Many Prominent People Gather at Home of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart to Discuss Plans—Exhibit to Be Held During the Month of April.

Prompt and active interest was shown last night by a large gathering of prominent Plainfield people who met to have explained to them the latest phase of the local social work, the "Baby Saving Show." Mr. and Mrs. Percy H. Stewart had issued invitations to a number of those active in charitable and health interests to gather at their home to meet Albert Cross, managing director of the Child Federation, of Philadelphia, an organization which instituted the first baby saving show in America, and which has carried on that unique line of work for nearly three years.

Mr. Cross addressed those present on the character, development and history of the Philadelphia baby saving show, saying that although it was but about three years old, it had served as a pattern for about twenty-five others now in various parts of the United States. The show was the outgrowth of the ideas of a group of Philadelphia physicians, who were impressed by the proportions of the Philadelphia death rate among children. Out of this there grew the first "Baby Saving Show," which was held for ten days, in Horticultural Hall, in 1912, and was attended by over 67,000 people during the ten days it was open. This show was

AUTO DAMAGED BY MYSTERIOUS BLAZE

Charles L. Stanley's New 1915 Car Partially Burned in Garage.

A new 1915 Buick automobile, purchased by Charles L. Stanley, was partially destroyed by fire as it stood in the garage at his home, South and Leland avenues, last night. Mr. Stanley noticed a light in the structure about 9:35 and on opening the door to investigate, was greeted by a burst of flame from the car. He hurriedly closed the door to shut off the draught and telephoned fire headquarters. The blaze was put out with chemicals by No. 4 hose company.

Mr. Stanley was unable to say what caused the fire beyond surmising that a member of the family had dropped a match near the car a short time before. The blaze was confined to the automobile itself, the interior of the structure itself being untouched by the flame, mainly because the floor is of concrete. The car was purchased about a week ago and had been run less than three hundred miles. It was valued at $1,200 and the damage is fixed at $500, covered by insurance.

HAND ALLEGED TO HAVE PASSED WORTHLESS CHECKS

The local police are looking for one William Hand, a well known east end character, who is alleged to have passed two worthless checks in this city on Saturday. They were drawn on the account of John E. Mair and were passed on Sylvester Sharkey, the Richmond street grocer, and George Finger, a shoe dealer, of West Front street. Both parties found the paper to be "N. G." when they tried to redeem them for cash. Mr. Sharkey's was for $18.70 and the other was for an amount a little over $6.

Mr. Mair called on Chief Kiely this morning and stated that he did not have an account in local banks or never did have one. Hand is well known to the police and his apprehension will probably be effected before nightfall.

AUSTRIANS GIVE UP AT PRZEMYSL

Russian Official Statement Says Defenders of Famous Fortress Surrender.

ITALY READY FOR WAR

German Statement Says Russian Mobs Looted Private Property in Memel Before Being Driven Out—Ariel Raids Repeated.

London, March 22 (Central News cable)—The Austrian garrison at Przemysl has surrendered, according to an official statement issued by the Russian army headquarters in Petograd today.

The fall of Przemysl has been expected for some weeks, as the Russian army has completely enveloped the stronghold almost since the first week of the war. It was the strongest fortress in all Austria, and has made the most determined opposition since the war broke out.

As a result of the findings in the preliminary examination of the papers of the American steamer Maracas now detained at Hull, it has been decided to hold the ship for action by the prize court.

Rome, March 22—The police are doing all in their power to rid Italy of German and Austrian spies, but the capital still swarms with them. Sensational developments are expected following discovery that the telephone wire connecting the foreign office with the Quirinal has been tapped and all conversation for several days has been heard by a German secret service man.

The anti-espionage and anti-contraband law, which many believe is the last step in Italy's war preparations, was passed in the Senate at 1:45 o'clock yesterday morning. There were 145 favorable votes and only two against the measure.

Another indication of the near approach of Italy's entrance into the war is the fact that all Germans and Austrians in Italy have been urgently advised by the consuls of their respective countries to leave within the shortest possible time.

Calais, March 22—The third Zeppelin attack upon this city, timed at almost the precise hour that the aerial raid was made upon Paris early yesterday morning, was made ineffective because the whirring of the airships motors gave adequate warning of their approach.

The Zeppelins came from the direction of the sea, but received such a vigorous bombardment from French artillery that they retreated before they reached the city. It is making another effort to drop bombs in the harbor and on the railroad junction.

Paris, March 22—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"To the north of Arras at Notre de Lorette, a German counter attack regained from us some parts of trenches night before last. We reconquered them last night. At La Boisselle, northeast of Albert, mine warfare continues. After blowing up a trench gallery of the enemy we occupied the greater part of the excavation.

"Rheims was again bombarded Sunday, fifty shells falling on the city. In the Argonne we inflicted two serious checks upon the enemy. Near Bagatele we exploded three mines and two of our companies captured by assaut a German trench in which they maintained themselves for 500 yards despite a strong attack. The enemy, after having exploded two mines and bombarded our trenches launched an attack on a front of about 250 yards. After a very hot hand to hand battle, the assailants were repulsed despite the arrival of reinforcements for them. Our artillery opened fire upon them while they were retreating and inflicted very great losses upon them.

Berlin, March 22, (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Eastern theatre—The Russians were driven from Memel yesterday, after a short engagement south of the town, and stubborn fighting in the streets. Protected by Russian troops Russian mobs looted private property of German citizens and carried carloads of their booty across the frontier. A special report on the Russian depredations will be furnished later.

"North of Mariampol, west of the Niemen River, Russian attacks were repulsed, the enemy suffering heavy losses. West of the Orzyc, near Jednorozek, northeast of Przasnysz, and northwest of Ciechanow, Russian attacks made during the day and night broke down under our fire. Four hundred and twenty Russians

EDUCATION COST TO BOROUGH IS LOW

A. F. Todd Submits Interesting Figures at Annual School Meeting.

Figures submitted by A. F. Todd, president of the Board of Education, at the recent annual school meeting, showed that it is costing the borough less to give its school pupils a High School education by sending them to the Plainfield High School than it is costing Orange to educate its High School pupils in its own school. According to Mr. Todd's figures, it cost Orange $53 a pupil last year to educate its High School pupils against a net cost of $33 a pupil to the borough for sending its pupils to Plainfield High School.

After submitting the above figures President Todd stated that there had been a change in the grading of the local schools over the past five or six years. Whereas it had been necessary when the borough was giving its pupils two years of High School work at the Whittier School for the pupils desiring to continue their education in Plainfield High School to repeat the tenth year no repeating was necessary now as the borough schools are now on a par with Plainfield High School.

The only item of expense that could possibly be reduced, Mr. Todd said, was the teacher's salary, but this would effect the efficiency of the schools, as good teachers can demand good pay today. The borough has in the past lost good teachers owing to the inability of the Board to meet a better offer made by some other town, so Mr. Todd said that this item instead of being decreased should instead be increased.

Mr. Todd then discussed the matter of the night school which had just closed. When the school started the enrollment was in the neighborhood of sixty, but after four or five weeks the enrollment decreased as pupils dropped out for one reason or another until when the school closed only fifteen foreigners were in attendance. The principle reason for this, Mr. Todd said, was the fact that a four-night a week course was not to the liking of the American lads, they evidently favoring a two-night a week course. The objection to a two-night a week course is that the borough would have to bear the entire expense of the school, whereas with a four-night course the State bears 50 per cent. Several interesting letters were received from foreigners who attended night school. In these letters they expressed their appreciation of night school and hoped it would be continued next year.

SPRING COUNCIL OF MOTHERS' CONGRESS

Large Delegation of Plainfielders Attend Interesting Session at Princeton.

The annual spring council of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' Associations was held in Princeton High School, Saturday, under the supervision of the Princeton Home and School Association. The president reported eleven new associations and seven now individual members. Interesting and inspiring talks were read from the associations of the following cities: Sea Isle City, Tuckahoe, Woodbury, Camden, Collingswood, Haddonfield, Plainfield, North Plainfield, Oaklyn, Audubon, Greenlock, Williamstown, Oradell, Chatham, Cranford, Princeton, Irvington, Upper Montclair, Warren township, New Brunswick, Trenton, Riverton, Mariton and Garwood.

At Sea Isle City the association has installed sewing, cooking and manual training classes, and the Parent-Teacher Association bears the cost of the materials used, while the teachers give their services free, thus saving the city about $1,000. Woodbury reported a "Friendly Thought" committee, which called on the sick and presented to every new baby in the club a bank with a deposit of $1 toward a permanent savings account. Hollingswood reported that parents and teachers were co-operating to raise money for playgrounds, and the boys of the manual training department were building some of the apparatus. Haddonfield reported an appropriation of $1,000 from the City Council to establish a High School lunch room. North Plainfield reported that their visiting committee had collected garments and mended and distributed them, also making new dresses and blouses. The economic committee had formed dancing classes and a cooking contest, in which forty-seven girls are entered. Cranford, which was represented by the only male delegate at the congress, reported that the city is accomplishing much in the betterment of the motion picture houses. Two clubs have been started in Trenton to further the co-operation between Sunday school teachers and the home. The New Brunswick schools have united for city improvement and the establishment of social center work.

The Plainfield and North Plainfield Parent-Teachers' Association sent the following delegates to the congress: Mrs. William Sandford, Mrs. G. Stewart Simons, Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees, Mrs. S. St. John Fitch, Mrs. Joseph Smith, Mrs. LaRue, Mrs. Guy Peck, Mrs. Mathew Ewart, Mrs. Frank Rowley, Mrs. William O. Taylor and Mrs. Judd Stewart. There were seventy delegates in all, representing associations from all over the State.

RETURNED HOME TO FIND WIFE WITH AN AFFINITY

Because his wife banished him from the family fireside at 333 Cottage place one day last week and entertained an affinity last night William McNeill appeared in the role of complainant in the city police court before Judge William G. DeMeza this morning. Realizing that he needed his spouse to operate his culinary department McNeill went back to the Cottage place home last night after enjoying single-blessedness for three days, but to his surprise found Robert Miller sharing the domicile with Mrs. McNeill.

The husband hustled to police headquarters and was escorted back to the house by Roundsman Andrew Saffron. The police minion arrested the woman and her affinity on a disorderly charge for which they were arraigned this morning.

After expounding on the laws of marital happiness and instructing Mrs. McNeill in the art of punishnig her husband for his transgressions in a more effective manner Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on the pair of defendants.

FAVORS RATHBUN REPEALER.

A meeting of the Union County Bar Association was held in Elizabeth at 11 o'clock this morning for the purpose of discussing the proposed repealer to the Rathbun law. The law as it stands abolishes the dower and courtesy rights of women. The association voted in favor of the repealer and a committee was appointed to draw up resolutions urging its passage. The resolution will be presented at another meeting of the association tomorrow.

SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN BOULDER FELL ON HIM

While at work in the Smalley stone quarry in Watchung, this morning, John Bugtolsi, a laborer, was hit by a falling boulder of stone and seriously injured. He was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital in the ambulance and is confined at that institution.

The large rock hit him squarely between the shoulder blades and it was at first thought that his back had been broken. An examination revealed the fact, however, that no bones had been broken and it was said at the hospital that he would recover.

CLARENCE B. PECK WEDS MISS BERTHA A. BENDER

Miss Bertha A. Bender and Clarence B. Peck, both of Plainfield, were quietly married at the parsonage of the Presbyterian church, Dunellen, Saturday evening, at 7:30 o'clock, Rev. Ernest R. Brown, the pastor, officiating. The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Roland Twining. After the ceremony the couple left for a short honeymoon. On their return they will reside at the home of the bride's parents, on West Front street.

AUTOS IN A COLLISION BUT SLIGHTLY DAMAGED

An automobile owned and driven by Sam Sabocker, of 1081 Rahway road, collided with a machine driven by William Clark, of 10 Grove street, at Seventh street, and Park avenue, Saturday night. The mud-guards, axle and lamps on Sabocker's machine and the mud-guards on Clark's machine were broken in the smash.

Responsibility for the accident appeared to be evenly divided, and no arrests were made. A settlement between the parties concerned was made outside of court. No one was injured.

LOCAL ENTRY REAPED MANY HONORS AT CHARITY SHOW

John A. Conway's French bulldog, "N. Y. M.," of this city, scored a double triumph at New York's big Charity Dog Show, held during the closing part of last week, taking first prize in the novice dog judging, and first for the best junior dog. He also captured a silver trophy for the best novice French bulldog in the show.

Mr. Conway's entry pulled further honors by taking a medal for the best French bulldog or French bull bitch in the show in the novice classes.

REV. C. C. CAIN PREACHES HIS FAREWELL SERMON

Rev. C. C. Cain, pastor of Grace M. E. church, the borough, preached what will probably be his last sermon at that church last night, he having accepted a call to the Verona M. E. church, with the consent of Bishop Henderson, who will preside at the Newark Conference to be held in Newark this week. The members expressed their rgrets over the resignation of their pastor.

At the morning service four new members were received, two by letter and two on probation. This makes a total of ninety new members received during the present conference year. One adult was baptized. At the Sunday school session in the afternoon, Mrs. Reuben Knox gave an interesting address on Mexico. Mr. Cain afterward addressed the school at which time he was presented with a Bible from the members of the Men's Bible class. George Bird made the presentation.

AUTO PARTY PLUNGE INTO GOWANUS CANAL

New York, March 22.—A big touring car plunged into the Gowanus canal, at the foot of First street, Brooklyn, early this morning, the driver evidently believing that a bridge spanned the canal at that point, although the nearest bridge is at the foot of Third street. Policeman Harry Parrot was standing a short distance from the spot where the car dashed into the canal, but his warning came too late, and the automobile, with its occupants, sank to the bottom of the sluggish waters. Help was called, and two men and a woman were taken out and carried to the Holy Family Hospital.

One of the women recovered consciousness after a couple of hours and gave her name as Gertrude Sheridan, of Brooklyn. She said that one of the men was Charles Williams, of Flushing, Long Island., and the other, Daniel C. Driscoll, of Madison, N. J. The latter was driving the car. Policeman Parrot states that four persons were in the car when it passed him, and the canal is being dragged for the member of the quartet supposed to have been drowned.

"LIFE'S WRECKS" SERMON SUBJECT

Rev. Cortland H. Mallery Preaches on Subject Inspired by Voyage.

RUIN MARKS WORLD

Human Shipwrecks Cast Upon the Shore Exemplify Wrecked Homes Poverty, Viciousness and Bad Habits—Lessons Drawn.

The Rev. Cortland H. Mallery preached yesterday morning in the Church of the Heavenly Rest from Acts 27, verse 39, on St. Paul's voyage to Rome. The sermon was suggested by the fact that a family intimately connected with the parish sailed on Saturday for Glasgow, Scotland. Mr. Mallery began by describing the Apostle's voyage and said that it was a story of interest and vividness.

He continued: "After leaving Caesarea and touching at various points the ship in which the Apostle and his companions were traveling arrived at the Island of Crete. St. Paul advised the captain to winter there as navigation was becoming dangerous at that time of the year. But the captain and owner of the ship and the centurion who had St. Paul in charge, thought otherwise and they went on. Soon after they were caught in a typhoon and for fourteen days tossed about in a terrific sea, the sun not shining by day nor the stars by night. Finally by making soundings they ascertained that they were coming near the land. St. Paul had said 'Sirs, ye should have harkened unto me and not loosed from Crete,' but told them that he had prayed for their safety and had been assured by an Angelic messenger that their lives would be saved."

Mr. Mallery said there was a remarkable instance here which showed how God overrules the obstinacy of men in response to earnest prayer. If God would answer prayer on behalf of those who oppose him how much more would be answer for those who are his faithful servants?

Mr Mallery said: "God is the ruler of nature today as he was in the days when Jesus stilled the raging of the storm and it is right and proper for us to pray for those exposed to the powers of nature, whatever they may be." The preacher showed also a deeper spiritual lesson, the lesson of the voyage of life. As we leave the harbor in childhood all is fair. The sea is calm and the ship rides in safety but the storms of life come on, the sun is darkened and the wind and currents are against us. Only those who have taken God as the pilot can then hope to come in safety to the harbor.

"The shipwrecks of life which we see all about us should remind us of this need. Young men and young women who have abandoned themselves to evil habits often shipwreck their souls on the first voyage. Men and women of all ages and circumstances who are trying to sail the voyage of life alone without any pilot except their own desires and inclinations often come to the same end.

"How full the world is of the wreckage of life like this. Our courts of law, jails, asylums, are examples of shattered health and wrecked homes; of poverty, vicious characters and evil habits of every description. For all these lives, however, Christ died. He began his passion this Passion Sunday for them. He loves them, he desired always to be their pilot and captain, but through self will or circumstances they refused him. It is for us to pray for them and help them in whatever way we can that through the mercy and love of Christ they may not be wrecked eternally."

Last of all Mr. Mallery drew a lesson from the church as the ship sailing with God as its captain, but depending for its safety on the faithfulness of the crew which is formed of the people themselves. Appropriate hymns were sung and prayers offered for those at sea.

CARRANZA GENERALS GIVE UP AND CROSS THE BORDER

Washington, March 22.—The Villista consul at Brownsville, Texas, today advised Enrique Llorente, confidential agent here of the Villista government, that General Antonia Villareal, Carranzista commander at Matamoras, had surrendered his command and come to the American side. Colonel Raymaldo Garza, he said, also has given up his command and crossed to the American side.

The hiking club, which proved so popular with the girls last year, will be resumed at the association, and all members who wish to join are requested to register at the office as soon as possible. Miss Wetherell, physical instructor, will again have charge of the hikes.

Tickets are selling rapidly for the Trenton game Saturday night, and indications point to a record crowd at the Columbus Club that evening.

CONTESTANTS FIND MANY HELPERS IN RACE FOR PRIZES

Latest Vote Standing Shows Big Jump in Ballots Credited —Easy to Get Subscriptions for the Press.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.
Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.
Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

Today we publish the revised vote standing of candidates, which includes all votes deposited since the start of the contest up to 8 p. m. last Friday night. There is also another list showing the gains each candidate has made toward winning the special prizes. This list includes all subscription ballots issued and voted since the Special Prize Contest started at midnight Wednesday, March 17.

The candidates in the Press' Transcontinental and Panama-Pacific Tour Contest who are after the extra prizes—a $100 diamond ring and other prizes—report much pleasure in seeing their old friends and making the acquaintance of others interested in the energetic way in which they are conducting their campaign for ballots. Those who are active say that they need little introduction when collecting votes, for those whom they have seen have been interested in their progress and only awaited the time when they should come and ask for their votes.

One out-of-town young woman reported that she secured a subscription which a man was holding for another, but which she secured by only a short conversation with him. Yesterday a man sent in two subscriptions for a contestant who had sent him one of the printed cards which the contest department furnished to those who are collecting votes.

It is too often a case for a contestant to neglect to see neighbors and others who live right in her own section of the city.

Finds Rich Vote Field.

A contestant from a nearby town tells what she did in Plainfield, Saturday. "I thought there would be little use to try for subscriptions in the city," she said, "inasmuch as there are so many well-known candidates whom I supposed had asked all their friends for their support. I had not been out long Saturday morning until I had secured three subscriptions for the Press for two years and several for shorter terms. I found twenty-two people whom nobody had asked for their votes. I was surprised to get so many votes away from my home, subscriptions that were within the immediate reach of many other candidates."

All of which experiences go to prove what the contest manager has insisted on all along, that votes are easy to get if only a little effort and earnestness are shown.

Another experience which some have gone through is worth mentioning. There is a little thrill that cannot be explained when one gets the first subscription. It means from 135 to 3,650 votes, and at the beginning of the week that helped some wonderfully.

Gets Fine Start.

An out-of-town candidate for the $100 diamond ring and other prizes got her enthusiasm when one man gave her a two-year subscription for the Press five minutes after she had decided to enter the special prize contest.

Now, if you want to get the real travel feeling just go to the easiest place you can think of and get that subscription. Take the slip to the next easiest place and show what you have done and get another, and on to the close of the day.

Then send your votes in and when you start out again show the vote you have. My, how much easier your work will go! It may take just one subscription and the votes will come, because of your enthusiasm.

The prizes in the special contest are all on exhibition. First prize $100 diamond ring, purchased from the jewelry store of Charles E. Vail, 236 Park avenue; second prize, $25 merchandise certificate on Woodhull & Martin Company, and $15 in gold; third prize, $35 solid gold wrist watch, purchased from Reliable Jewelry Shop, 245 West Front street.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over; they are beauties, both of them.

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m. April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

"Jimmy Valentine," produced in picture form by the World Film Corporation, will be the feature screen offering at Proctor's Theatre today and also tomorrow. The film is in five parts and tells the story even more intensely than did the dramatization a few years ago. This is only one of the big picture features which Proctor's will have during the present week in addition to the high-class vaudeville bill. For Wednesday afternoon and night the attraction will be Dustin Farnum in the picturization, "The Virginian," while on Thursday the offering announced is the "Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch," with Henrietta Crosman. Charles Chaplin, the world's greatest camera comedian, will be seen on Saturday in another of the Essanay comedies which Proctor's Theatre inaugurated several weeks ago. A Chaplin picture is scheduled for every Saturday as well as a World Film Corporation one reel comedy introducing Broadway's best known and highest priced stars, such as Lew Fields, Thomas A. Wise, Jefferson De Angelis and others. Complete changes of vaudeville are made every Monday and Thursday and with the feature photo-plays as announced above it is easy to see why the claim is just that Proctor's Theatre offers the biggest value for the money anywhere in the State.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

This week's bill at the U. S. Astor is one that is sure to raise the new management of the theatre still higher in the estimation of its patrons. Three of the biggest productions of the moment have been booked as feature attractions, the trio including the first of the new Mutual Master-pictures which are to be produced under the personal direction of D. W. Griffith, creator of "The Birth of a Nation," which is scoring an enormous success now at the Liberty Theatre, New York. Mr. Griffith has been acclaimed the world's premier producer of the silent drama, and the Mutual Master-pictures are to be produced without regard to expense or labor. The week will open with a double bill of feature attractions for today and tomorrow, when Francis X. Bushman, voted the most popular picture actor, will be presented in "The Accounting," and Broncho Billy Anderson, peerless star of Western dramas, will appear in another film production that exploits his marvelous prowess as a cowboy in action.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Local moving picture devotees are reminded of the fact that the Plainfield Theatre has the exclusive contract for the first run of Paramount feature photo-plays. This makes positive assurance that Plainfield Theatre patrons get the very latest and very best. For this week the picture announcements are as follows: This afternoon and tonight, James A. Hearne's famous play of New England life, "Shore Acres;" Wednesday and Thursday the production of the "Rose of the Rancho," in which David Belasco starred Miss Frances Starr; Friday and Saturday, the successful comedy drama, "The Bargain," which crowded theatres in Chicago, New York and other large cities for an entire season. The serial film, "The Trey O' Hearts," was concluded Saturday and the second serial film, "The Master-Key," will be finished Thursday of this week. A new serial even more absorbing than the one mentioned will be commenced at the theatre on Tuesday, March 30, under the title of "The Black Box." Make certain to see the opening installment and you will surely follow it to the finish. Popular prices prevail at the Plainfield Theatre for all performances.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Rehearsals are being held for "Teddy," which is to be presented by the Boys' Athletic Association next Friday night at the Park Club.

The senior English class has just taken up the study of a new book, introduced by the Board of Education, on "The History of English Literature."

The baseball squad is now holding regular practice on Cricket Field every afternoon, and although Captain Smalley is sick, he will probably be out again in a few days.

There is some talk about repeating the "Hall of Fame," which was presented by members of the school last week, in Saengerbund Hall.

A number of students have already signified their intention of entering the contest for the prize offered by the W. C. T. U. to the student of the High School writing the best essay on temperance subjects.

Women of New Jersey and Pennsylvania

Imagination balks at the magnitude of $2,000,000. Only when it is translated into terms of purchasing power does it become comprehensible.

Two million dollars, for example, will support more than 2000 families of moderate income for a year.

Two million dollars will buy more than 200,000 barrels of flour, more than 50,000 sewing machines or 80,000 suits. It will give work for an entire year to 2000 men and women engaged in various productive industries and other occupations that add to the common welfare of the people in all walks of life.

It is $2,000,000 a year that the Full Crew—"excess man crew"—Laws compel the railroads of your States to pay in unearned wages. These laws deprive you of improvements for safety and comfort in travel that this money, now used unproductively, would provide.

How much longer in these times when economy is a universal necessity are you willing to endure this tremendous waste? In the end the cost bears upon you, either in increased rates or decreased service.

Will you use your influence in urging that the people's elected Representatives at Trenton and Harrisburg work and vote for repeal of the Full Crew Laws and place control of the proper manning of trains in the hands of the Public Service Commissioners?

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES TO MEET HERE ON FRIDAY

Elizabeth, March 22—The State Senator and Assemblymen from Union county have been invited to be present at a meeting of the general membership of societies affiliated with the Union County Federation of Patriotic Societies, which will be held at Coward Hall, on Park avenue, Friday evening. A. J. S. Bordeau, of the Protestant Magazine, is expected to be one of the speakers.

The object of the meeting will be to discuss the Keats Bible Bill and the Hammond Insurance Bill. The latter seriously effects all beneficial fraternal societies such as the I. O. O. F., Knights of Pythias, Jr. O. U. A. M., Red Men, Patriotic Sons of America, Orangemen, Daughters of America and Daughters of Liberty, most of which are members of the federation.

BLIND MUSICIAN TO GIVE LENTEN RECITAL

Signar Arturo Nutini, of Newark, the well-known blind violinist and pianist, will give a Lenten recital at Y. M. C. A. Hall, Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock. He will be assisted by J. Louis Minier, accompanist, and Miss Margaret Holden, soprano.

Signor Nutini has been blind almost from birth and to listen to his performances is to realize the value of patience and perseverance in overcoming obstacles to achievement in any undertaking. He is considered a versatile and proficient musician, playing the most difficult pieces with remarkable brilliancy.

Mrs. J. O. Cranston, of Nutley, is spending a few days with relatives and friends in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. John V. Beckman, of West Eighth street, have returned home after spending some time at The Carolina, Pinehurst, N. C.

OUR COSTLY GOVERNMENT.

One of the war cries of the Democrats in the campaign of 1912 was "Republican extravagance," but it will hardly be possible to boast of "Democratic economy' in the campaign of 1916. The Democrats were prodigal rather than economical in their appropriations during the last Congress, even adding twenty-odd millions a year to the already enormous pension outlay.

The statement made public by John J. Fitzgerald, Democratic representative from New York, and chairman of the House committee on appropriations, shows that at the first session of the Sixty-third Congress expenditures to the amount of more than $1,116,000,000 were authorized, and that the total appropriations for that Congress as a whole amounted to more than $2,231,000,000. This is $113,000,000 more than was appropriated by the previous Congress. In addition to the direct appropriations at the late session, contract obligations were authorized to the amount of $37,000,000.

Mr. Fitzgerald's statement, which predicts a heavy deficit for the present year, criticises both Congress and the President and urges reforms in the manner of making appropriations. He proposes a centralization of appropriating authority in the House in one committee instead of scattering it among a number as at present.

President Wilson also favors a change in the present methods. He is quoted as saying that "at present the Administration officials can do nothing but make expenditures as directed by Congress." Chairman Fitzgerald, on the other hand, declares in his statement that the estimates submitted by the Administration "prove that the fault is not primarily with Congress,' adding:

The Executive has been more reckless and improvident than Congress, and with less excuse. In this session the appropriations have been $47,841,025.63 less than asked by the Administration. In the last session they were $36,583,638.47 less. If Congress at both sessions had appropriated all that the Administration recommended the huge total of appropriations would be $84,404,664.10 greater still.

The President is supported by the prevalent opinion that Congress is mainly to blame, but Chairman Fitzgerald's elaborate statement conveys the impression that he is in possession of all the facts. Unquestionably the subject of methods to secure money in appropriations should be most carefuly considered by both the executive and legislative branches of the government in the future.

THE BIRD OR THE CAT.

Assemblyman Hammond, of Somerset county, has introduced a bill for licensing cats which has made him the target for a lot of good natured fun by the editors of many of the papers in the State. The bill, however, undoubtedly has merit, as it has the backing of the New Jersey Audubon Society, which has tried to have a similar measure passed for some years.

That there is merit in the bill is shown by the fact that it is estimated that every stray cat kills fifty birds in a year, and the government figures that forestry and agriculture lose a billion dollars annually through the ravages of insects and rodents. If the birds were not being continually killed off, it is claimed that much of this loss would be done away with because they destroy millions of these bugs and worms. It is estimated that New Jersey's share of the billion is $34,000,000, although how these figures are reached is not stated.

The Audubon Society explains that a cat license is to be desired by cat lovers, first, because it gives the cat a legal status; courts have disagreed as to whether the animal has any definite legal status at present. Second, the bill eliminates the present cruel practice of leaving vagrant cats to roam uncared for, to starve or pick up a precarious living as best they can and to suffer the pangs of hunger and exposure. Third, unless a reasonable measure of supervision and regulation of the cat menace such as the present bill be adopted, those who recognize the danger from spreading of contagious disease by roaming cats and their terrible destruction of bird life, thereby entailing inestimable loss from increase in insect pests, will demand a much less conservative measure.

Bird lovers should support Mr. Hammond's bill because, while imposing no cruelty on cats or hardship on their owners it provides for a reasonable measure of supervision and restriction on one of the worst enemies of the birds, an enemy that in far too many instances has brought to naught carefully planned efforts for the increase of song and insectivorous birds.

The proposition of the Taxpayers' Association to have a survey made of municipal matters is an excellent one, and should receive the hearty co-operation of every department of the government. It does not seem wise to us, however, to send a circular letter broadcast declaring that the "tax burden is becoming insupportable and municipal expenditures excessive." The survey may find that the city is well and economically managed, and aside from a few minor matters there may not be much that can be corrected. We are by no means satisfied that the government of this city in the past has been unduly extravagant, and such a statement as is quoted is unfair to the men who have given their time to city affairs without compensation. The tax rate here is no higher than in other cities in the State, where the valuations are fully as near true value as is the case in Plainfield.

CHURCH 35 YEARS OLD

passed away at his home on East Second street. A somewhat remarkable incident was that the first meeting of the original Consistory was held at his home and the last meeting of the present Consistory was held there a little more than a week ago.

Trinity church was organized March 29, 1880, with 55 charter members by the Classis of Newark, according to the statistics presented by the pastor. The early days of the life of the church were times of hardship and a test of faith. The church property was purchased at sheriff's sale on June 20, 1880, for $12,000. Rev. A. V. V. Raymond was called to the pastorate in January, 1881, and continued as pastor for six years. During his ministry a strong constituency was drawn to the church. He resigned in February 1, 1887, to accept a call to the Fourth Presbyterian church of Albany, N. Y. In 1894 he was elected president of Union College and resigned that position in 1907 to accept the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church, Buffalo, N. Y.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, now pastor-emeritus, was installed as pastor on June 30, 1887. "Lovingly and faithfully did their beloved pastor minister to this devoted and united congregation for a period of nineteen years," said Mr. Broek. "He was a faithful preacher of the Word."

In the early morning of Friday, December 14, 1906, Dr. Schenck was stricken with paralysis which made him an invalid ever since. He resigned on March 3, 1908, as pastor, the same to take effect May 1. For a time Rev. Dr. Edward P. Johnson, of the Theological Seminary, New Brunswick, was the acting pastor. Dr. Schenck was made pastor-emeritus March 18, 1908, with a salary of $1,000 a year.

During Dr. Schenck's pastorate 883 members united with the church. The Bible school grew in enrollment from 231 to 748. Societies were active and a deep spiritual life pervaded the congregation. An indebtedness of $14,000 was paid off and $10,000 expended for improvements.

During the two years of the ministry of Dr. Johnson, intervening between the resignation of Dr. Schenck and the commencement of the pastorate of Rev. J. Y. Broek, the present pastor, the interest was maintained and many accessions to the mebership was made. Mr. Broek was called on October 22, 1908, from the Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park. He accepted and was installed on Monday evening, November 23, 1908, the sermon being preached by his brother, Rev. Albertus T. Broek, of the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, of Newark.

Marconnier Reformed church was taken under the care of Trinity church on March 25, 1900, continuing under the consistorial care until April 26, 1912, about which time it became an independent church with Rev. J. Tucker Lansdale as pastor.

At the spring session of the Classis of Newark, April 21, 1909, the need of a church in the East End was presented and the Netherwood Reformed church was the result. At that meeting $2,875 was pledged to this work, Trinity church contributing $500. Later land was purchased and a portable edifice secured. Rev. Royal A. Stout was the first pastor, being ordained in that church. He was succeeded on May 1, 1914, by Rev. Edward S. Ralston, the present pastor. The congregation is now preparing to erect a new edifice having $10,000 toward that object.

Trinity church during its first twenty-five years contributed $17,219.38 to missions, and during the last ten years $12,844 and $5,728 for other objects, making a grand total of $35,791 for the thirty-five years. Dr. Paul W. Harrison has for several years represented the church as a missionary in Arabia.

On March 12, 1911, the beautiful, sweet-toned organ which has since been in service was presented to the church by the late Elder Albert L. Force and his daughter, Miss Lillian A. Force, in memory of Mr. Force's wife, Mrs. Clara A. Force. The thirtieth anniversary of the efficient organist, Arthur L. Titsworth, was observed on April 28, 1912, and Mr. Titsworth is still serving in that capacity. The present members of the quartet are Miss Sara Etta Raybert, soprano; Mrs. Charles Kendall, contralto; Edmund D. Young, tenor, and Roy E. Titsworth, bass.

Benjamin A. Hegeman, who died November 2, 1903, bequeathed the church $5,000; Mrs. Sarah A. Crane, who died in 1907, left the church $500; Mrs. Charles Hazell, who died on July 23, 1913, left the Domestic Board of Missions $15,700. The beautiful painting of the coat of arms of the Reformed Church of America, which adorns the south wall of the church auditorium, was presented to the church by Alberto Buccino, of New York, in memory of Mrs. Albert L. Force.

The following have served as elders since 1905: Albert L. Force, who died March 7, 1915; George L. VanEmburgh, who died yesterday; Robert Clark, Jr., Horace J. Martin, F. E. Smith, T. R. VanZandt, W. F. Oliver and Henry E. Gayle, and the following have served as deacons during that time: A. K. Willett, M. F. Gano, C. M. Dolliver, E. F. Sheppard, W. R. Kriney, A. B. Cole, Lindlau M. Leek, W. J. Tremeath. The present clerk of the Consistory is Mr. Sheppard, while H. E. Gayle is treasurer and A. K. Willett assistant treasurer.

The total number of members uniting with the church is 1,718, of this number 225 have died and 495 have been dismissed to other churches, making the present membership 834 on the active list and 161 on the separate list, the grand total being 998. 736 children and adults have been baptized and 386 marriages have been solemnized by ministers of the church.

Mr. Broek's review recalled all the activities of the various societies and the improvements made, the total cost of which exclusive of memorial organ, was $6,714.72. It was most gratifying to both pastor and people that Rev. Dr. Schenck was able to be present yesterday and enjoy the service.

BABY SAVING SHOW PLANNED

organized among the various hospitals and charitable institutions of Philadelphia which are interested in children.

The showing of interest encouraged a further effort, and a smaller show, composed of the essential parts of the first, was exhibited in the Philadelphia City Hall for two summers, where over 300,000 people took advantage of the opportunity to obtain its instruction in the care of children. During the intervening winters the show has been loaned to various organization in different parts of Philadelphia for exhibit to the people of their neighborhood.

Mr. Cross said that the Plainfield show is the first and will probably be the last time the show is sent away from Philadelphia, as the intention of the Child Federation is to present it to the Philadelphia Bureau of Health for a permanent exhibit there.

The show consists of electrical displays, photographs, placards and object lessons on the care of the baby, displayed in ways which experience has shown to be the most effective.

The show will be here for the month of April, and for its accommodation the store at 216 Park avenue has been secured. The meeting last night was for the purpose of organizing an executive committee to have charge of its interests in Plainfield, especially in the way of publicity. In this connection those present were able to make valuable suggestions, as nearly all of them are engaged in work of a social service chracter in one connection or nother, while the offers of co-operation were both unanimous and promptly voiced.

The need for "demonstrators," or persons to explain and point out the striking features of the show was made clear by Mr. Cross, and it is hoped to secure co-operation in this line from those who are able to give an hour or two daily or occasionally to this work. To promote and organize this, as well as publicity and the other interests of the show, an executive committee has been appointed, with power to add to its numbers. From this committe four sub-committees will be formed to handle particularly publicity, demonstrations, literature and patronesses. These will be named and announced later. The executive committee is: Mayor and Mrs. Leighton Calkins, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Tilney, Mr. and Mrs. Noah Barnhart, Mr. and Mrs. Frank D. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Yates, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Taliaferro, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Carter, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William W. DISPUTED BOUNDARIES

PLAINFIELDERS OUGHT TO CONSIDER PLAINFIELD FIRST

A city must progress, it must be guided by its optimists, and must approve of enterprises; it must value constructive men more than destructive ones, must have a clear idea of the demands of the future city growth and live up to its ideals.

One of the most essential elements of progress is enterprise. The enterprise of the business men of Plainfield is dependent upon the support of the residents of the city. In the same measure that they co-operate in the support of Plainfield's stores they will share in the prosperity that will be the result of this co-operative effort.

The duty of Plainfield's people to themselves and their obligation to their city, calls upon them to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

They are not asked to make any sacrifice, either of money or quality in order to do this. Rather are they presented with the opportunity of making financial saving and gaining at advantage in quality of the goods purchased.

The old fallacy that it is now necessary to go to the stores of other cities in order to get the best goods at the lowest prices has long been dissipated.

The merchants of Plainfield have proved conclusively that the stores of Plainfield are not surpassed in any respect by mail order houses of the stores of larger cities and that the question of buying outside the city is attended by loss to the purchaser in more ways than one.

The man who has home pride enough to PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS, gets the most for his money. It is easy to be convinced of this fact by visiting local stores. The advertising columns of the local papers will direct you to the most advantageous buying. PATRONIZE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS, CRAFTSMEN and MECHANICS.

A Spring Song

The spring is here! At least I know
It will be in a month or so.
Accordingly I fret and fume;
Routine and I are out of tune.
My daily tasks I'd gladly shirk—
I loathe the very thought of work.
I labor gayly all the year,
But I rebel when spring is here.
I'd be exempt from toil and care
If dad had been a millionaire.
So anarchistic feelings rise
And lodge behind my glaring eyes!
I'm tired of working every day—
I want to laugh and dance and play!
I find it wonderful and new
To notice that the sky is blue;
I cannot rime unless I sing
A song of birds and flowers and spring.
I want to state in these few words—
I love the spring, the flowers and birds;
I want to loaf away the hours
Of spring amid the birds and flowers!
Why this should be I do not know,
But every year I find it so.
That's all!

NATION'S NAVAL STRENGTH WILL PASS IN REVIEW.

Greatest Gathering of American Warships Planned For Next June.

Secretary Daniels has taken steps to arrange for a grand review of the Atlantic fleet at New York in June. He wrote to Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher, commander in chief of the fleet, suggesting that the review take place and that Admiral Fletcher advise him as to whether it would be feasible to carry out the program proposed by Mr. Daniels. The idea is strongly advocated in administration circles, and it seems to be a foregone conclusion that the review, which will be the most remarkable gathering of warships ever seen in American waters, will take place. More than 120 warships, including super-Dreadnoughts will be in line.

Congress already has provided for a review at Hampton Roads, Virginia, in celebration of the opening of the Panama canal, and the review at New York, according to the plan suggested by Secretary Daniels, will be held in connection with these ceremonies. The plan provides that after the function at Hampton Roads the fleet shall proceed to the Panama canal, where it will be reviewed by President Wilson who intends to visit the canal in July to participate in the celebration to mark the formal opening of the great waterway.

Secretary Daniels said that he would give consideration to a proposal that joint army and navy war games be held at New York for the purpose of determining whether the defenses of that city were adequate. It would be impossible, howgver, he said, to have these games at the time of the proposed review in June, but it might be feasible to undertake them after the return of the fleet from the canal.

Secretary Garrison also expressed himself as inclined to favor a joint war game in the vicinity of New York, but he pointed out that the considerable amount of money that would be necessary was not available, and he saw no prospect of getting an appropriation at this session of congress, which will end on March 4.

The Atlantic fleet is now in Cuban waters, with headquarters at Guantanamo. According to the tentative plan outlined to Admiral Fletcher by Secretary Daniels, the fleet would leave Guantanamo in May for Narragansett bay and after arrival there would engage in practice maneuvers and possibly in target practice. Early in June the fleet would proceed to New York for the review and in the same month would go to Hampton Roads for the celebration of the opening of the Panama canal. It is the expectation that President Wilson will review the fleet at Hampton Roads and go from there on a naval vessel to the canal, escorted by the fleet.

BERNHARDT NOT DOWNCAST.

Loss of Leg Fails to Discourage Tragedienne—Expects to Act Soon.

"Seven months of suffering and the shock of the operation have paled Sarah Bernhardt's cheeks, but her eyes have the same wonderful depth and her voice the same tones," says a Bordeaux correspondent about Sarah Bernhardt, whose leg has been amputated. "Lying in her great white bed, she is unhappy, because 'the eddying wind which bends the pines and magnolias prevents my having the window open,' she said.

"To the question, 'Were you not frightened?' she answered:

"'Frightened? Not at all. I fell asleep quite naturally, hearing far away harmonious chimes. Then I awoke to live again. Already I am free from suffering, happy and full of courage, and now I am going to get well quickly. I shall obey the doctors implicitly, but as soon as they permit I shall retake my place in the world.

"'As soon as I have recovered completely I shall resume my classes at the conservatory and then move heaven and earth to realize my dream—create Rostand's "Princess Lointaine."'"

French War Babies Are Strong.

Professor Pinard of the Paris Academy of Medicine contributed an article to the Matin showing that "war children" are stronger and healthier than their predecessors and that France is rapidly repairing her battle losses. An analysis of the Paris statistics for the last six months reveals a diminution of the death rate among mothers and children and a decrease in the number of children born dead.

PARADED IN CELEBRATION OF VICTORY IN CONTEST

In celebration of their winning the library offered by the Plainfield merchants in a contest that closed Wednesday, the pupils of St. Mary's School and their friends held a parade and street demonstration Saturday afternoon. Headed by a fife and drum corps and carrying American flags the children paraded through the principal streets of the city and ended the line of march at Columbus Club.

At the club the representatives of St. Mary's School met with the delegations from the other organizations that competed for the library and an exchange of congratulations was offered.

GIVES UP SOLES FOR SHOES TO AID BELGIAN BABIES

Contributions of $1 each from H. G. P., H. A. R., and a friend were received at the Press office today to be applied to the fund which will be used to purchas milk for the Belgian babies. The $310, which will make it possible to send a third shipment of 4,800 cans of condensed milk from the Plainfield Relief Committee, is now about subscribed, and as soon as the total has been received the milk will be forwarded, and contributions will be sought for another shipment.

The Commission for Relief in Belgium, in its last bulletin, tells of the receipt of five dimes from an ex-convict, who wrote:

"When there is a babe next door or in the next block, in dire need of milk, or a mother in need of nourishment, the ordinary human can comprehend the situation upon learning of it and aid is promptly forthcoming. And so it is easy comparatively for one to picture in his mind's eye the scenes attendant upon specific instances of Belgian babies dying of starvation, as so graphically described by Will Irwin in his 'Babes of Belgium' article. I do not believe he has overdrawn his picture.

"My contribution is not much as contributions go—only five dimes—but it represents the difference between new soles on my shoes or wearing the ventilated old ones a little longer. My five dimes represent five cans of milk for five little Belgian tots. I'll take chances on catching cold. Every success to the work of your Commission in Washington, Idaho and Montana. Here's hoping the supply ship from the Northwest sails loaded to its capacity."

OPPOSES INVESTIGATION.

Trenton, N. J., March 22.—Appearing before the House special committee today in behalf of the New York Telephone and the Delaware and Atlantic Telegraph and Telephone Company, John L. Swayze opposed the Hughes' resolution for investigation into telephone rates charged in New Jersey on the ground that it was impracticable, unjust, would produce no good and would serve only the purpose of imposing upon the State a very large expense.

NEW PUMP INSTALLED.

The new pump for the local fire department's new Nott engine has been received at headquarters and been installed. Preliminary tests are now underway and the final test of the apparatus will be made in a few days, the date to be announced later.

REVIVAL MEETINGS.

BRUGGY GOING GREAT GUNS WITH BRAVES

Former Local Player Looks Like One Best Bet for a Regular Berth.

Frank Bruggy continues to battle away for the position of third catcher with the Boston Braves and his prospects of winning the berth seem to grow brighter daily. Walter Tragressor has been Bruggy's only rival for the position, their struggle for supremacy being one of the features of the Braves' sojourn at Macon. Tragressor has been rated as being a little faster than Bruggy, but the Elizabeth boy has overcome this advantage by superior batting and ability to fill in at almost any position in the line-up.

Bruggy caught for the Yanigans in their game with the regulars on St. Patrick's Day, and although his team was trounced 11 to 0, the rookie pitchers being pounded for thirty hits, Frank showed up well all the way. Six hits were corralled by the Yanigans and of this number, two were scored by the former Plainfielder. One of his slams was a three-base poke, the only safety allowed by Tom Hughes during the three innings he spent on the hill. Frank extracted his second hit from the offerings of Mr. Crutcher. He was at bat three times. He had three put-outs and turned back two runners who tried to pilfer, Maranville being the only speeder to nick a base on him. Tragressor was not in the game.

It must not be taken from this, however, that the Southerner is altogether out of the running for the job. Captain Johnny Evers has declared that both Bruggy or Tragressor are ready now to catch major league ball and it is because of the class possessed by both that Manager Stallings has delayed his selection of a third catcher so long.

LOCAL TEAM "SHOT" MORE CLAY BIRDS

Climax Sharpshooters Put Victory Across at Expense of Metuchen Club.

The Climax Gun Club, of this city, and the Metuchen Gun Club held a trap-shooting contest on the Climax Grounds, on Plainfield avenue, Saturday afternoon, which was won by the local club, the scores being 203 to 200. The contest was close, and the best score made was 43 out of 50. There were a large number of entries, and each man shot at 50 birds.

It was decided to judge the contest by the total scores of the first five men from each team, and the Climax shooters managed to smash three more than their opponents. Tom Brantingham, L. Peck and F. Peck, of the Metuchen team, each tallied a 42 mark, while their other two team-mates registered 41 and 33. For the winners, Percy and John Terry each scored 43, and the next three highest scores were 40, 39 and 38.

Two sweepstake events were run off, and in the first John Terry took first money, while second prize was divided between Tom Brantingham and Tait, both of the Metuchen Club. Percy Terry took first honors in the second event, and Tom Brantingham was second. An all-day shoot will be held by the Climax Club on April 3. The scores follow:

HERE'S A COUPLE TEAMS THAT HAVE SURPLUS ENERGY

The third game between the Columbus Club and the St. Joseph's Boys' Club, will be staged on the Columbus Club court Thursday night. The borough team won two games out of the set of three and are the acknowledged inter-club champions of Plainfield. To complete the series, however, they have consented to play off the third game, but whichever way the decision goes the result will have nothing to do with the championship. The West Front street quintet expects to have all its players back in the lineup and a hard game is looked forward to. The teams will probably lineup as follows:

Columbus Club	St. Joseph's
Coffey	Moulton
Taylor	McDonough forwards
McAfee	Denny
centre
Wilson	Carty
Caulfield	Bryniarski

HOW ABOUT THIS FOR WORSHIPPING IDOLS?

Interscholastic League Teams Competed for an Imaginary Trophy.

Despite the fact that Plainfield High School male basketball representatives have the Interscholastic League title safely tucked under their belts, no trophy for the victor has as yet made its appearance. For the first time in the history of the league no cup was offered for competition, and the delegations from the three schools battled for mere victory. From all indications it would seem that the time is too late to scout around for a donor for this year. Those who give cups generally look forward to gleaning a little advertising out of their benevolence, and it stands to reason that no one is going to present Plainfield High School with a cup after the season is closed.

Saturday the Plainfield boys ordered their championship medals, and although they will leave nothing behind them on the school shelves to commemorate the famous one-point series of 1914-15, they will each be presented with an individual reward. The medals this year will be oblong shaped, and will be solid gold, with a suitable inscription.

P. H. S. BOYS BETTER WITH NEW RULES

Intercollegiate Regulations Help Plainfielders to Beat Easton.

For the second time this season, the Plainfield High School boys' basketball team defeated the Easton High School team, on the local court, Saturday afternoon, by the score of 37 to 29. The first half of the game was played under A. A. U. rules and the second half under intercollegiate rules.

Throughout the first half the teams fought along on almost even terms. When the whistle blew for the end of the first half Easton led by the score of 19 to 16.

The local boys played a much better game playing under the new rules. In the last half the locals outscored their opponents by 21 points to 10. The score:

TITLE ASPIRANTS WINGS ARE CLIPPED

Conroy's Advent into All-Stars' Lineup Put Y. M. C. A. to Rout.

Spectators who witnessed the contest on the Y. M. C. A. court, Saturday night, between the Association boys and the "All Stars," were disappointed with the article of basketball put up by the Front street players, who were defeated by a score of 39 to 23. It took the Y. M. C. A. fully five minutes to recover from the opening daze of the fast playing of the Stars. During the initial period, Glover was injured and his position was taken by Captain Bryniarski, whose playing revealed his indisposition of the past two weeks. The "All Stars'" pivot man had the jump on his opponent and kept the ball continually rolling in his territory and at the conclusion of the first half the Stars had the better end of a score of 16 to 10.

In the second half the boys injected a little more spirit into their play and tied the score in the last five minutes of play at 21 to 21. From then on the association boys lost interest and the Stars caged five baskets in succession, placing the score at the conclusion of the game at 39 to 23.

Stewart and Conroy played the best game for the Stars, while Ricketts was the principle scorer for the Y. M. C. A.

IT'S TIME TO GET RID OF THOSE SPORT "HANG-OVERS"

Spring, gentle spring, was wafted on the wings of balmy zephyrs into town yesterday. Harbingers of the gladsome season of lyrics and lethargy put in their appearance the latter part of last week and were noted by those sportsmen who are wise in the ways of the calendar. Other signs of the advent of spring were a falling off in the demand for red flannel nightcaps, tailors' bills, skates, lap robes, oil stoves, Belgian real estate, hot water bags, snow shovels, hot "Tom and Jerries" and calliblain prescriptions.

All of which reminds us that we'll have to shove our clutch into high speed and get rid of the rest of the basketball games on our 1914-15 menu. In another fortnight basketball will be put on the shelf. In its place will be the ever-welcome national pastime. There remains on our list several big encounters, one being that scheduled for tomorrow afternoon to decide the feminine interscholastic title and the one slated for the latter part of the week between the Y. M. C. A. and Plainfield High School forces for the city title. Then there remains that Trenton-Plainfield State feminine championship encounter for the Columbus Club court next Saturday night and a horde of other clashes to be promoted on the latter floor.

Some doubt remains as to the time, place and referee for the third interscholastic girls' contest. In fact, we'll never be sure of the time until we see a gallery full of people and ten players ready to enter the fray. There has been so much shifting and twisting in this interscholastic game that little stock is placed in reports received twenty-four hours before a combat.

Baseball players got their togs out Saturday and local sand lots were spotted with happy urchins trying to get the winter's kinks out of their salary wings.

VICTORY; THEN REWARD.
There will be a meeting of the St. Joseph's Boys' Club tonight, to pick out the medals which the basketball team won by defeating the Columbus Club. All members are urged to be present as other business of importance is to be brought before the meeting.

INDIVIDUAL HONORS ARE YET TO BE WON

Wright, of Essex, Pushing Murray Hard for Masonic League Honors.

Both Murray and Wright, who are striving for first honors in the individual standings of the Masonic Bowling League, increased their averages slightly during the past week, Murray, of the Tyrian leaders, still holding first place by a slight margin. His mark is now 177.3 against 176.21 last week, while Wright, of the Essex five, advanced to 175.4 from 174.7.

The Tyrian team, which has practically cinched the title, played three games last week and won two of them, but dropped in the average column from 843.28 to 84[illegible]. John Cose, of the Anchor team, now heads the list of local pinners, Fred Fremonger having dropped from 164.14 to 162.1. PROLOGUE.

"Who is she?"

"How did she get there?"

These are the questions the Fool asked of the caretaker of the venerable castle of that high handed old robber baron, the first of the Rothhoefens.

And these are the questions the interested reader starts to ask and keeps on asking while Author McCutcheon develops one of the most mysterious, humorous and sprightly stories that ever came from his pen.

"Who is she?"

"How did she get there?"

Read on and you will find much entertainment as well as the answer to these pertinent queries.

CHAPTER I.

I Make No Effort to Defend Myself.

I AM quite sure it was my Uncle Rilas who said that I was a fool. If memory serves me well he relieved himself of that conviction in the presence of my mother—whose brother he was—at a time when I was least competent to acknowledge his wisdom and most arrogant in asserting my own. I was a freshman in college, a fact—or condition perhaps—which should serve as an excuse for both of us. I possessed another uncle, incidentally, and while I am now convinced that he must have felt as Uncle Rilas did about it, he was one of those who suffer in silence.

I assume, therefore, that it was Uncle Rilas who orally convicted me, an assumption justified to some extent by putting two and two together, after the poor old gentleman was laid away for his long sleep. He had been very emphatic in his belief that a fool and his money are soon parted. Up to the time of his death I had been in no way qualified to dispute this ancient theory. In theory, no doubt, I was the kind of fool he referred to, but in practice I was quite an untried novice. It is very hard for even a fool to part with something he hasn't got. Not until Uncle Rilas died and left me all of his money was I able to demonstrate that dead men and fools part with it.

In any event Uncle Rilas did not leave me his money until my freshmen days were far behind me, wherein lies the solace that he may have outgrown an opinion while I was going through the same process. At twenty-three I confessed that all freshmen were insufferable and immediately afterward took my degree and went out into the world to convince it that seniors are by no means adolescent.

My uncle's original estimate of me—as a freshman, of course—was uttered when I at the age of eighteen picked out my walk in life, so to speak. After considering everything I decided to be a literary man—a novelist or a playwright, I hadn't much of a choice between the two, or perhaps a journalist. Being a journalist, of course, was preliminary, a sort of makeshift. At any rate I was going to be a writer. My Uncle Rilas, a hard headed customer, who had read Scott as a boy and the Wall Street News as a man without being misled by either, was scornful. He said that I would outgrow it; there was some consolation in that. He even admitted that when he was seventeen he wanted to be an actor. There you are! said he.

I argued that novelists make a great deal of money and playwrights, too, for that matter. He said in reply that an ordinarily vigorous washerwoman could make more money than the average novelist, and she always had a stocking without a hole to keep it in, which was more to the point.

Now that I come to think of it, it was Uncle Rilas who oracularly prejudged me and not Uncle John, who was by way of being a sort of literary chap himself and therefore lamentably unqualified to guide me in any course whatsoever, especially as he had all he could do to keep his own wolf at bay without encouraging mine and who besides teaching good English loved it wisely and too well.

My mother felt in her heart that I ought to be a doctor or a preacher, but she wasn't mean. She was positive I could succeed as a writer if I set my mind to it. She was also sure that I could be president of the United States or perhaps even a bishop. We were Episcopalians.

When I was twenty-seven my first short story appeared in a magazine of considerable weight, due to its advertising pages, but my Uncle Rilas didn't read it until I had convinced him that the honorarium amounted to $300. Even then I was obliged to promise him a glimpse of the clock when I got it.

In course of time my first novel appeared. It was a love story. Uncle Rilas read the first five chapters and then skipped over to the last page. Then he began it all over again and sat up nearly all night to finish it. The next day he called it "trash," but invited me to have luncheon with him at the Metropolitan club and rather noisily introduced me to a few old cronies of his.

A month later he died. He left me a fortune, which was all the more staggering in view of the circumstance that had seen me named for my Uncle John and not for him.

It was not long afterward that I made a perfect fool of myself by falling in love. It turned out very badly. I can't imagine what got into me to want to commit bigamy after I had already proclaimed myself to be irrevocably wedded to my profession. Nevertheless I deliberately coveted the experience and would have attained to it no doubt had it not been for the young woman in the case. She would have none of me, but, with considerable independence of spirit and, I must say, noteworthy acumen, elected to wed a splendid looking young fellow who clerked in a jeweler's shop in Fifth avenue. They had been engaged for several years, it seems, and my swollen fortune failed to disturb her sense of fidelity. Perhaps you will be interested enough in a girl who could refuse to share a fortune of something like $300,000 (not counting me, of course) to let me tell you briefly who and what she was. She was my typist—that is to say, she did piecework for me as I happened to provide substance for her active fingers to work upon when she wasn't typing law briefs in the regular sort of grind. Not only was she an able typist, but she was an exceedingly wholesome, handsome and worthy young woman.

Somehow I was able to attribute the fiasco to an inborn sense of shyness that had always made me faint hearted, dilatory and unaggressive. No doubt if I had gone about it roughshod and fiery I could have played hob with the excellent jeweler's peace of mind, to say the least.

Still, some men, no matter how shy and procrastinating they may be—or reluctant, for that matter—are doomed to have love affairs thrust upon them, as you will perceive if you follow the course of this narrative to the bitter end.

In order that you may know me when you see me struggling through these pages, as one might struggle through a morass on a dark night, I shall take the liberty of describing myself in the best light possible under the circumstances.

I am a tallish sort of person, moderately homely and not quite thirty-five. I am strong, but not athletic. Whatever physical development I possess was acquired through the ancient and honorable game of golf and in swimming. In both of these sports I am quite proficient. My nose is rather long and inquisitive, and my chin is considered to be singularly firm for one who has no ambition to become a hero. My thatch is abundant and quite black. So there you are. Not quite what you would call a lady killer or even a lady's man. I fancy you'll say.

You will be surprised to learn, however, that secretly I am of a rather romantic, imaginative turn of mind. Since earliest childhood I have consorted with princesses and ladies of high degree—mentally, of course—and my bosom companions have been knights of valor and longevity.

At thirty-five I am still unattached and, so far as I can tell, unloved. For the past year I have done little or no work. My books are few and far between. My best work is done when the madding crowd is far from me.

A month ago, in Vienna, I felt the plot breaking out on me, very much as the measles do, at a most inopportune time for everybody concerned, and my secretary, more wide awake than you'd imagine by looking at him, urged me to coddle the muse while she was willing.

It was especially annoying coming, as it did, just as I was about to set off for a fortnight's motorboat trip up the Danube with Elsie Hazzard and her stupid husband, the doctor.

The fourth day of our delectable excursion brought us to an ancient town whose name you would recall if I were fool enough to mention it and where we were to put up for the night. On the crest of a stupendous crag overhanging the river, almost opposite the town, which isn't far from Krems, stood the venerable but unvenerated castle of that high handed old robber baron, the first of the Rothhoefens.

We picked up a little of its history while in the town and the next morning crossed over to visit the place. Its antiquity was considerably enhanced by the presence of a caretaker who would never see eighty again and whose wife was even older. Their two sons lived with them in the capacity of loafers and, as things go in these rapid times of ours, appeared to be even older and more sere than their parents.

It is a winding and tortuous road that leads up to the portals of this huge old pile. Halfway up the hill we paused to rest, and I quite clearly remember growling that if the confounded thing belonged to me I'd build a funicular or install an elevator without delay.

The next day instead of continuing our delightful trip down the river we three were scurrying to Saalsburg, urged by a sudden and stupendous whim on my part and filled with a new interest in life.

I had made up my mind to buy the castle!

At the end of three days I was the sole owner and proprietor of a feudal stronghold on the Danube, and the joyous Austrian who had owned it was a little farther on his way to the dogs, a journey he had been negotiating with great ardor ever since coming into possession of an estate once valued at several millions.

The Venerable Castle of That High Handed Old Robber Baron, the First of the Rothhoefens.

To make the story short, the Hazzards and I returned to Schloss Rothhoefen in some haste, primarily fo the purpose of inspecting it from dungeon to battlement. An interesting concession on the part of the late owner of the gentleman hurrying to catch up with the dogs that had got a bit of a start on him may here be mentioned. He included all of the contents of the castle for the price paid, and the deed, or whatever you call it specifically set forth that I, John Bellamy Smart, was the sole and undisputed owner of everything the castle held.

Our second and more critical survey of the lower floors of the castle revealed rather urgent necessity for extensive repairs and refurbishing, but I was not dismayed. With a blithesome disregard for expenses I dispatched Rudolph, the elder of the two sons, to Linz with instructions to procure artisans who could be depended upon to undo the ravages of time to a certain extent and who might even suggest a remedy for leaks.

My friends, abhorring rheumatism and like complaints, refused to sleep over night in the drafty, almost paneless, structure. They came over to see me on the ensuing day and begged me to return to Vienna with them. But, full of the project in hand, I would not be moved. With the house full of carpenters, blacksmiths, masons, locksmiths, tinsmiths, plumbers, plasterers, glaziers, joiners, scrubwomen and chimney sweeps, I felt that I couldn't go away and leave it without a controlling influence.

Just as they were leaving my secretary and my valet put in an appearance, having been summoned from Vienna the day before. I confess I was glad to see them. The thought of spending a second night in that limitless bedchamber, with all manner of night birds trying to get in at the windows, was rather disturbing, and I welcomed my retainers with open arms.

My first night had been spent in a huge old bed, carefully prepared for occupancy by Herr Schmick's frau. I knew there was a ceiling, for I had seen its beams during the daylight hours, but to save my soul I couldn't imagine anything so far away as it seemed to be after the candles had been taken away by the caretaker's wife, who had tucked me away in the bed with ample propriety and thoroughness combined.

Twice during that interminable night I thought I heard a baby crying. So it is not unreasonable to suppose that I was more than glad to see Poopendyke, my secretary, clambering up the path with his typewriter in one hand and his green baize bag in the other, followed close behind by Britton, my valet, and the Gargentuan brothers bearing trunks, bags, boxes and my golf clubs.

"Whew!" said Poopendyke, dropping wearily upon my doorstep.

My secretary is a youngish man with thin, stooping shoulders and a habit of perpetually rubbing his knees together when he walks.

"It is something of a climb, isn't it?" said I beamingly.

"In the name of heaven, Mr. Smart, what could have induced you to"—He got no farther than this, and to my certain knowledge this unfinished reproof was the nearest he ever came to openly convicting me of asininity.

"Make yourself at home, old fellow," said I in some haste. I felt sorry for him. "We are going to be very cozy here."

"Cozy?" murmured he, blinking.

"I haven't explored those upper regions," I explained nervously, divining his thoughts. "We shall do it together in a day or two."

"It looks as though it might fall down if we jostled it carelessly," he remarked, having recovered his breath.

"I am expecting masons at any minute," said I, contemplating the unstable stone crest of the northeast turret with some uneasiness. My face brightened suddenly. "That particular section of the castle is uninhabitable, I am told. It really doesn't matter if it collapses. Ah, Britton! Here you are, I see. Good morning."

Britton, a very exacting servant, looked me over critically.

"Your coat and trousers need pressing, sir," said he. "And where am I to get the hot water for shaving, sir?"

"Frau Schmick will supply anything you need, Britton," said I, happy on being able to give the information.

"It is not I as needs it, sir," said he, feeling of his smoothly shaved chin.

"Come in and have a look about the place," said I, with a magnificent sweep of my arm to counteract the feeling of utter insignificance I was experiencing at the moment.

* * * * * * *

A day or two later the castle was swarming with workmen. The banging of hammers, the rasp of saws, the spattering of mortar, the crashing of stone and the fumes of charcoal crucibles extended to the remotest recesses. The tower of Babel was being reconstructed in the language of six or eight nations.

Poopendyke, in great distress of mind, notified me on the fourth day of rehabilitation that the cost of labor as well as living had gone up appreciably since our installation. In fact it had doubled. He paid all of my bills, so I suppose he knew what he was talking about.

"You will be surprised to know, Mr. Smart," he said, consulting his sheets, "that scrubwomen are getting more here than they do in New York city, and I am convinced that there are more scrubwomen. Today we had thirty new ones scrubbing the loggia on the gun room floor, and they all seem to have apprentices working under them. The carpenters and plasterers were not so numerous today. I paid them off last night, you see. It may interest you to hear that their wages for three days amounted to nearly $700 in our money, to say nothing of materials and breakage."

"Breakage?" I exclaimed in surprise.

"Yes, sir, breakage. They break nearly as much as they mend. We'll—we'll go bankrupt, sir, if we're not careful."

I liked his pronoun. "Never mind," I said; "we'll soon be rid of them."

"By the way," he said, "old man Schmick and his family haven't been paid for nearly two years. They have put in a claim. The late owner assured them they'd get their money 'from the next'—"

"Discharge them at once," said I.

"We can't get on without them," protested he. "They know the ropes, so to speak, and, what's more to the point, they know all the keys. Yesterday I was nearly two hours in getting to the kitchen for a conference with Mrs. Schmick about the marketmen. In the first place, I couldn't find the way, and in the second place all the doors are locked."

"Please send Herr Schmick to me in the—in the"— I couldn't recall the name of the administration chamber at the head of the grand staircase, so I was compelled to say: "I'll see him here."

"If we lose them we also are lost," was his sententious declaration. I believed him. We kept the Schmicks.

On the fifth day of our occupancy Britton reported to me that he had devised a plan by which we could utilize the tremendous horse power represented by the muscles of those lazy giants, Rudolph and Max. He suggested that we rig up a huge windlass at the top of the incline, with stout steel cables attached to a small car which could be hauled up the cliff by a hitherto wasted human energy, and as readily lowered. It sounded feasible and I instructed him to have the extraordinary railway built, but to be sure that the safety device clutches in the cog wheels were sound and trusty.

That evening, after the workmen had filed down the steep looking for all the world like an evacuating army, I sought a few moments of peace and quiet in the small balcony outside my bedroom windows. My room was in the western wing of the castle, facing the river. The eastern wing mounted even higher than the one in which we were living, and was topped by the stiffest watch tower of them all. We had not attempted to do any work over in that section as yet, for the simple reason that Herr Schmick couldn't find the keys to the doors.

Suddenly I found myself staring as if stupefied at the white figure of a woman who stood in the topmost balcony of the eastern wing, fully revealed by the last glow of the sun and apparently as deep in dreams as I had been the instant before.

(To be continued.)

Of Interest to Women and the Home

THIS IS THE 1915 OUTING MAID.

Blazer coat and short outing skirt both have flare now and the new outing-silhouette has changed radically from last season. The skirt pictured here is of white corduroy in a well cut gored model with a band of the corduroy reversed at the foot. The blazer coat, of green and white striped wool, has a flaring cut also which the trim belt holds within bounds.

MUSIC CONVENTION.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 22—A five-day convention of the Music Supervisors' National Conference opened here today, to consider problems affecting the public schools of the entire country. Arthur W. Mason, of Columbus, O., president of the conference, was in the chair. Delegates were present representing the schools in nearly ever State in the Union.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"What have you on hand for this morning?" asked Dick as he rose from the breakfast table.

"Oh, various things. Why?"

"I thought if you would have time to attend to it, I'd leave my overcoat and have the sleeve lining sewed in. I got all mixed up trying to put it on yesterday, and Miss Rudolph said she'd bring a needle and sew it in for me today."

"She is very officious, I am sure," blazed Nell. "I guess it's hardly come to a pass where pert girls, who want to get into the limelight, have to do your mending."

Dick stared.

"The coat is never here when I have a minute to repair it," continued Nell, argumentatively.

"It's always here evenings," began Dick.

"Perhaps you may recall that I started to mend it night before last and you insisted on my coming to bed." Nell had produced her work basket and was threading a needle.

"It was bedtime then; ten o'clock is too late to think of beginning a job."

"It's never too late to mend," laughed Nell, ashamed of the heat she had shown.

"I'd like to express the hope that my socks will be mended when I put them on tomorrow. It's a little early in the season to have my toes sticking out to get the air."

"Richard Norton, I darned all of your socks before I put them in your drawer; what did you get hold of that needed mending?"

"Well, one of the last pair I put on had a little hole in the heel." There was long-suffering patience expressed in his tone.

"As for this mending late at night," he continued, "it takes you long enough to get to bed as it is. I lie there with the light in my eyes for hours, waiting for you to get your hair in curlers—your face massaged——"

"Dick Morton, you're mistaken!" declared Nell. "I haven't massaged my face for a month. I'll be old and have 'wrinkles enough to hold a day's rain' before many years, just because you fuss so about my getting to bed, and who was it that was criticizing my uncurled hair the other evening?" Nell was pink with her effort to be impressive.

"I surrender!" Dick threw up his hands and brought them down with a swoop, inclosing Nell in the circle. "While you are in the business today, there are several buttons on my clothes that are off or about to come off; look them over, will you?" he added after he had kissed her.

"Surely, you are like cheap furniture, always coming apart. I've a notion to return you and try to get a more satisfactory article." She pinched both ears as she kissed him goodby.

Household Hints

WORTH KNOWING

When grating potatoes for potato pancakes or other uses, place potato on a strong fork and you will not only use up all the potato but will save scratching your fingers and knuckles.

Blackening Brown Shoes—Dissolve in boiling water a lump of washing soda the size of a walnut; when cold rub well over and into the brown leather. This will darken them. If shoes are then polished with shoemaker's ink (two coats being applied) they will be a good black and will take additional polishes as any other black shoe.

On icy steps and walks the best thing is ground cork. Better than ashes, for it does not track in the house and you do not slip on it.

To Clean Combs and Brushes—Put rounding tablespoon borax in one quart water. Let combs and brushes stand in the borax water one-half hour. Then use a stiff brush on combs—it takes but very few moments to clean them.

Men's cast-off percale shirts afford material for making handy, quite good-sized kitchen aprons. Take back of shirt, gore slightly at top of apron, which comes out just under yoke of shirt, to fit smoothly; hem sides to match small hem at bottom; put on band, and a handy apron is result. These wear for a long time.

Apply a little butter on spout of cream pitcher; will prevent contents running down outside, always a source of annoyance.

To kill worms on gooseberries, sprinkle with alum water.

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Beef Tail Soup—Buy a good beef tail—one with some fat on large end. Cut at joints, put it on to boil in plenty of water, adding more as it boils away. Boil until meat falls off bones. Strain off enough clear soup for four dishes. It will be very rich. Now remove bones, add to balance of broth two carrots, two onions, two turnips, two potatoes diced, more water if needed, or any leftover vegetable. Cook until done, season with salt and pepper. Just before removing from fire, take a tablespoon of flour mixed smooth with salt and water, add to above, bring to a boil; serve. Add more water if too thick.

Fish Chops—If canned salmon be used, drain juice, remove skin and bones, and pick fine. Add teaspoon lemon juice and dash of paprika. Make white sauce as follows: Two tablespoons butter, one-fourth cup flour. Add fish and a teaspoonful chopped parsley; when cold shape into chops. Put piece of macaroni into end of chop, to represent chop bone. Fry in deep fat.

South American Salad—Take two cups cooked rice and half can salmon; mix with fork, seasoning with half teaspoon salt and a little pepper. Then pour over mixture a dressing made as follows: One tablespoon alive oil, two tablespoons vinegar, one teaspoon mustard; mix thoroughly. Set on ice till ready to serve. Serve on lettuce leaves. This salad also makes a delicious filling for sandwiches.

Sponge Drops—Three eggs well beaten, three-fourths cup sugar stirred in eggs, one cup flour in which you put one teaspoon baking powder, add to mixture one teaspoon vanilla. Drop on greased tin some inches apart and bake. Very desirable and dainty dessert.

SPONGE CAKES

No. 1—Three eggs beaten to a cream, 1½ cups sugar, add half cup cold water, two cups flour in which have been sifted two teaspoons baking powder, one saltspoon salt, flavoring to suit taste (try grated rind of half lemon). Bake in rather quick oven.

No. 2—One and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup sugar, two eggs broken into cup and cup filled with milk or cream. Stir all together in mixing bowl, beat hard for few minutes. Bake in muffin pans or pan with a chimney.

No. 3—Beat four eggs, two cups sugar, two cups flour with two heaping teaspoons baking powder sifted in; add a little lemon juice or extract and two-thirds cup boiling water. This makes a large cake.

These cakes may be put together with sweetened whipped cream, cornstarch filling or jelly.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Her Family.

One day in the summer good Mother McGrew
Said, "Children I'll tell you what I think we'll do.
If you will be good, just as soon as it's dark,
I'll take you out for a good time in the park.

"The Park as you know is a great deal of fun
For there are so many nice things to be done.
There's the big roller-coaster and all sorts of swings;
The shoot-the-chutes, too, and all manner of things."

The animals shouted, "Oh my, what a lark!
We always have wanted to go to the park."
And so, just as soon as their supper was done,
They started out for an evening of fun.

Now none of them ever had witnessed such sights.
They stared at the crowd and they blinked at the lights;
They rode in the swings; they ate peanuts and fruits,
And finally decided that they'd shoot the chutes.

Now in shooting the chutes you are drawn to the top
Of the chutes in a car; then as you know, you stop
For a second or so at the top of the chute
While your car is turned round and then downward you scoot.

So into the car all the animals hopped
And were drawn to the top where, of course, the car stopped;
But the Goat was impatient, he just couldn't wait,
So he jumped out and shoved the car, sad to relate.

And every last animal quickly fell out
And into the lake where they floundered about;
But their lives were all saved by a man in a boat,
Then Mother McGrew seized the naughty young goat.

Said she, "You have brought the whole family disgrace;
You never again shall come into the place."
She meant what she said and she kept her word, too.
I think the Goat really deserved it, don't you?

JACK RHINEHART IN ROLE OF "AMATEUR" DETECTIVE

Johnny Rinehart, the debonair police court clerk in the local headquarters, who when "off duty" lurks around the village of Dunellen, made his debut as an "amacheur" detective, Friday night, when he put the police of that place "wise" to the fact that there was a real, live Jesse James "hanging out" around there. Rinehart, who has been educated to "smell" a real hold-up man two blocks distant, noticed a suspicious character pacing the sidewalk on Penfield place, Dunellen, and notified the minions of the law.

Chief Marshal Mohan and Night Marshal Tarpey, armed with a "kill 'em dead" outfit that made them resemble human arsenals, proceeded to run down the individual described by the keen-eyed Rinehart, and soon had Joseph Zaremba, aged 18, in their clutches.

When searched it was found that he had a revolver in his hip pocket, and he was held for arraignment before Recorder David S. Campbell, Saturday night. When asked where he got the weapon and what he intended to do with it, the young man said he found it along the railroad banks, and thought it was smart to exercise up and down the avenue with the lead distributor tucked away in his trouser pocket. After dealing out a severe reprimand, during which he emphasized the harm that could be done by the business end of a pistol, and the seriousness of the charge of carrying concealed weapons in the eyes of the law, Recorder Campbell fined the offender $10.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

STUDY ART IN A PRACTICAL WAY

Visits to Famous Studios Described at Monday Afternoon Club Meeting.

THE TOWER OF JEWELS

Artistic Colorings of Panama Exposition Explained—Mrs. Howard Huntington Tells of "Some Tendencies of Modern Art."

The art department of the Monday Afternoon Club held an interesting meeting in the parish house of the Congregational church, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Howard Tracy, chairman of the department, presided. Two weeks ago the chairman and a number of members visited several studios in New York to get a glimpse of the work of the artists Members of the delegation gave their views of the visit at yesterday's meeting and of the cordial reception given them by the sculptors. The committee visited the studio of Daniel C. French, the dean of sculptors, who showed the visitors his works, one of which especially appealed to the local women being "The March of Civilization," a cast of a woman and six figures depicting the different advances of civilization. At Jules Guerin's studio the Plainfielders were shown photographs and pictures. Mr. Guerin also told the visitors of the Exposition, saying it was the most exquisite of any exhibit ever held.

The buildings are all of Roman travertine, giving a soft ancient gray color and the tendency to impress a spectator with an atmosphere of 300 years back. Mr. Guerin has charge of the color scheme of the Exposition, thus producing a unity and charm in the buildings. The bright colors are all principally massed in the doorways. The speaker also told of the "Tower of Jewels," a magnificent building of variously colored electric lights, giving the impression of millions of jewels at night. The club also visited Miss Evelyn Longman's shop and hope to have the pleasure of hearing this sculptress in Plainfield shortly.

"Some Tendencies of Modern Art" was the subject of a paper written by Mrs. Howard Huntington and read by Mrs. Frank W. French. The article revealed the thought and study given to the subject. Mrs. C. G. Munro also read an interesting paper on the cubist and futurist art, telling of the revolt of the modernists from all that is inspiring and beautiful and their scorn of imitations, motion and light. The new movement, it is thought, will not elevate art, the cubist ignoring all rules of past art. During the French revolution a similar movement was started but after a short life the artists went back to old principles. Several of the members of the art department in speaking to noted artists, asked their opinion of the new work, but each expressed dislike of it. Everyone hoped something good might come out of the new movement.

EAST END RESIDENTS WANT SIDEWALK IMPROVEMENTS

Representatives from the East End Civic Association appeared at the meeting of the Councilmanic street committee in the Council chambers last night to protest against the condition of sidewalks in the Netherwood section of East Second street. Several protests have been previously filed regarding the condition of the pavement, and an urgent request was made that immediate action be taken. Chairman Francis J. Blatz assured the delegation that a thorough inquiry would be made into the matter, and it is possible that a conference betwen the street committee and the city street department will result in the matter being brought to the attention of the Common Council, with a recommendation for needed improvements.

A letter was received from residents of the West End living in the immediate vicinity of West Third street and Plainfield avenue protesting against a stone storage yard that it maintained at the juncture of these two thoroughfares. This application has also confronted the committee on previous occasions, and it is not unlikely that action will now be taken to do away with what is considered by residents of that section as a nuisance, detrimental to the development of property. Routine matters occupied the remainder of the session.

PLAINFIELD ELKS PLAN DOVER TRIP

Large Delegation Will Witness the Morris Co. Boys' Annual Minstrel Show.

Arrangements are well under way for a goodly delegation of the members of Plainfield Lodge of Elks to make the trip to Dover to attend the 1915 theatrical production of their brother lodge of that town. This is probably the only amateur show staged in Northern New Jersey which compares with that of the Plainfield Lodge of Elks, and it has oft been stated that these shows are without a third parallel in amateur theatrical circles.

Dover Lodge of Elks' show this year includes a cast of fifty people the majority of whom have taken part in their shows for years past and have come to know the game, and with the progress already made at the rehearsals the success of the show is practically assured. The building and painting of the two sets of special scenery has been completed and the members of the lodge are fast disposing of the tickets which may be exchanged for seat reservations on and after March 30 at 8 a. m., at the Baker Theatre box office.

Delegations will also be present from Paterson and Morristown lodges and two full houses will undoubtedly greet this big production. There will be a large attendance from Plainfield, as a very warm feeling exists between these two lodges, and it will be remembered that last year a delegation of about thirty from Dover lodge visited the Plainfield show and were very royally entertained. V. W. Nash, Jr., is arranging the trip.

The dates set for the Dover Lodge of Elks' show are Tuesday and Wednesday, April 6 and 7, and they are bound to be two merry evenings for all who attend.

WOMEN'S FEDERATION OF MISSIONS ELECT

Annual Meeting is Held at Warren Chapel Followed by a Tea.

Rice, the retiring president, presided at the opening of the meeting and after a short devotional program the minutes of the last meeting were read, also the reports of the treasurer, secretary and chairmen of the two standing committees. The officers elected for the coming year were as follows: President, Mrs. Edward Ralston, Netherwood Reformed church; first vice-president, Mrs. Edward G. Read, Crescent Avenue church; second vice-president, Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey, Warren chapel; third vice-president, Mrs. Howard Case, First Baptist church; fourth vice-president, Mrs. Frank E. Greene poured tea, while the following women served: Mrs. John Higgins, Mrs. George Hoagland, Mrs. Frank Burner, Mrs. David Smith, Mrs. David Kline, Mrs. Gibson Smith and Mrs. Hattie Taynor.

POLICE CANDIDATES WILL BE EXAMINED TOMORROW

Physical examinations for the fourteen applicats for positions on Plainfield's police force will be held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. City Physician Norman W. Currie will also conduct a medical test at that time.

DUNELLEN HAS A BIRTHDAY PARTY

Twenty-nine Year Old Borough Booming Along Municipal Lines.

CELEBRATION PROGRAM

Speakers Tell of Its History and Name—Organization of Citizens' Committee Urged—Music a Feature of the Affair.

Dunellen's twenty-ninth birthday anniversary was fittingly observed by the citizens of that borough yesterday. Numerous residences and places of business were decorated with American flags, and in the evening a program that will long be remembered was given, under the auspices of the Board of Trade. The program consisted of speechmaking, music and recitations, followed by refreshments and dancing.

The affair opened with piano selections by Miss Helen Swackhamer and Miss Margaret Fuller. The opening speech was made by President Joseph G. Walton, of the Board of Trade. He advocated the organization of a Citizens' Assistance Society, to aid any of the boroughites who may be out of employment.

Mr. Walton then introduced Mayor Latham to act as chairman of the meeting. Mayor Latham introduced George W. Day. He said, in part:

"Dunellen was organized as a part of Piscataway by John Taylor Johnson, then president of the Central Railroad, in 1866, who conceived the idea of laying out towns along the road. It was named after Ellen Dunn, a favorite niece of Mr. Johnson, whose name was afterward reversed. One of the first purchasers of Dunellen property was N. A. Stevens, and the first houses were built in 1869. These were erected by John Runyon and Mr. Richardson. Mr. Runyon's home is now occupied by John Manning. This is probably the first house finished in Dunellen. The first paper published in Dunellen was a monthly issued by John Forbes, in 1875. The Methodist church is the borough's oldest church. The Whittier School was built in 1874."

The next speaker was A. F. Todd, president of the Board of Education, who gave a lengthy speech on school matters.

Richard M. Ryan, president of the Common Council, the last speaker of the evening, spoke very ably on the borough's future.

Intermingled with the speeches were: A song, "Dutch Kiddies," by Evelyn Bellows; vocal solos, by the Dunellen Quartet; a poem, "Dunellen's Birthday," by Edna Dix; violin solos, by Archie La Rue, assisted by Miss Florence Bunting, and a comical recitation, "Just Because I Ate That Lemon Pie," by Evelyn Bellows.

PRINTING COMPANY TO ERECT MODERN PLANT

The Rush Commercial Printing Company, which recently filed papers of incorporation at the office of County Clerk James C. Calvert, with main offices in this city, has been granted a permit by Inspector T. O. Doane for the erection of a printing establishment on Leland avenue, about 300 feet north of North avenue.

The structure will have a frontage of thirty-five feet and run back to a depth of about seventy feet. The superstructure of the building will be of hollow terra cotta block, and will be but one story in height. The estimated cost has been placed at $3,500. James Gibbs, of Leland avenue, has been awarded the general contract. The work on the building will be started this week, while the labor will be pushed, looking toward an early opening of the establishment.

CONDITIONS IN MEXICO CITY SAID TO BE GRAVE

Washington, March 23.—In spite of the optimistic reports given out by officials of the State Department it was learned on official authority today that conditions in Mexico City are far worse than they have been at any time since the evacuation of the city by General Obregon. In a despatch to the State Department it was said that conditions are worse there than at any time since early in February. Instructions for the movements of the State Department representatives in the Mexican capital were asked.

FINE SPEAKERS TO ADDRESS THE "VETS"

Assemblyman Runyon and Supervisor Krebs Secured for Celebration.

Captain William Hand, who was made a special committee of one to secure speakers for the Appomattox surrender anniversary to be held in Reform Hall, April 9, has already listed two local orators of pronounced ability. H. C. Krebs, of the borough, former principal of the North Plainfield schools and now supervising principal for Somerset county, will outline the historical features of the great capitulation from the viewpoint of a student of history. He will be followed by Assemblyman William N. Runyon, whose powers of oratory are a source of pride for Plainfielders, who will tell of the reconstruction that followed the end of the great war and led to the great united nation of today. Several other speakers have been asked to contribute addresses and responses are expected at any time. There will also be plenty of patriotic music.

Winfield Scott Post, which is making the arrangements, has sixty-five members. Every one of them is working as a unit to make the celebration the most pretentious of its kind Plainfield has ever had. Every G. A. R. man in this vicinity is to be mailed an invitation card that will rouse up all the enthusiasm that has been latent for many years. Chief T. O. Doane heads the committee of arrangements and he is being ably assisted by Captain Hand and H. Craig Smith.

CHANCE TO LEARN ABOUT THE SURVEY

Taxpayers Should Attend the Mass Meeting in High School Next Thursday.

Many of the taxpayers who received notices of a mass meeting to be held under the auspices of the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association, in the Plainfield High School Auditorium next Thursday night, are at a loss to understand the exact nature of the meeting, and many questions have come to light. In some instances voters have received five, six and even nine notices of the meeting, but on the whole the general rsponse to the membership campaign of the organization has been encouraging. The reason for the extra notices being sent to the same individual was explained to a Plainfield Daily Press reporter this morning by a member of the association, who said that the letters had been addressed from the names appearing on the local tax list. Through a mistake in some cases more than the one announcement was sent out. There was no intention of offending voters, and it is thought that public opinion, as a whole, will not be offended at the seemingly too pressing invitation to join the civic body.

Other questions have been raised by the wording of the announcement accompanying each letter, some of those receiving letter being led to believe that the survey therein mentioned was separate and distinct from the one proposed by the Common Council. This, however, is untrue, as the Plainfield Taxpayers' Protective Association is merely furthering the work launched by the Council, and has consented to accept the burden of financing the propositions. There will be but one survey, but an extra expert will be needed to investigate school conditions, inasmuch as the Municipal Bureau of Research, which will probably conduct the local survey, does not handle school departments.

More information concerning the nature of the proposed investigation of the local administration may be gleaned by those interested at the mass meeting in the High School Auditorium, at which time Mayor Austin Scott, of New Brunswick, and John Henney, of the Councilmanic finance committee, of Montclair, will be speakers. Surveys have been made in each of these towns.

WERE ONLY WITNESSES.

Contrary to a previous report, Carl Jorgenson and Theodore Johanson were not members of a squad of fighters that was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court yesterday morning. They appeared in court as witnesses.

COLONIAL PARTY.

Under the auspices of the Beta Alpha Class of the First Baptist church Bible school, a colonial party will be given in the lecture room Friday evening. There will be a program of old songs and refreshments will be served.

RULES TO GUIDE PUPILS' PARENTS

Regulations Suggested by P. H. S. Parent-Teacher Association Last Night.

SOCIAL LIFE DISCUSSED

Speakers Deliver Excellent Addresses on Subject to a Large Gathering—Things Parents Must do to Produce Results.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Plainfield High School Parent-Teacher Association was held in the High School Auditorium, last night, parents and relatives of school children and members of the North Plainfield High School Parent-Teacher Association being in attendance. Following a thorough discussion of "The Social Side of the High School Pupil's Life in the School and in the Home," led by Henry Crofut White, George W. Wriston and William D. Murray, the following resolutions were adopted by the members of the organization:

First—Realizing that a certain amount of amusement is essential to every human being, and especially to every young person, parents should first see to it that children are given some opportunity for amusement and should seriously consider the time, place, amount and character of such amusement.

Second—Boys and girls of school age should refuse all invitations to parties, theatres, etc., during the school term except occasionally on Fridays and Saturdays. Parties and theatre-going should be limited during holidays.

Third—Parents should know their children's friends and become thoroughly acquainted with them.

Fourth—Parents should, as often as possible, accompany their children to their different places of amusements; not so much as chaperons, but as companions and interested spectators.

These resolutions summarized the consensus of opinion voiced at the meeting and the subject was so thoroughly discussed by the speakers that very little informal questioning was conducted by the members of the association. They met with the unanimous approval of the meeting and it goes without saying that they will be injected into the home life of a large number of High School students.

Mr. White spoke on the recreation side of the High School pupil's life. He advocated the doing away of the old idea of "to cram in" and to adopt the modern principle, "to bring out." He declared that industrial, social and commercial efficiency is aimed at by the educators of today. He said that originally labor and play were one and that people always made a demand for a certain amount of recreation. Mr. White said that dance halls and saloons have taken the place of open-air recreation fields of our predecessors and theatres and motion picture shows visualize that which young people demand. He made a plea for organized play and declared that social life in the schools and in the home was a great asset to the development of a child's character.

William D. Murray dwelt on the topic from the standpoint of the home, summing up his talk with five "Musts," as follows:

First—The father and mother must have unity of puprose concerning the social life of the school pupil.

Second—Parents must retain their children's confidence.

Third—Parents must recognize their children's age and give them the rights of that age.

Fourth—Parents must know what their children are doing.

Fifth—Parents must realize the effect of example.

George W. Wriston, professor of mathematics in the Plainfield High School, lauded the supervision of dramatics and athletics as maintained in the Plainfield schools by the faculty and the co-operation of the parents with the teachers.

During a short business meeting which preceded the talks the association named the following nominating committee to select names for the annual election which will be held on April 25: Mrs. W. H. P. Veysey, chairman; Mrs. J. H. Blanchard and Mrs. H. G. Henwood. At the annual meeting reports of committees for the year will be presented. Professor J. C. Evans, of the Plainfield High School, will give an elaborate demonstration at that time on the work of his department. The president of the association was given authority to confer with Miss Addie Parker, of the public schools' physical department, concerning the proper method of carrying books for school children.

SAYS BOOCOCK WAS NOT IN RIGHT MIND

Henry J. Cochran, Vice-President of Bank, Declares Books in Good Shape.

Howard Boocock, treasurer, of the Astor Trust Company, of New York city, of which Henry J. Cochran, of Hillside avenue, is vice-president, shot his wife as she was playing the pianola, in their home at 36 East Seventy-fourth street, New York city, at 9 o'clock last night, and then shot himself. Both were dead when a physician arrived. What inspired the double tragedy is unknown, the maids in the house being unable to tell of any marital troubles, and the officials o fthe bank denying that Mr. Boocock had any financial troubles.

Mr. Cochran learned of the tragedy before he boarded a train for his home in this city last night, and said that he knew of no reason for the banker's rash act.

"Mr. Boocock returned to work about ten days ago after undergoing an operation for intestinal trouble," said Mr. Cochran. "The operation was performed about four weeks ago. Mr. Boocock had been very nervous since he came back. You can't make it too plain that the books of the bank are in perfect shape. Two weeks ago they were examined by the State Banking Department and found to be correct in every way. I am sure Mr. Boocock could not have been in his right mind."

Something that came up at dinner evidently led to a disagreement between the couple, who were both about thirty-nine years old. The maid who served dinner said that Mr. Boocock was talking excitedly during the meal and seemed angry. They had dinner about 7:40 o'clock, and after it was over Mrs. Boocock took her coffee in the parlor, which is on the first floor, with the dining room just behind it, where Mr. Boocock stayed.

PUBLIC TO BE URGED TO ATTEND HEARING

Preparation of the School Budget to Be Started on April 1.

The Plainfield Board of Education, it was annouced at a meeting last night, will begin the preparation of the school budget for the coming year at a special meeting on Thursday, April 1. Further announcement is to be made, and the public is to be urged to attend. This is in line with the public hearing to be given on the city budget.

The Board adopted a new set of by-laws and rules for procedure, the preparation of which has been pending for some months. Under the new rules, the work of the Board will be carried on by three committees, the school, building and finance committees. President Archibald Cox appointed these committees as follows:

School, Messrs. Cox, Woodhull and Hedges; building, Messrs. Woodhull, Tilney and Hubbard; finance, Messrs. Tilney, Hedges and Hubbard.

Hereafter the regular meetings of the Board will be held on the second Tuesday in each month instead of the first Monday, as has been the practice for many years. This change is made in order to enable creditors of the Board time to submit their monthly bills prior to the meeting of the Board at which they are to be approved.

Announcement is made that all bills must be in the clerk's office properly verified, as required by the State law, not later than the fourth day of each month. No bills received after that date will be considered at the meeting of the Board held during that month.

FILES CLAIM UNDER THE EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT

Elizabeth, March 23.—Alleging permanent injury to his right arm as a result of that member being caught in a circular saw at the Rushmore Dynamo Works in Plainfield, March 9, 1914, Michael, J. Cooney, a foreman in the plant, and living at 644 West Fourth street, Plainfield, has filed a claim under the Employers' Liability Law in the Court of Common Pleas. He was receiving $19.25 per week and seeks half his salary for 300 weeks. He claims that his arm was gashed from the elbow to the palm of his hand and that four of the fingers have become stiff and affected so that he cannot pursue his usual labors. John P. Owens is his counsel.

GERMANS PLAN TO LEAVE ANTWERP

Will Entrench From Yser to the Meuse Where Final Stand Will Be Made.

RHEIMS IS BOMBARDED

Great Enthusiasm in Petrograd Where Victory Was Greater Than Expected—Russians Gain Marked Advantage Over Turks.

New York, March 23—A cable from Amsterdam to the Herald, from R. F. Feibelman, says: News which reaches me from a most authoritive quarter, indicates clearly that the Germans intend to evacuate Antwerp by May 1. They will entrench directly from the Yser to the Meuse, where they expect to make their final stand in Belgium.

Paris, March 23—The French war office gave out the following statement today:

"The enemy bombarded Rheims yesterday. A German aviator thowing bombs upon the city made three of the civilian inhabitants his victims.

"In Champagne, we advanced slightly to the east of hill No. 196.

"In the Argonne the enemy made two violent counter attacks in an effort to regain the ground lost by him Monday. He was completely repulsed.

Petrograd, March 23—Events which preceded the final desperate sortie of the beleagured garrison in the Austrian fortress of Przemysl, designed to break through the encircling ring of Russian troops, are described in an official communication issued here last night. The statement says:

"During the last days before the final sortie the garrison received increased rations. Each soldier was given biscuits to last five days, warm new clothing and new boots. Officers were instructed to explain to the troops that if they returned to the fortress an inglorious fate awaited them and consequently they must pierce the Russian front at any cost.

"An easterly direction was chosen for the sortie as the line of least resistance, as well as because it led to the district where the Russians had large stores of arms and ammunition.

"More than 20,000 men were ordered to participate in the sortie, but several units refused to move, despite the urgings of the commanders. Only the Twenty-third Honved division and some parts of the Eighty-fifth Landwehr and Fourth Hussars took an active part. They were promptly and decisively defeated."

Today's official report issued by the Russian headuarters says that fighting occurred Sunday in the trans Tschorokh and Alaschgard districts, the Russians gaining marked advantages over the Turks.

Berlin, March 23 (by wireless)—The following statement was given out at German headuarters today:

"Eastern theatre—German troops pursuing the Russians driven from Memel have occupied the Russian town of Krottingen and freed more than 3,000 German inhabitants driven away from Memel by the Russian troops. Russian attacks on both side of the Orzyc River have been repulsed.

"Western theatre—Two night attacks by the French near Carency, northwest of Arras, were repulsed by our troops yesterday. In Champagne, German troops successfully blew up mines. They also repulsed a night attack north of Beausejour. Aviators of the enemy again threw several bombs upon Ostend. No military damage was done, but several Belgians were killed and wounded. A French aviator was shot down northwest of Verdun. A French aircraft manned by two non-commissioned officers was forced to land near Freiburg. Its occupants were taken prisoners."

GEORGE EGEL IS ELECTED DICTATOR OF MOOSE LODGE

The Loyal Order of Moose elected officers at its meeting held in the lodge rooms last night. The following were chosen to serve: George Egel, dictator; Martin Whelan, vice-dictator; Edwin Conkling, prelate; Eugene Lawton, treasurer, and Charles Pagliuca, trustee for three years. The installation will take place on April 12.

SUFFRAGE PROGRESS.

Women will vote in New Jersey next year, if the majority of the men give their consent at the November election. So much has been decided by the Legislature's adoption of the resolution submitting woman suffrage to the voters for a decision.

Certainly suffragists have every reason to feel encouraged by the progress of their movement in recent years. Little did those chivalrous cowboys of Wyoming dream of what was to come when, forty-six years ago, they conferred the ballot by way of compliment on perhaps half a hundred women whom they worshipped as goddesses. It was the chivalrous cowboys who actually began the movement, for they acted before there was any genuine agitation among women themselves. It is true that Elizabeth Cady Stanton, the anti-slavery reformer, called a "woman's rights convention" in a private house at Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1848, twenty-one years earlier, but that was really a part of the anti-slavery movement which by that year had reached an incandescent stage, and Mrs. Stanton sought "votes for women" with the aim of regulating certain affairs of the Southern States by means of a reconstruction of the slavery-providing Federal Constitution.

The movement that began in Wyoming in 1869 made no further progress for twenty-four years. Not until 1893 did Colorado become a woman suffrage State. Utah and Idaho followed in 1896. After the lapse of fourteen years Washington joined the slender column. Then progress became more rapid and every year since 1910 has witnessed one or more victories for the "cause."

The reports from States wherein women have voted for years do not seem to indicate any material change for better or worse. In those States the voters have divided on every question, including liquor, just about as before. Universal woman suffrage, if it should come, may not double the present vote in the country at large because of the noticeable neglect of the privilege on the part of so many women very soon after it has been acquired, but a considerably larger vote appears to be the only definite result that can be counted on with any degree of certainty.

The goal sought by the local committee for relief in Belguim, so that another shipment of milk can be made to the babies, has about been reached. As has been told in our news columns, each $310 raised provides 4,800 cans of condensed milk, which will keep 725 babies alive for a month. The local committee has already made two such shipments, in addition to sending a large quantity of clothing and other necessities. During the past two weeks a large number of Plainfielders have contributed one dollar or more each to the Belgian babies fund, but there is plenty of opportunity left, for as soon as the $310 now being raised is subscribed, the work of collecting for another shipment will be begun at once. So send along your contribution, whether it is a dime, a dollar or ten dollars. All of the money will go for saving starving children.

Counsel for the company in opposing the Hughes resolution introduced in the Assembly to investigate the New York Telephone Company said that such an investigation would be impractical, unjust, would produce no good and serve only the purpose of imposing upon the State a very large expense. If all this is true what difference does it make to the 'phone company? It seems to us that when they object to being investigated, it is time to start the work.

New Brunswick citizens have formed a good government league, which will place fifteen men in nomination for the five city commissioners, under the new form recently adopted there. From these fifteen the people of the city will be asked to choose the men who will rule the city, and to ignore other candidates. This is a sensible way of handling the matter, and should result in the selection of a very satisfactory commission.

By the way, what has happened to the economy and efficiency measures that the Republicans promised us in all seriousness they would pass during the present Legislative session. If by any chance they are neglected there will certainly have to be a lot of explaining done on the rostrum in October.

An Atlantic City milliner testified the other day that stimulants, such as whisky, were positively needed by those in her trade. At last the cause of the styles in women's headgear is explained.

The reported surrender of Przemysl will at least be welcomed by the tired copy readers.

If the women get the vote will the national color be yellow?

HENRY LIEFKE IS CHOSEN PRESIDENT

LOCAL OPTION BILL DEFEATED.

The Gaunt local option bill, after its passage through the Senate three weeks ago, met defeat in the Assembly last night. After a debate that was bitterly waged pro and con, the measure was killed by a vote of 44 to 13, three members being absent. Assemblymen Runyon, Morgan and Pierson, of Union county, supported and voted for the bill, while Assemblyman Hammond, of Somerset county, voted against the bill.

CONTRIBUTE $2 TO THE FUND.

One dollar was received today from the Junior C. E. Society, of Dunellen, and $1 from Mrs. Mehlenbeck, for the Belgian Relief Fund, with which to purchase milk for the Belgian babies.

WORK STARTED ON RELAYING NETHERWOOD TROLLEY TRACKS

Work on reconstructing the Netherwood trolley line from Richmond and East Sixth streets to the terminal at the Netherwood depot was started by a gang of Public Service employes this morning. New rails and ties will be installed all along the route between these two points.

Many complaints have been made against the present condition of the trolley track bed and this is the first altering that has been done since the original rails were laid twenty years ago. It is one of the most important branches of tracking connected with the local trolley service and carries patrons to and from both the Netherwood and Plainfield Central Railroad depots.

COURT VINDICATES JOHN A. GALATIAN

John A. Galatian, a detective in the Union county prosecutor's office in Elizabeth, was awarded a verdict of $150 and costs of court by Judge Abe David, in Elizabeth, this morning, in an action for slander brought against Victor D'Aloia, a Newark lawyer. In granting the verdict the court took occasion to completely vindicate Galatian, who was represented by Walter E. Hetfield, Jr., of the local law firm of Reed & Hetfield, and branded the allegations said to have been made by the Newark attorney as being without foundation. The detective, in a statement, said that he would turn the $150 over to a charitable institution in Elizabeth.

The action grew out of an incident that occurred in the witness room of the Union County court house when Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein, the Newark lawyer, Chief Kiely, of the local police, and Galatian were in conference. According to witnesses D'Aloia called Galatian a crook declaring that he withheld money taken from a Greek prisoner, arrested under a charge of false pretense. More arguments followed and the two interested parties flew at each other, Chief Kiely stepping between the would-be combatants and preventing more serious trouble.

Mr. Hetfield called Prosecutor Stein as a witness and he related the conditions under which the argument started and substantiated Galatian's charge that the Newark man referred to him as a crook. The defendant endeavored to prove that the money had been misappropriated by Galatian but his testimony bore little weight with the court.

WHEN FATHER WAS A BOY

Why Kelly-Springfield Tires cost more to buy but less to own

The stamp of quality is as obvious on Kelly-Springfield Tires as it is on any other hand-made article of genuine worth. It is as inimitable, as unmistakable as the impress of good breeding on a man or woman. But

Kelly-Springfield

Tires are not made so carefully merely to give them an air of distinction; it is mileage that is built into them so slowly and painstakingly by hand. And judged by the acid test of road mileage, Kelly-Springfield Tires are as good as they look. They are built up to a standard—not down to a price-list.

Made to Make Good

Hereafter the basis of adjustment will be:

In Ford sizes, plain tread, 6,000 miles; Kant Slip 7,500 miles. All other sizes, plain tread, 5,000 miles; Kant Slip tread 6,000 miles. The word "adjust" is merely figurative, because in 1914 the total adjustment in Kelly-Springfield Tires for the whole United States was less than 1%. You get this unequalled service in uninterrupted mileage — not adjustment.

Before buying some other tire at a lower price analyze the basis of adjustment offered by the other maker—see what you really do get for less money.

ONLY SHORT WAIT FOR THE WINNERS OF EXTRA PRIZES

Names of Successful Candidates in Seventeen Days' Race Will Be Given as Soon as Special Contest Closes—Enthusiasm Over Coming Tours.

First Prize.
$100.00 Diamond Solitaire Ring.

Second Prize.
Merchandise Certificate, good for $25.00 in trade at Woodhull & Martin Co., 163 East Front street, and $15.00 in gold.

Third Prize.
$35.00 Solid Gold Wrist Watch.

Some of the candidates have asked if the names of the winners of the extra prizes will be announced at the end of the special prize period, or at the end of the contest. The answer to this is that the close of the special prize period will be at 10 o'clock on the evening of April 3, and just as soon as the work of verifying the subscriptions as to old and new is done, and the votes are counted, the names of the winners will be announced.

A few days of the special prize period have now passed and the candidates are busier than ever securing votes. Candidates should note well that the subscriptions to count for the extra prizes can be turned in immediately and the votes issued on them can be retained by the candidates and held in reserve until the end of the special contest. The standing for the winning of the extra prizes will be determined by the number of votes which were issued on subscriptions turned in during the period commencing March 17 at midnight, and ending April 3, and not according to the number which will have been deposited in the ballot box since the contest began, February 23.

Enthusiasm Over Prizes.

The offer of the special prizes has added enthusiasm and determination among a large number of the candidates, and in every district there are many who have made up their minds to be at the head of the list when the winners are announced. They fully realize that their chances for winning one of the prizes has greatly increased.

In the event of not winning the diamond ring, there are two other prizes which are really worth while and deserve the best efforts of all the candidates.

While attempting to win one of these extra prizes candidates must bear in mind the fact that at the same time they are advancing their standing toward the winning of one of the district prizes.

Prizes on Exhibition.

The prizes in the special contest are all on exhibition. First prize $100 diamond ring, purchased from the jewelry store of Charles E. Vail, 236 Park avenue; second prize, $25 merchandise certificate on Woodhull & Martin Company, and $15 in gold; third prize, $35 solid gold wrist watch, purchased from Reliable Jewelry Shop, 245 West Front street.

The jewelry prizes are on display at the above stores, and every person is invited to look them over; they are beauties, both of them.

Not Limited to Districts.

The special prizes will be awarded as follows:

The first prize, the diamond ring, will be given to the candidate, regardless of district limitations, who turns in the greatest number of votes on paid-in-advance subscriptions between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m., Saturday, April 3.

The second and third prizes will be awarded respectively to the candidates who have the second and third largest numbers of votes issued as in the case of the winner of the first prize.

The above are all extra prizes and will in no way interfere with the winning of the delightful tours across the continent; for, of course, all votes turned in for these special prizes will count also for the principal prizes—the tours.

Candidates Must Hustle.

Only votes issued on paid-in-advance subscriptions turned in between midnight, Wednesday, March 17, and 10 p. m. April 3, will count for the special prizes. No ballots cut from the Press will count for these prizes, but will be accepted and will count for the tours.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The attraction at the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon and tonight, is the legitimate production of John Fox, Jr.'s charming story of the Kentucky hills," The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Pictures will be the attraction for the remainder of the week, and will comprise the latest Paramount releases. For tomorrow and Thursday the offering will be "The Rose of the Rancho," from the play as staged by David Belasco, and in which Miss Frances Starr made her first and greatest success. This is pronounced by experts to be one of the finest ever flashed on the screen. Another big dramatic sketch, "The Bargain," is scheduled for Friday and Saturday. The Plainfield Theatre's new serial film, "The Black Box," will be presented for the first time Friday. It is a guaranteed success and patrons of the popular playhouse should make certain to see the opening installment in order to follow it to a finish. Manager Shannon promises several big Paramount feature surprises in the near future, announcement of which will be made in these columns within the next few days.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Gardner-Vincent and Company, whose offering headed the change of the vaudeville bill at Proctor's Theatre, described their act as a "comedy novelty fantasy in three surprises." It was vastly more than this. There were at least a dozen surprises and the act creates almost one constant roar of laughter. There is no describing it. The only way for readers to verify the statement is to see it. Harry Cutler, the renowned English comedian, is also a feature number on the bill for the first half of the week. He made such a hit at his initial appearance with his character songs and talk that the audience would not let him go until he responded to four encores. The vaudeville program is completed by Canfield & Carlton, comedy skit, "The Hoodoo;" Bell & Eva, novelty bounding trampolinea ct, and Holly Hollis, singing comedienne "Jimmy Valentine," yesterday's feature photoplay, gripped the audience from start to finish and is certain to please succeeding audiences. More big pictures are announced for this week, among them being Duston Farnum in "The Virginian," tomorrow afternoon and night, and Henrietta Crosman, in "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch." Thursday afternoon and night, Charles Chaplin, the funniest man in picturedom will be seen at Proctor's, Saturday afternoon and night in another of his special comedy screenettes, introduced at the theatre several weeks ago, and in addition to this the Saturday program will include a second World Film Corporation comedy, "Health By the Year," featuring Jefferson De Angelis, the most versatile comedian on the legitimate stage. The Proctor management seeks to give the local amusement loving public the greatest return for the admission price that is to be had in the city, and the fact that almost capacity audiences attend every performance applauds the policy.

PLAINFIELDERS AT EXPOSITION.

Among those who registered at the New Jersey Building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, last week, are the following Plainfielders: Henry Dresselt, Charles F. Goggins, Chester W. Galloway and Robert R. Morgan.

Robert Fairchild, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Fairchild, of Franklin place, who underwent an operation for appendicitis last Friday, is doing as well as can be expected.

Miss Annette VanMater, of Myrtle avenue, is spending a few weeks with friends in Boston.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally If You Eat Meat Regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

NOW WHADDAYA GONNA DO ABOUT IT? CITY TITLE SERIES GOES UP THE FLUE

Inability on the part of the managers of the Plainfield High School and Y. M. C. A. basketball teams to make satisfactory arrangements for the third and deciding game for the city championship and the Ritz trophy has led to the permanent cancellation of the match, which has created much interest among court fans, and the series, which is now tied, will go unfinished. The decision that was reached yesterday afternoon after a conference of the managers, is one [illegible] the final game, which was booked to take place this week, would have been a fitting close to the season in this city. The matter which could not be agreed upon was the question of the court, and with firm ideas of their own regarding the playing of the third game, both managers held out to the last. The High School booker stood for a toss up between the High School and Y. M. C. A. courts, while the association manager wanted the battle fought on a neutral court.

Saengerbund Hall, Columbus Club, T. A. B. Hall and a Westfield court were mentioned as possible places for the game, but all of these were thrown aside, and the Ninth street manager wanted the flip of the coin to decide the place. After hearing of the disagreement between the two managers, Mr. Haff, of The Ritz Corporation, which offered a prize at the beginning of the series, decided to withdraw it, for although under the circumstances as he saw them, he favored a neutral court, he was in no way connected with the management of the series.

Although the series will not be decided, the association team still lays claim to the city title, having won it earlier in the season, and simply tried to defend that honor in this game with the school team. Both teams have gained financially on the series, large crowds attending both of the matches that were played.

PLAINFIELD EAGLE PINNERS TO PLAY RETURN MATCH

The Plainfield Eagles' bowling team will make a trip to Elizabeth on the night of Tuesday, March 30 to play the T.A.B. pinners at that place. This will be a return match, and the locals will have to play their hardest to come out ahead, as the Elizabethans came here several weeks ago and took two out of the three games on the Second street alleys.

The trip will be made in a special car that will leave the trolley station at 6:45 o'clock, and a delegation of local T. A. B. members will accompany the Plainfield Aerie players. A big time is being planned for in the [illegible] and the local people will undoubtedly have a fine time.

VOLLEY BALL RESULTS.

Two games of volley ball were played in the Indian League at the Y. M. C. A., yesterday afternoon, the Iroquois team losing to the Omaha team by a score of 14 to 9 while the Wawayanda tribe made seven points to the Sioux five.

The committee in charge of the event is composed of Messrs Darwin P. Kingsley, St. Andrew's; Wilson S. Kinnear, Sleepy Hollow; D. W. Cooke, Montclair; Albert B. If either is a club member it will meet the requirements.

The tournament will be a two-ball foursome, thirty-six-hole handicap event. Fathers will play with their sons as partners, and there will be gold medals for each of the pair making the best net and second best net scores.

WATCHUNG BASKETEERS WIN FROM CLOVER AGGREGATION

The Clover five and Watchung basketball team met in Columbus Club, last night, and the mountain players took the large end of an 18 to 13 verdict. The game was close at all times, and it was not until the last few minutes of play that the Watchung team rallied and put their score ahead of their opponents' mark.

Boylan, of the visitors, was the individual star of the game, getting five goals from the field, while Sullivan made a total of five points for the Clovers. The scores follow.

GIRLS WILL PLAY BOYS AND THEN FEED THEM

The St. Joseph's Boys' Club will end its basketball season on Friday night, April 9, when they will appear in a burlesque basketball game with the Chi Gamma Chi girls on the Columbus Club court. A feature of the game will be the fact that the boys will wear hobble skirts and have one hand tied during the contest. The game will probably be played, one half with lines and one without, girls' rules prevailing throughout the thirty minutes. These games have been staged in surrounding towns and have proven to be a novel form of entertainment, and indications point to a capacity audience at this game.

In order to smooth their ruffled feelings after the contest the girls will serve the male members of the team with a "feed," while the spectators will have the privilege of dancing.

BREAD AND CAKE SALE.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Monroe Avenue M. E. church will hold a bread and cake sale in Epworth House, Saturday afternoon, April 3, beginning at 2 o'clock. There will be a fine assortment of home-made bread and cake made by members of the society.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

After a half hour's "rabble-dabble" in the offices of the Plainfield Daily Press yesterday afternoon the managers of the Plainfield High School and Y. M. C. A. basketball teams announced that they could not agree on a playing court for the third city title game and that the contest would probably never be played. You can probably picture "Nick" Zelmas, the silvery-tongued orator of the P. H. S. forces, and "June' Dunning, the lanky defender of Association ideals, having it hot and heavy in a supposedly confidential talk-fest. Right you are. They had it hot and heavy, the meeting opening with the two exponents on peaceable terms, gradually waxing hot under the collars and finally bidding side glance adieu to each other. They were no better off than when they started although they had unnerved a corps of neutral pen-pushers in the Press office and had expelled a lot of perfectly good energy during the terse interview. Zelmas stood out for "home rule," demanding that a coin flip decide whether the game should be played on the Y. M. C. A. or P. H. S. court. Dunning roosted on the fence demanding that Saengerbund Hall be pressed into service or that a coin flip decide whether the issue should be waged on a Westfield or Columbus Club squared arena. Neither would budge an inch and after the thermometer in the immediate vicinity of the managerial talent had reached a heighth of ninety degrees going north, they parted, each agreed on one point, that they would not give in to the other. Hence the scurrying around of certain "big lights" this morning with various plans for mediation. Yea Bo! The European scrap had nothing on that session.

While we're giving the city title aspirants the up and down and double-cross we might as well establish a stand on this championship fracas. With two good courts such as exist in the Plainfield High School and Y. M. C. A. there is no reason why a couple of perfectly law-abiding basketball teams should go outside the city limits to pick a playing floor for that rubber match. Saengerbund Hall, being on the other side of the boundary line, and Westfield High School being so far remote from the Queen City that we sometimes deign to refer to it as Mt. Ararat; therefore are blotted from the argument. Columbus Club has a court but it is doubtful if it would suit the purpose. One thing appears certain and that is that one team is greatly in fear of the other. One is afraid to venture to Ninth street and the other wants to steer clear of Front street. There should be a law against teams of irresponsible juvenile magnates hiring outside courts on which to stage battles and any individual who dares venture a suggestion for playing a club match on a court for which good money has to be paid for rental purposes should be put in the front rank of the German army. These youngsters don't know a good thing when they see it and while their dads are shouting the "economy and efficiency" gag they are taking drastic steps to find ways to deplete two institutions' treasuries.

FIFTH ELK-PARK CLUB MATCH ON FOR THURSDAY

The Park Club and Elk Senior bowlers will meet for the fifth time this year on the Watchung avenue lanes, Thursday night. The "Bills" need two of the games to get an even break in the third series, and if they make a clean sweep they can claim supremacy over the Washington avenue crew. All of the loyal rooters that have been following the interclub competition right along will undoubtedly be present to cheer their respective teams on to victory.

Johnny Campbell will probably replace Waldorf, who played in the last match. Those who will compose the teams are: Park Club, Long, Barlow, Lyman, Daniel and Mulford; Elks, Nash, Blatz, Campbell, Kiely and Vail.

T. A. B. GIRLS RECEIVE BASKETBALL INSTRUCTION.

Forty girls reported to the coach in the T. A. B. Hall, last night, for the initial basketball practice of the T. A. B. Girls' Club. Miss Helen Bryniarski, who has had three years of experience in the basketball field, has been selected to coach the squad, and she explained the rudiments of the court game to the young women, who evidenced great enthusiasm in the indoor sport. The coach expressed satisfaction at the first showing of the girls, there being much promise of available material for a representative aggregation. No definite arrangements were made for the teams last night, but steps will shortly be taken whereby four teams will be organized and an inter-team series of games will be played.

The next practice of the squad will be held Monday night in the T. A. B. Hall.

WAYWAYANDA ATHLETES CAPTURE THREE PLACES

The Wawayanda team, of the Indian League, of the Y. M. C. A., made three places in the dive for form event held yesterday afternoon. Boyle, of that team, was first, receiving the highest percentage. The results follow: Boyle, Wawayanda; Wilson, Sioux; Gates, Omaha; Krausse, Wawayanda; Endress, Sioux; Angleman, Omaha; Neilis, Iroquois, Gos, Wawayanda; Randolph, Sioux; Kennedy, Iroquois.

Y. M. H. A. GAME SCHEDULED FOR COLUMBUS CLUB

The Y. M. H. A. basketball teams of this city and Perth Amboy will hook up for the second time this season on the Columbus Club court tomorrow night at 8:30. The locals went to Perth Amboy a short time ago and walloped the home team, and they expect to repeat the trick again. There was a large margin between the two scores at Amboy, and on their home court the Plainfield five should be able to run away from their opponents.

The local team will be without the services of Hymie Abrams, who is at present ill at his home, and the following will probably be in the line-up: Rosenson, Cantor, Hirsh, Schwartz and Davidson.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG
Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. It's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

Needed—A Federal Law Governing Liquor Advertisements.

There are now eighteen Prohibition States in the Union. It is reasonable to expect before the close of the year at least three more. These States have outlawed the liquor traffic. They don't want the saloon in their midst; neither do they want a substitute for the saloon. One of the greatest evils the dry State has to contend against is the mail order liquor house. Outside liquor interests carry on extensive campaigns of advertising in an endeavor to override the law of the people of these Prohibition States. The Webb-Kenyon law has been of tremendous assistance in minimizing the sales of the mail order liquor houses. It has removed the protection of the Federal government from liquor shipments which otherwise would be safe under the interstate commerce law.

Some of the States, in order to more effectively control liquor shipments, have embodied in their law enforcement measure anti-advertising clauses. West Virginia prohibits advertising by circular letter, newspaper or billboard, and this provision of the law has been upheld by the Federal court.

Alabama has enacted a more stringent anti-advertising law, prohibiting the sale and circulation within the State of newspapers, no matter where printed, carrying liquor advertisements. This law is yet to be tested in the courts.

Alabama's Legislature memorialized Congress, asking for a Federal law to prohibit the use of the mails for the distribution of liquor advertisements just as the Federal law prohibits the use of the mails for distribution of lottery tickets, or lottery literature. The law regarding liquor advertising is to hold good only with reference to dry territory. Such a measure has been introduced in Congress.

The Federal government should give the dry States every reasonable help to make Prohibition prohibit, and it is not unreasonable to ask that Federal protection for liquor advertisers in dry States should be removed.

Prohibition Becoming a Dominant Issue.

The daily press carried a news item, bearing a Washington date line of March 9, which, whether it is a correct forecast of the situation or not, at least shows the tremendous proportions the Prohibition movement has assumed. The article referred to appears under the head:

Finish Fight on Liquor Believed Certain in 1916.

National Leaders Declare That Dominant Political Parties Cannot Escape Issue.

The story reads in part as follows:

Rebel against it as hard as they may, the national leaders of the dominant political parties in the United States can see little or no chance of escape from a finish fight over the liquor question on the floor of both Presidential nominating conventions in 1916.

United States Senator Moses E. Clapp, of Minnesota, has added his name to the list of Senate members who insist that a clear-cut statement on the liquor question by the two dominant parties cannot be avoided. Senator Clapp follows the lead of United States Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, and makes the fifteenth member of the Senate recently to serve warning that the question of Prohibition is to be pressed to the front in the 1916 Presidential conventions and campaigns.

Assemblyman Quinn's Labor Union Declares for Local Option.

At a largely attended meeting of the Central Labor Union, at Perth Amboy, last week, which includes the union of which Assemblyman Quinn is a member, a resolution was adopted favoring the local option bill, and requesting Assemblyman Quinn to support the same.

Quinn is president of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor and second vice-president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, the largest organization of skilled workmen in the world.

A Bill to Stop "Can Rushing."

Assemblyman Iobst, of Hunterdon county, has introduced in the House of Assembly a bill that ought to become a law. It provides that no holder of a license to sell spirituous, vinous, malt or brewed liquors in quantities less than one quart shall permit the same to be taken from the premises under penalty of revocation of his license.

If this bill becomes a law, as it should, it will cut out "can rushing" in the cities, which even the saloonkeepers consider to be a nuisance, and will especially benefit country districts by stopping flask and bottle trade, which is the cause of depravity among boys; and in communities where there is a board of protectors it would prevent sympathizing friends from carying liquor to drunkards whose names are on the jag list.

Write to your member of Assembly and senator requesting them to support the bill.

CHAPTER II.

I Defend My Property.

FOR ten minutes I stood there staring up at her, completely bewildered and not a little shaken. My first thought had been of ghosts, but it was almost instantly dispelled by a significant action on the part of the suspected wraith. She turned to whistle over her shoulder and to snap her fingers peremptorily, and then she stooped and picked up a rather lusty chow dog, which promptly barked at me across the intervening space, having discovered me almost at once, although I was many rods away and quite snugly ensconced among the shadows. The lady in white muzzled him with her hand, and I could almost imagine I heard her reproving whispers. After a few minutes she apparently forgot the dog and lifted her hand to adjust something in her hair. He again barked at me, quite ferociously for a chow. This time it was quite plain to her that he was not barking at the now shadowy moon. She peered over the stone balustrade and an instant later disappeared from view through the high, narrow window.

Vastly exercised, I set out in quest of Herr Schmick, marshaling Poopendyke as I went along, realizing that I would have to depend on his German, which was less halting than mine and therefore more likely to dovetail with that of the Schmicks, neither of whom spoke German because they loved it, but because they had to, being Austrians. We found the four Schmicks in the vast kitchen.

"Herr Schmick," said I, "will you be so good as to inform me who the dickens that woman is over in the east wing of the castle?"

"Woman, mein herr?" He almost dropped his keys.

"A woman in a white dress, with a dog."

"A dog!" he cried. "But, mein herr, dogs are not permitted to be in the castle."

"Who is she? How did she get there?"

"Heaven defend us, sir! It must have been the ghost of"—

"Ghost, your granny!" I cried, relapsing into English. "Please don't beat about the bush, Mr. Schmick. She's over there in the unused wing, which I haven't been allowed to penetrate in spite of the fact that it belongs to me. You say you can't find the keys to that side of the castle. Will you explain how it is that it is open to strange women and—and dogs?"

"You must be mistaken, mein herr," he whined abjectly. "She cannot be there. She— Ah, I have it! It may have been my wife, Gretel! Have you been in the east"—

"Nonsense!" I cried sharply. "This won't do, Mr. Schmick. Give me that bunch of keys. We'll investigate."

The four Schmicks wrung their hands and shook their heads and then, repairing to the scullery, growled and grumbled for fully ten minutes before deciding to obey my commands. In the meantime I related my experience to Poopendyke and Britton.

"That reminds me, sir," said Britton, "that I found a rag doll in the courtyard yesterday, on that side of the building, sir—I should say castle, sir."

"I am quite sure I heard a baby crying the second night we were here, Mr. Smart," said my secretary nervously.

"Come!" said I finally, grabbing the keys from the old man's unresisting hand. "And, Schmick, if that dog bites I'll hold you personally responsible. Do you understand?"

Two Abreast We Filed Through the Long, Vaulted Halls.

Two abreast we filed through the long, vaulted halls, Rudolph carrying a gigantic lantern and Max a sledge. We traversed extensive corridors, mounted tortuous stairs and came at length to the sturdy oak door that separated the east wing from the west—a huge, formidable thing strengthened by many crosspieces and studded with rusty bolt heads. Padlocks as large as horseshoes, corroded by rust and rendered absolutely impracticable by age, confronted us.

"I have not the keys," said old Conrad Schmick sourly. "This door has not been opened in my time. It is no use."

"It is no use," repeated his grisly sons, leaning against the moldy walls with weary tolerance.

"Smash those padlocks, Max,' I commanded resolutely.

Very reluctantly Max bared his great arms, spit upon his hands and, with pitiful look at his parents, prepared to deal the first blow upon the ancient padlock. But the padlock merely shed a few scabs of rust and rattled back into its customary repose.

"See!" cried Max, triumphantly. "It cannot be broken."

"It is a very fine lock," cried old Conrad, with a note of pride in his voice.

I began to feel some pride in the thing myself. "It is, indeed," I said. "Try once more, Max."

It seemed to me that he struck with a great deal more confidence than before, but without result.

"Give me the hammer," I said in desperation. Max surrendered the clumsy, old fashioned instrument with a grin and I motioned for them all to stand back. Three successive blows with all the might I had in my body failed to shatter the lock, whereupon my choler rose to heights hitherto unknown, I being a very mild mannered, placid person and averse to anything savoring of the tempestuous. I delivered a savage and resounding thwack upon the broad oak panel of the door, regardless of the destructiveness that might attend the effort. If any one had told me that I couldn't splinter an oak board with a sledge hammer at a single blow I should have laughed in his face. But as it turned out in this case I not only failed to split the panel, but broke off the sledge handle near the head, putting it wholly out of commission for the time being as well as stinging my hands so severely that I doubled up with pain.

The Schmicks fairly glowed with joy! Afterward Max informed me that the door was nearly six inches thick and often had withstood the assaults of huge battering rams, back in the dim past when occasion induced the primal baron to seek safety in the east wing, which, after all, appears to have been the real, simon pure fortress.

As we trudged back to the lower halls, defeated, but none the less impressed by our failure to devastate our stronghold, I was struck by the awful barrenness of the surroundings. There suddenly came over me the shocking realization—the "contents" of the castle, as set forth rather vaguely in the bill of sale, were not what I had been led to consider them.

"Herr Schmick," said I, abruptly halting my party in the center of the hall, "what has become of the rugs that were here last week and where is that pile of furniture we had back yonder?"

Old Conrad was not slow in answering.

"The gentlemen called day before yesterday, mein herr, and took much away. They will return tomorrow for the remainder."

"Gentlemen?" I gasped. "Remainder?"

"The gentlemen to whom the herr count sold the rugs and chairs and chests and"—

"What!" I roared. Even Poopendyke jumped at this sudden exhibition of wrath. "Do you mean to tell me that these things have been sold and carried away without my knowledge or consent? I'll have the law"—

Herr Poopendyke intervened. "They had bills of sale and orders for removal of property dated several weeks prior to your purchase, Mr. Smart. We had to let the articles go. You surely remember my speaking to you about it."

"I don't remember anything," I snapped, which was the truth. "Why—why, I bought everything that the castle contained! This is robbery! What the dickens do you mean by"—

Old Conrad held up his hands as if expecting to pacify me. I sputtered out the rest of the sentence, which really amounted to nothing.

"The count has been selling off the lovely old pieces for the past six months, sir. Ach, what a sin! They have come here day after day, these furniture buyers, to take away the most priceless of our treasures, to sell them to the poor rich at twenty prices. I could weep over the sacrifices. I have wept, haven't I, Gretel? Eh, Rudolph? Buckets of tears have I shed, mein herr. Oceans of them. Time after time have I implored him to deny these rascally curio hunters, these bloodsucking"—

"But listen to me," I broke in. "Do you mean to say that articles have been taken away from the castle since I came into possession?"

"Many of them, sir. Always with proper credentials, believe me. Ach, what a spendthrift he is! And his poor wife! Ach, Gott, how she must suffer! Nearly all of the grand paintings, the tapestries that came from France and Italy hundreds of years ago, the wonderful old bedsteads and tables that were here when the castle was new—all gone! And for mere songs, mein herr—the cheapest of songs! I—I"—

"Please don't weep now, Herr Schmick," I made haste to exclaim, seeing lachrymose symptoms in his blear old eyes. Then I became firm once more. This knavery must cease or I'd know the reason why. "The next man who comes here to cart away so much as a single piece is to be kicked out. Do you understand? These things belong to me. Kick him into the river. By Jove, I'd like to wring that rascal's neck! A count! Umph!"

"Ach, he is of the noblest family in all the land!" sighed old Gretel. "His grandfather was a fine man." I contrived to subdue my rage and disappointment and somewhat loudly returned to the topic from which we were drifting.

"As for those beastly padlocks, I shall have them filed off tomorrow. I give you warning, Conrad, if the keys are not forthcoming before noon tomorrow I'll file 'em off, so help me!"

Discussing the Merits of a Dingy Old Spinet.

"They are yours to destroy, mein herr, God knows," said he dismally. "It is a pity to destroy fine old padlocks"—

"Well, you wait and see," said I grimly.

His face beamed once more. "Ach, I forgot to say that there are padlocks on the other side of the door, just as on this side. It will be of no use to destroy these. The door still could not be forced. Mein Gott, how thankful I am to have remembered it in time!"

"Confound you, Schmick! I believe you actually want to keep me out of that part of the castle!" I exploded.

The four of them protested manfully, even Gretel. "I have a plan, sir," said Britton. "Why not place a tall ladder in the courtyard and crawl in through one of the windows?"

"Splendid! That's what we'll do!" I cried enthusiastically. "And now let's go to bed! We will breakfast at 8, Mrs. Schmick. The early bird catches the worm, you know."

"Will you see the American ladies and gentlemen who are coming tomorrow to pick out the"—

"Yes, I'll see them," said I, compressing my lips. "Don't let me oversleep, Britton."

"I shan't sir," said he.

But I did. "Get up, sir, if you please," Britton repeated the third time. "The party of Americans is below, sir, rummaging about the place."

"Where is Poopendyke?" I cried, leaping out of bed.

"Mr. Poopendyke is in despair, sir. He has tried to explain that nothing is for sale, but the gentlemen say they are onto his game. They go right on yanking things about and putting their own prices on them and reserving them."

"I'll—I'll put a stop to all this," I grated, seeing red for an instant.
